Mr. MOTT. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I did not understand the Majority Leader's answer to the question as to what is to be the business for Wednesday.

Mr. RAYBURN. I wanted to proffer two other unanimous-consent requests, and then the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. MICHENER] is going to interrogate me about the program for next week.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, a great many Members are interested in the Private Calendar, especially the individual bills on the Private Calendar that went over at the first of the month. I think we will have time on Wednesday, and I submit this request after consulting with the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MARTIN] before he was called out of town, and the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. MICHENER], and I think it would be all right to call individual bills on the Private Calendar on next Wednesday. It probably will not take more than 45 minutes.

The Committee on Foreign Affairs has some bills that I think we could dispose of after that, and I therefore ask unanimous consent that on next Wednesday the calling of individual bills on the Private Calendar may be in order.

Mr. MILLS of Louisiana. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, can the gentleman inform the House when he expects to take up the Consent Calendar?

Mr. RAYBURN. I am going to submit a unanimous consent request with respect to that matter immediately after this request is acted upon.

Mr. FISH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, has the Foreign Affairs Committee the call on Wednesday next?

Mr. RAYBURN. That is correct, and we think we can take 45 minutes out of that time for the calling of the Private Calendar and then the Foreign Affairs Committee will be called.

Mr. FISH. Does the Committee on Foreign Affairs lose its call?

Mr. RAYBURN. No. We intend to give next Wednesday to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Mr. FISH. The reason I ask that is I would like to be here, but I cannot be here next Wednesday. Of course, I do not have any control over the situation.

Mr. RAYBURN. We cannot put aside Calendar Wednesday business except by unanimous consent.

Mr. FISH. No. I understand that.

Mr. MICHENER. Reserving the right to object, what bills are expected to come up from the Committee on Foreign Affairs?

Mr. RAYBURN. I do not know. It is their day. They have the right to call up any bills they desire.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. RAYBURN]?

There was no objection.

CONSENT CALENDAR

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, we are adjourning over from tomorrow until Wednesday. On Monday the Consent Calendar would be in order. I think it would be proper, and I make this request after consulting with the leadership on the minority side, that the Consent Calendar be called on Thursday.

I ask unanimous consent that that may be done.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, if I may, in answer to the interrogatory of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. MICHENER], the Committee on Rules has reported four or five rules. Some of them are of medium importance and some of them of little importance. I do not think any rule of major importance will be called up on Thursday or Friday of next week. I think the Roosevelt library bill will come up on Thursday or Friday. No other rule of major importance will be taken up on Thursday or Friday.

Mr. BRADLEY of Pennsylvania. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAYBURN. I yield.

Mr. BRADLEY of Pennsylvania. Can the gentleman tell us whether or not the rule involving the National Labor Relations Board will be called up?

Mr. RAYBURN. I do not think so. No.

Mr. FISH. May I propound an inquiry to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SABATH], chairman of the Rules Committee? I have just learned that the gentleman from Illinois will handle the Roosevelt library bill. I have been designated to handle it for the minority. I would like to see if we cannot have an understanding that that bill would be taken up on next Friday. My family is sailing on Thursday and I would like to be here to handle that bill in opposition to the distinguished chairman of the Rules Committee.

Mr. SABATH. I will be more than pleased to accommodate the gentleman from New York. If that meets with the approval of the majority leader and the Speaker, it will be satisfactory to me.

Mr. RAYBURN. That will be perfectly satisfactory.

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Speaker, further reserving the right to object, the understanding is that on tomorrow there will be no important business, as I understand the Majority Leader?

Mr. RAYBURN. That is the intention. I cannot conceive of anything that may come up tomorrow.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted to Mr. BULWINKLE, for 7 days, on account of personal business.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. WHITE of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks and print in the RECORD a story from the Cleveland Press referring to some material I have placed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. DITTER. Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HOFFMAN], I ask unanimous consent that he be permitted to revise and extend the remarks he made this afternoon.

The SPEAKER. Without objection it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend the remarks I made this afternoon and include therein a few brief quotations from a number of publications.

The SPEAKER. Without objection it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. GEYER of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a letter written to the New York Times.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED

H. J. Res. 345. Joint resolution providing an appropriation for the month of July 1939, for the Petroleum Conservation Division, Department of the Interior.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 11 o'clock and 29 minutes p. m.), the House adjourned until tomorrow, Saturday, July 1, 1939, at 12 o'clock noon.

COMMITTEE HEARINGS

COMMITTEE ON MERCHANT MARINE AND FISHERIES

The Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries will hold public hearings in room 219, House Office Building, at 10 a. m., on the bills and dates listed below:

There will be a meeting of the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries at 10 a. m. Tuesday, July 11, 1939, for the consideration of H. R. 6881, to implement the provisions of the Shipowners' Liability (sick and injured seamen) Convention, 1936.

The notice of June 27, 1939, advised that public hearings would be held on Tuesday, July 11, 1939, at 10 a. m. (E. S. T.) on H. R. 6881, a bill to implement the provisions of the Shipowners' Liability (sick and injured seamen) Convention, 1936.

On the same day hearings will be held on H. R. 6726, a bill to amend the Merchant Marine Act, 1936, as amended, to provide compensation for disability or death resulting from injury to officers and members of the crew of vessels under the jurisdiction of the United States, and for other purposes. It has been decided to hold hearings jointly on these bills because of the relation between the two.

COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY

On Wednesday, July 5, 1939, beginning at 10 a. m., there will be continued a public hearing before the Committee on the Judiciary on the bill (H. R. 6369) to amend the act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States," approved July 1, 1898, and acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto; to create a Railroad Reorganization Court; and for other purposes.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

SATURDAY, JULY 1, 1939

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, our Jehovah Father, we praise Thee that Thou didst reveal Thyself in light and love in the advent of our Lord and in the sermon when He took the mountain for His pulpit, teaching us the eternal truths of fatherhood and brotherhood. Be pleased to accept our deepest gratitude for those strong and noble men who caught the light and felt the power which gave birth to our immortal Declaration of Independence courageous in its denunciation of the wrong and clear in its declaration of the rights of man. We beseech Thee that all American citizens may zealously strive to fulfill its ageless principles. Heavenly Father, we offer Thee our devout prayer for the rich blessings of rest and strength to abide with our most worthy Speaker, all Members, officers, and employees. God be with us 'til we meet again. In the dear Redeemer's name. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

S. 2236. An act for the relief of Benjamin F. Longenecker;

S. 2316. An act for the relief of Emil Navratil;

S. 2336. An act to authorize an exchange of lands at the Fort Francis E. Warren Military Reservation, Wyo.;

S. 2350. An act to amend the act of Congress approved May 3, 1935, entitled "An act to promote safety on the public highways of the District of Columbia by providing for the financial responsibility of owners and operators of motor vehicles for damages caused by motor vehicles on the public highways in the District of Columbia; to prescribe penalties for the violation of the provisions of this act; and for other purposes";

S. 2370. An act for the relief of Corinne W. Bienvenu (nee Corinne Wells);

S. 2399. An act for the relief of certain former employees of the Farm Security Administration; and

S. 2467. An act authorizing cash relief for certain employees of the War and Navy Departments in the Canal Zone not coming within the provisions of the Civil Service Retirement Act.

The SPEAKER. The Chair desires the indulgence of the House to make a personal statement.

It is realized that we have been in continuous session now for 6 months and it has been a rather arduous, strenuous session of the House. Under our system of government, the Speaker of the House cannot make visits of recreation or take a rest, except by the indulgence of the Membership. I must confess I am a little bit tired. Next week will not be a tremendously heavy week, so far as our legislative program is concerned, and I have therefore requested the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. DOUGHTON] to introduce a resolution which will give me a short leave of absence.

APPOINTMENT OF SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I submit a resolution and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution as follows:

House Resolution 240

Resolved, That Hon. SAM RAYBURN, a Representative from the State of Texas, be, and he is hereby, elected Speaker pro tempore during the absence of the Speaker.

Resolved, That the President and the Senate be notified by the Clerk of the election of Hon. SAM RAYBURN as Speaker pro tempore during the absence of the Speaker.

The resolution was agreed to.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. LUTHER A. JOHNSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the Record and to include therein a statement given to the press this morning by Secretary of State Cordell Hull.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas, Mr. LUTHER A. JOHNSON?

There was no objection.

PINEY BRANCH PARKWAY

Mr. DEROUEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill (H. R. 6938) be referred to the Committee on the Public Lands to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. DEROUEN]?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include a poem written by one of my constituents in honor of the late Will Rogers.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. ROGERS]?

There was no objection.

Mr. GEYER of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD on the subject of veterans' legislation.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California [Mr. GEYER]?

There was no objection.

THE LATE DOUGLAS JOHNSON, GOVERNOR OF THE CHICKASAW INDIAN NATION

Mr. BOREN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. BOREN]?

There was no objection.

Mr. BOREN. Mr. Speaker, I rise at this time to announce the death of Gov. Douglas Johnson, for almost half a century Governor of the Chickasaw Indian Nation. He was one of the greatest Indian leaders of all time, a man long and favorably known in Washington. He was a builder of our great State of Oklahoma, and a man of great wisdom and strong character. His death will be universally mourned not only by the members of his own tribe but by every citizen of the State of Oklahoma.

Governor Johnson was the last tribal governor to be elected by the Chickasaw Nation and served more than 41 of his 83 years in the official service of the Indians. As his body lies in state in the capital of the State of Oklahoma and again in the capital of the Chickasaw Nation at Tishomingo, there rises before us the record of his devoted service to the Chickasaw Tribe and his great contribution to the welfare of Oklahoma. He is deeply and sincerely mourned, and as his deeds have already made for him an immortal place in the history of Oklahoma so has his great and generous character touched with immortality his memory in the minds and hearts of all who knew him personally.

Governor Johnson was my personal friend, and it has been my privilege to work with him and to know that he was steadfast toward his responsibilities and as constant in his vigilance for service as a guard standing watch in the night. It was mine somewhat to share his thoughts, his hopes, his plans, and endeavors, and though one star differs from another in its particular glory, no son of Oklahoma deserves more certainly a star of eternal remembrance.

The sturdy strength of the Johnson family has not alone been confined to this great man but has given to us a first lady beloved in Oklahoma—consort to an able maker of history worthy of favored recording—and many other builders of progress and permanency for democracy, for Oklahoma, and for America, and it is my wish that the almighty and most merciful God will grant unto their sorrowing hearts the consolation of faith and the blessedness of peace in the contemplation of the immortal continuation of his deeds and endeavors.

The passing of such a man from our midst bids us pause and measure each for himself the duty he owes to a common country. The recollecting thought of him carries its associations of recent days relived, when he felt dawn, saw sunset glow. Impatient time has led him beyond the shore and in our common language he is dead, but his life lives forever in the finest traditions of America. The single rule of service and self-sacrifice animated and controlled his heart, directed and determined all his actions. We might well meditate upon such noble and exemplary lives. The memory of his loyalty to our institutions and our ideals will remain our inspiration and his benediction.

Out of the past and into the future come and go the children of men. Some leave examples we may emulate. The memory of their worth and work is an encouraging and uplifting contemplation. It is our good fortune to live in the time of men like Governor Johnson, and still more fortunate in the privilege of intimate acquaintance. I say good-bye with appreciative recollection for such a friend.

Good-bye, good friend;
In God's good time,
In God's good clime,
We'll meet again.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. LEWIS of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks at this point in the RECORD and to include therein an article concerning Gen. Malin Craig, pointing out his distinguished service in his position as Chief of Staff, from which he retired yesterday.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. LEWIS]?

There was no objection.

Mr. LEWIS of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, yesterday Gen. Malin Craig, Chief of Staff, relinquished to Brig. Gen. George Catlett Marshall, his deputy and successor, the onerous duties of head of the United States Army, subordinate only to the Commander in Chief. On August 31, after a vacation on leave, he will go on the retired list.

General Craig's distinguished career is summarized as follows in Who's Who in America, 1938-39 edition, volume 20:

CRAIG, Malin, army officer; b. St. Joseph, Mo., Aug. 5, 1875; s. Maj. Louis Aleck and Georgie (Malin) C.; grad. U. S. Mil. Acad., Apr. 26, 1898; honor grad. Inf. and Cav. Sch. 1904; grad. Army Staff Coll., 1905; Army War Coll., 1910; m. Genevieve Woodruff, of Berkeley, Calif., Apr. 29, 1901; 1 son, Malin. Comm'd. 2d Lt. 4th Inf., Apr. 26, 1898; trans. to 4th Cav., June 23, 1898; promoted through grades to brig. gen., Apr. 28, 1921; maj. gen., July 24, 1924; general, October 2, 1935; served as Lieut. colonel, colonel and brigadier general, World War. In Santiago Campaign from June 12, 1898, China Relief Expedition, June-Oct. 1900; a. d. c. to Brig. Gen. Barry, in Philippines, 1900-01, to Gen. Bell, 1902-04; again in Philippines, 1907-09; duty Gen. Staff Corps, 1910-12, 1917-19; arrived in France, Oct. 5, 1917; apptd. comdr. 166th Brigade Inf., 83d Div., 4th Army Corps, A. E. F., July 20, 1918; chief of staff 41st Div., Aug. 25, 1917-Jan. 19, 1918, chief of staff 1st Corps, Jan. 20, 1918-Nov. 12, 1918; chief of staff 3d Army, Nov. 13, 1918-July 2, 1919; apptd. dir. Gen. Staff Coll., Washington, D. C., 1919; comdg. Dist. of Ariz., 1920-21, comdt. Cav. Sch., Ft. Riley, Kan., Sept. 1, 1921-July 1, 1923; comdg. Coast Defenses, Manila and Subig Bay, Sept. 17, 1923–July 10, 1924; maj. gen., chief of cav., July 24, 1925, asst. chief of staff U. S. A., Mar. 21, 1926; comdg. 4th Corps Area, Apr. 2–Oct. 5, 1927; comdg. Panama Canal Div., Oct. 13, 1927–Mar. 31, 1928; comdg. Panama Canal Dept., Apr. 1, 1928–Aug. 10, 1930; comdg. 9th Corps Area, Oct. 13, 1930–Jan. 24, 1935, 4th Army, Oct. 3, 1933–Jan. 24, 1935; comdg. Army War Coll., Feb. 3, 1935–Oct. 1, 1935; chief of staff, U. S. Army since Oct. 2, 1935. Decorated D. S. M. (U. S.); Comdr. Legion of Honor, Croix de Guerre with 2 Palms (French); Companion of Bath (British); Comdr. La Couronne (Belgian); Crown of Italy; Estrella de Abdon Calderon, 1st Class (Ecuador). Address: War Dept., Washington, D. C.

During the 4 years in which General Craig has been Chief of Staff, he has completely won the admiration, esteem, and confidence of both Houses of the Congress and of the individual Members. The result has been that appropriate legislation, much of it long delayed, supplemented by necessary appropriations, has been gladly enacted. Many serious defects in our scheme of national defense have been rectified. Mere ideas on paper have been transformed into actualities. Much of this is due not only to General Craig's wisdom and the soundness of his plans but also to his personality.

In the New York Times for June 30, 1939, appeared the following editorial. Although not agreeing in every particular with all of the details of the report of General Craig, it includes a richly deserved tribute to his ability and the high character of his services:

[From the New York Times of June 30, 1939]

GENERAL CRAIG'S VALEDICTORY

Distinguished by clarity of thought and precision of phrase, the report of the Chief of Staff of the Army, published today, is General Craig's valedictory on the eve of his retirement from the service he has loved and served so well these 45 years. The retiring Chief of Staff has used the occasion to recapitulate the state of readiness of the Army, to detail those things which have been done, and to define those things which he believes remain to be done.

With General Craig's desire for the acquisition of a wartime reserve of critical items of armament and equipment there can be little disagreement, and with his appeal for the transformation of a considerable part of the Regular Army into a mobile, well-trained force, available for "instant" action, there can be no dispute in principle. The Army of today is far from any such state of readiness; a force such as General Craig describes (though not necessarily of five divisions) is essential to our scheme of defense. But it is questionable whether the mere addition of more men would provide such a force; indeed, it is questionable whether more men are needed for this purpose.

A further increase in the Army, coming, as the suggestion does, on the heels of the greatest peacetime appropriations for national defense in history, is not justified, if more economical and equally satisfactory means of achieving the same result can be found. It would seem that a considerably more economical army, certainly one more efficient and better trained, might be created by a thorough administrative and tactical reorganization, the abolition of many small army posts (the retention of which General Craig now advocates in his report), the transfer of many desks now staffed by Army personnel to civil-service employees, the merging of other overlapping duties, the elimination of much duplication and red tape, and the concentration in central training areas for long periods of large bodies of Regular Army troops. With much taking of pains, a "small, seasoned, hard-hitting" force could well be created within the present framework of the Army and without the addition of more men.

General Craig rightly stresses the value of time in preparations for defense, wisely calls attention to the "analogous duties and missions" of the Coast and Field Artillery, and invites attention to the possible merging of these two artillery arms. This report—the reasoned analysis of a devoted and shrewd officer—should be widely read and the recommendations it advances carefully considered.

THE LATE DOUGLAS JOHNSON, GOVERNOR OF THE CHICKASAW INDIAN NATION

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. RANKIN]?

There was no objection.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I wish to join the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. BOREN] in paying my tribute to Governor Johnson, who was titular chief of the Chickasaw Indians.

For years I worked with Governor Johnson in the interest of perpetuating the history of the Chickasaw Tribe, which formerly occupied the ground on which my people now live. I have said in this House before, and I repeat today, that the Chickasaw Indians were the best friends the white people of America ever had at a time when they were in trouble and needed friends.

More than 200 years ago, when the French attempted to connect their holdings in Canada and Louisiana, and take possession of the western half of this continent, it was the Chickasaw Indians who stopped them at the Battle of Ackia. During the War of 1812, when we were in a desperate situation, when our armies had been defeated in the North, when this Capitol and the White House had been burned by a ruthless enemy, it was the Chickasaw and Choctaw Indians under the leadership of Push-mah-tah-hah, Chief of the Choctaws, who was himself of Chickasaw descent, who came to our assistance. He lined up those two tribes of Indians, opened up their territories, joined Andrew Jackson and marched with him to New Orleans, where, with their assistance, he won the most brilliant victories ever won in America up to that time.

Governor Johnson was a great man. He was the head of a tribe of Indians to whom we owe a lasting debt of gratitude. He was my friend; he had often expressed a desire to have me elected an honorary member of his tribe, as an expression of gratitude for my services in helping to establish the Ackia Battlefield Park as a memorial to the Chickasaws for their services to this country. It was his heart's desire to help dedicate that park—a dream he never lived to realize.

I join with the gentleman from Oklahoma, with the Chickasaw Indians, with the people of Oklahoma, and the people of America, in mourning the passing of this great American.

NATIONAL DEFENSE AND THE AVIATION INDUSTRY

Mr. CHURCH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

Mr. CHURCH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks in the RECORD and include therein an article appearing in the Chicago Tribune of June 28, also a signed memorandum from Mr. Louis A. Dumond, manager of the industrial department of the Chicago Association of Commerce.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

Mr. CHURCH. Mr. Speaker, last Tuesday, June 27, I had the privilege of discussing somewhat at length on the floor of the House the present vulnerable location of our airplane factories on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. It will be recalled that I emphasized the fact that the strategy in modern warfare, since the development of long-range bombers and aircraft carriers, is to destroy the key industries of the enemy so that it would be unable to defend itself. There is no question but that any attack upon us will be focused on our aviation industries which are concentrated on the coasts.

It is thus important, indeed imperative, that if we are to erect an impregnable national defense, giving the people a complete guaranty of security, that we encourage the location of our aviation industries inland. Industries themselves will have to recognize the importance of this fact, and it is for the Federal Government and the inland communities to lend their aid and encouragement.

I am pleased to say I already have evidence of the desire of our people, through their civic, industrial, and business organizations, to afford the country their assistance in this matter. Col. Robert McCormick, publisher of the Chicago Daily Tribune, has indicated his interest and willingness to lend the columns of his great newspaper to this program for the location of airplane factories inland. He very generously called public attention to the thesis of my speech last Tuesday in an article which summarizes my remarks even better than I myself could summarize them.

I have therefore asked unanimous consent, Mr. Speaker, that this article appearing in the Chicago Tribune of June 28 be placed in the RECORD at this point and be made a part of these brief remarks.

Subsequently I have received from Mr. Louis A. Dumond, manager of the industrial department of the Chicago Association of Commerce, a signed memorandum in which he carefully outlines the great advantages to be found in the city of Chicago for the location of aviation industries at that city. You and I recognize that many factors, such as availability of skilled labor, transportation facilities, weather conditions, and so forth, determine the advisability of an industry location at a particular place. This memorandum discusses those factors, and it goes on to show that advantages and facilities of Chicago give assurance of success to any aviation industry that would locate there.

I have therefore asked unanimous consent, Mr. Speaker, that this memorandum be inserted in the RECORD at this point.

It is true I am greatly interested in Chicago and all other Illinois communities. But, Mr. Speaker, the fact that we in Illinois may benefit by the location of airplane factories in our State is only incidental to the all-important fact in my mind that the country as a whole will benefit by having a stronger national defense.

The matters referred to follow:

[From the Chicago Tribune of June 28, 1939]

CHURCH ADVISES PLANE FACTORIES BE MOVED INLAND—POINTS OUT DANGERS OF ATTACK ON COASTS

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 27.—The vulnerable location of the Nation's airplane factories on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts was called to the attention of the House today by Representative RALPH E. CHURCH (Republican, Illinois).

In approving the expenditure for national defense of billions of dollars, including hundreds of millions for the construction of new planes, Congress has neglected to note, CHURCH said, that most of the planes will be manufactured in factories particularly vulnerable to attack from foreign powers.

SUGGEST BRANCHES IN INTERIOR

The Illinois Congressman advised the owners of the airplane plants to locate branch plants in the interior of the country. The Government should give these owners every possible encouragement to do so and it should also encourage the few small airplane industries to move inland, he declared.

"The site for an aviation research laboratory should be selected in the interior," CHURCH said, asserting that the mere location of research facilities inland would itself give encouragement to the development of aviation industries in the interior.

"All our principal aviation industries are now located on the east and west coasts," CHURCH told members. "It is axiomatic that these industries are vital to the successful conduct of war against any aggressor. They are today, and even more 10 or 15 years from now, 'key facilities' essential to insure sustained resistance and ultimate victory."

READS LIST OF MANUFACTURERS

CHURCH read a list of airplane manufacturers and the location of their factories. Only 4 relatively small establishments are in the interior in comparison with 16 large plants on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts, he noted.

"It can hardly be disputed," he said, "that if any nation should attack us, it will concentrate its attack on our airdromes and airplane factories. As long as they are concentrated on the coasts, they are a ready prey. An important element in military strategy is surprise. It has always been an important element; and there is no one who can dispute the fact that coastal towns and factories are susceptible to surprise."

"There is no question but that this concentration of our aviation industries on the coasts makes us vulnerable to an enemy. On that fact every student of military strategy and tactics is agreed."

OCEANS NOT SURE DEFENSE

"It is true that the Pacific and Atlantic Oceans make it extremely difficult for any foreign nation to launch attack upon us. At the present time I do not believe any nation or group of nations would hazard such an attack. At the same time, we do not know what the situation will be 10 or 15 years from now."

"We do not know what new advancement will be made in the range and speed of bombing planes, what nations may chance to obtain air bases in South America, or what alliance of nations may attack us on both the east and west coast at the same time with planes flown from aircraft carriers. Those are the possibilities and contingencies we must take into consideration and be prepared for national-defense program."

"An impregnable national defense involves long-range planning, guarding against every aggression possibility, and correcting every point of vulnerability. We are undertaking all this not in preparation for a war but rather in preparation against all possible attacks."

DISCUSSES RECENT CONTRACT

Recently, CHURCH said, the War Department awarded a $15,000,000 contract to the Douglas Aircraft Co., of Santa Monica, Calif., for building several of the latest type of bombing ships.

"Bombers have hitherto had to rely on an escort of pursuit planes to protect them from the enemy aircraft much as a battleship must rely on its auxiliary craft as it seeks out a naval objective," he continued. "It is my information, however, that this new type of plane combines the speed of the attack plane with the carrying ability of the bomber."

"I call attention to this War Department contract award because it emphasizes two significant facts: First, an altogether new type of plane is to be made, thus emphasizing the rapid strides being made in aircraft as an instrument of aggression and defense; second, the company which is to make the plane is located in the coastal State California, thus emphasizing the vulnerability to enemy attack of the very industries so vital to sustained resistance in modern warfare from armed aggression."

JUNE 28, 1939.

Memorandum for Hon. RALPH E. CHURCH.

Subject: Aviation-production industry.

FACTORS AFFECTING LOCATION OF AIRCRAFT PLANTS

1. Weather: Conditions for flying—fog, rain, snow, and heat.
2. Labor: (a) Skilled; (b) favorable wage rates; (c) open-shop situation; (d) abundant supply; (e) steady and dependable.
3. Living conditions: (a) Cheap; (b) available housing; (c) agreeable community conditions—schools, climate, social life, etc.
4. Materials used in manufacture: (a) Raw—can be assembled here economically; (b) processed—related products manufactured in nearby plants.
5. Transportation: (a) Railroads; (b) freight rates; (c) water; (d) trucking; (e) special advantages at this location.
6. Power and fuel: (a) Cost of power, availability, and dependability.
7. Financial aid or investments: (a) Aid—credit assistance, if any; (b) investment—of local capital; (c) inducements, viz, free taxes, free sites, free rent of buildings, or other forms of bonus given gratis to the firm.
8. Factory buildings: (a) Available buildings at favorable terms.
9. Laws: (a) Labor and other laws are favorable.
10. Taxes: (a) Taxes compare favorably with other large cities.
11. Related industries: Plants in Chicago include almost every conceivable product which might be used in manufacture of airplanes.
12. Airports and air-line traffic.
13. Markets: (a) Can be reached economically from Chicago.
14. Miscellaneous: (a) Banking facilities; (b) cheap land; (c) cheap rent; (d) personal reasons, such as desire to live in the community in relation to other things.
15. Other points to consider: (a) Nearness to aviation posts; (b) technical training schools; (c) universities.

NOTE.—General headquarters at Belleville, Ill.; also field at Chanute Field, Rantoul.

(See following for explanatory notes.)

On March 1, 1939, Col. Louis Johnson, Assistant Secretary of War, addressing the business interests of Chicago, at the Palmer House, pointed out some of the things Chicagoans could do and what he felt would have to be done to make our activities with reference to aviation production industries effective.

Colonel Johnson stressed the fact that nearly all the military airplanes produced in the United States are manufactured in our seacoast industrial centers, and therefore more readily accessible in case of attack than if those plants were located in this State. Airplane factories along the seacoasts are considered vulnerable if the country should become involved in war. Inland plants, Colonel Johnson pointed out, would have certain natural protection which seacoast cities do not have. This has suggested to military authorities and experts the advisability of encouraging airplane construction in that part of the country between the Pacific and the Atlantic mountain ranges.

"We know exactly where we are going to spend every cent that will be appropriated for national defense in the aviation industry," Colonel Johnson said, "and as we sign the contracts with the airplane manufacturers we are telling them: 'Get yourselves established inside the country's mountain ranges.'"

He also pointed out that 90 percent of the country's present productive sources have their plants in positions exposed to destruction of coastal air raids in case of war. "We are consequently telling them to follow the General Headquarters Air Force inland. The War Department chose Scott Field, at Belleville, Ill., as the headquarters for general headquarters for no other purpose than strategic reasons," and "Illinois would be a good State for airplane builders," he said.

Also, he stated, "We cannot, however, say to any manufacturer that he should settle in Chicago. The job of getting airplane builders to locate in your city is up to Chicagoans."

These preliminary observations made briefly from notes gathered in considering this subject are submitted for what they may be worth. According to an airplane manufacturer, it is understood that aircraft engineers seeking a new location for an aircraft plant would examine, among other factors, the following:

Weather: To those seeking manufacturing locations for airplane building are sent stories of wonderful weather conditions in other parts of the country and its effect upon manufacturing. All sorts of claims are made that weather in the northern area is liable to set up dreadful results. Most of the stories, when analyzed, are merely fancies. In every case it will be found that these claims are, as Mark Twain once remarked upon the report of his death, "greatly exaggerated."

As a matter of fact, weather conditions in any given locality should not be a determining factor in the establishment of a plant. Admittedly, a beautiful June day makes a favorable flying day—but planes must be flown every day in the year, in every kind of weather, and consequently tests are required in every circumstance, favorable and adverse.

The United States Department of Agriculture summary for Chicago records only 10 days of dense fog in 1938, whereas at Los Angeles there were 27 days. The greatest daily temperature range at Chicago in 1938 was 39 degrees. Chicago's uncommonly favorable climatic conditions and its excellent facilities for the operation of Canadian, transoceanic, and other seaplane service are among the most important factors which make Chicago a suitable location for large-scale aircraft operations.

Further, Chicago weather is working weather; that may account in no small degree for the amount of work done—as evidenced by our vast factory production.

Interference in testing ships on account of unfavorable weather conditions will be exceedingly slight. On the average, both winter and summer temperatures are moderate, conducive to the highest efficiency in manufacturing, and ships can be flown and tested every day of the year with but few exceptions. The hazards and difficulties arising from a weather standpoint in making winter tests and demonstrations is not greater here than in other locations.

It can be said without fear of contradiction that pilots have no hesitancy making test flights at any time during the winter months in this region. Good flying conditions prevail on the average, and for these and other climatic reasons unusually high production results offer favorable possibilities from a manufacturing production basis.

Labor: Chicago possesses, perhaps to a better degree than any other large community in the country, a large volume of skilled workers, experienced as machine operators and adapted to aircraft industries. This will prove a vital factor in planning and maintaining large production schedules.

In these days when so much uncertainty exists in the minds of employers everywhere as to whether their property rights will be maintained, in the face of strikes and other official and unofficial manifestations, it is important to consider the location of production facilities in a center where there is reasonable prospect of being able to maintain employment relations on a sound basis and protect property rights should outside attempts be made to disrupt production. We feel that Chicago can assure aircraft manufacturers in this regard, and point to the fact that throughout the past several years no disturbances of major character have occurred in the Chicago district.

Because of its location, its transportation advantages, and its close proximity to an unusually large variety of raw materials, Chicago has naturally developed industrially a wider range of different types of manufacturing than can be found in almost any other industrial center. From the labor viewpoint, therefore, this simply means that we have here in abundance every class and kind of labor trained and skilled in the multiplicity of operations so that manufacturers in the Chicago area never have to train labor for particular operations, with the increased cost that such training involves. All that manufacturers have to do is to put an ad in the newspapers specifying the type and kind of labor desired, and make selections from among the applicants who apply.

Labor rates exhibit considerable variation as might be expected from the great diversification of industries existing in this section. Common labor receives from a minimum of 40 cents per hour all the way up to 60 cents per hour. Typical common-labor rates paid by large manufacturers are 40 cents, 42 cents, 44 cents, 45 cents, and 48 cents. Skilled mechanics and all-around machinists receive from 75 cents to 90 cents per hour. Tool and die makers, depending upon the character and accuracy of the work to be performed, receive from 90 cents to $1.25 per hour, and on specialized work depending upon ingenuity and ability some workers receive higher rates.

The above statements, while not inclusive, will give an idea of the present wage rates being paid in the Chicago district. It should be mentioned that with the exception of textile industries, and in part printing and publishing, and foundry industries, general manufacturing is on the open-shop basis. Such typical concerns as the Crane Co., International Harvester Co., Illinois Steel Co., Western Electric Co., and the Pullman Co., to mention just a few, operate their plants on the open-shop plan.

To sum up, labor in the Chicago district is highly dependable, steady, and available in large supply, and it is worth noting that if the capital-goods industries ever get into peak-capacity operations the result would surely determine a shortage of skilled mechanics, in which event plants in this area would enjoy a labor condition superior to that obtaining in any smaller community.

Finally, labor conditions in Chicago are most favorable in every respect for aviation production, and the large labor market is an attraction which deserves to be emphasized strongly.

Airplane companies: At present Chicago is represented in the aviation field by one small company, the Howard Aircraft Corporation, headed by Ben O. Howard, noted designer of racing ships. This company was incorporated in 1936 and has not engaged in the production of airplanes on a quantity basis. No military planes have been produced. In addition to planes, the company manufactures service parts for certain air lines.

Geographical location: Chicago's geographical location with its remarkable potential markets presents a real manufacturing advantage obtainable in no other city in the country, and which, in the final analysis, contributes in a large measure to determine the most economical point of operation in the entire country. This means that an aircraft plant located in the Chicago district is assured of a competitive advantage, because of concentrated markets, concentrated raw and semifinished materials, and short-haul transportation. Also, the cooperating activities of the industry in all its phases is already centered in this section and it is evident the future of the aviation industry and related activities in general are due to be concentrated in the Chicago area.

Contributing factors: The Chicago area has approximately 10,000 manufacturing plants, producing nearly every conceivable article that goes into the making of an airplane. This results in the concentration of items to be used and which are available on short notice. At any time or season a manufacturer of aircraft can confidently look to secure any of the parts needed without delay and at lowest cost.

Government fields and training: A fact to be considered in the locating of plants is the nearness of Government aviation posts—at Rantoul, Ill., and the G. H. Q. at Belleville, Ill. Also, it should be noted that Dr. Walter Dill Scott, president of Northwestern University, is definitely interested in becoming a part of the Government's expanded aviation research program.

This is another step for developing a constructive air program and helping to put Chicago in the forefront as a prospective training center in cooperation with its universities.

While Chicago is not prepared to offer free inducements of land, remission of taxes, bonuses and other considerations gratis, there are so many advantages and facilities offered to manufacturers locating in the Chicago district which will in the long run result in greater efficiency and more economical operation. Of these advantages the following are a few: Kindred manufacturing lines, great rail center and transportation advantages, plentiful raw and semifinished products that will go into the manufacture of airplanes. Also, most of the air-line companies are located in Chicago and the greatest air-traffic flow is at this point.

It has been said in amusing vein that Chicago would have to work hard because if the truth be told most of the aircraft plants have been located where the headmen like to live, and most of the latter like to live on the west coast. This observation is quite plausible and reechoes what Mr. Joseph Hartson, vice president of the Glen Martin, at Baltimore, is reported to have said, that so far as he knew the Martin plant in Baltimore is the only one he had knowledge of in which the location was determined after a thorough economic survey.

There is no serious question as to the feasibility of Chicago to fit into the aviation-production picture, and of the advantages and facilities afforded in Chicago, which give reasonable and sound assurance of success for the aircraft industry.

Very sincerely yours,

LOUIS A. DUMOND,
Manager, Industrial Department.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. THILL asked and was given permission to extend his own remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. HAWKS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include therein an article by Leonard P. Ayres, Lending Our Way to Prosperity.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin?

There was no objection.

Mr. MARTIN of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and include therein certain excerpts from a hearing before the Senate Committee on Finance.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Iowa?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on Thursday next, after the disposition of the business on the Speaker's desk and at the conclusion of the legislative program of the day, I may be permitted to address the House for 20 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from South Dakota?

There was no objection.

W. P. A. WORKERS

Mr. SPARKMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

Mr. SPARKMAN. Mr. Speaker, we have frequently heard criticism of W. P. A. workers and of their unwillingness to take private employment. I sometimes have joined in that criticism.

I wish to call the attention of the House to a situation that has recently arisen in my section of the State of Alabama, resulting from a long series of rains causing the farmers to get badly behind in their work. The W. P. A. workers in all the counties in my district volunteered their services and removed themselves from the W. P. A. rolls temporarily to assist the farmers in that section to work out their crops. This action on the part of the W. P. A. workers has caused a great deal of favorable comment, and I believe proper notice should be taken of it.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SPARKMAN. I yield to the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. RANKIN. That action on the part of the W. P. A. workers was voluntary on their part?

Mr. SPARKMAN. It was voluntary; yes.

Mr. RANKIN. They volunteered to help the farmers work out their crops?

Mr. SPARKMAN. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SPARKMAN. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I am thankful to the gentleman for bringing this up. I could match his testimony with evidences of a similar sort from my district and section of the country where W. P. A. workers in connection with flood and similar emergencies have performed most important services to the community. I personally wish we might have had more discussion of that side of the W. P. A. before we acted on measures affecting it in the House.

Mr. SPARKMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks in the RECORD by including therein brief articles from three different papers in my district relative to this matter.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

The matter referred to follows:

FARMERS' CROP CRISIS SOLVED—MORE W. P. A. VOLUNTEERS THAN NEEDED FOR WORK IN FIELDS

Madison County's crop crisis appeared to be a thing of the past today, thanks to the cooperation of W. P. A. workers, who have volunteered to accept employment in the fields at a wage lower than what they were making on W. P. A. projects.

The board of commissioners, at a special meeting this morning, was told by W. P. A. supervisors and C. M. Cox, director of the local office of the Alabama State Employment Service, that "the problem has been solved agreeably."

Mr. Cox said more volunteers than were needed had stepped forward at each request, and that an additional survey among farmers brought reports "that the W. P. A. workers did more in 10 hours than our regular hands did in 12 hours."

Mr. Cox and R. H. Shelton, superintendent of W. P. A. operations in the county, estimated between 500 and 600 men had switched from W. P. A. work to farm labor, to help farmers get their cotton out of the grass.

C. O. Mann, commissioner from the third district, where a considerable amount of unrest and dissatisfaction had occurred, reported "everything is working out smoothly."

Similar reports were received from other commissioners and from W. P. A. supervisors.

It was estimated that with another week of fair weather, every farmer in the county will have his crop in excellent condition.

Mr. Shelton asked the supervisors to continue their efforts to help the farmers "until this situation is cleared up."

After hearing the reports on the farm-labor problem, the board adopted the following resolutions:

"Whereas the weather conditions had seriously hampered the farmers of Madison County and there was a need for additional emergency labor, and this need was brought before W. P. A. officials;

"Whereas W. P. A. workers were assigned to agricultural work, and some friction over the method of assignment developed; and

"Whereas the board of commissioners of Madison County requested W. P. A. officials to remove the compulsory assignments and place it on a volunteer basis: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Madison County board of commissioners wishes to thank the W. P. A. officials, W. P. A. supervisors, and the W. P. A. workers for their spirit of cooperation in solving this difficult situation; be it further

Resolved, That this board extends a vote of thanks to the farmers for their spirit of fair play and friendly cooperation; be it also

Resolved, That the board extends a vote of thanks to the Alabama State employment service for the assistance rendered by their Mr. Cox."

[From the Decatur (Ala.) Daily of June 27, 1939]

W. P. A. WORKERS AID FARMERS

Releasing of W. P. A. employees with farm experience to farmers of Morgan County has proved a great help in combating weeds and grass caused to grow in profusion by weeks of rain, B. G. Hall, county agent, stated today.

The county agent said 13 farmers had asked for 78 men from the W. P. A. rolls. These had been supplied and the work had been satisfactory.

A small percentage of crops were lost in some sections of the county before the call for help was sent in to the W. P. A.

The situation in Morgan County is not as serious as in some others of this area. In Limestone County 600 men were released to farmers by the W. P. A., there were more than 400 in Lauderdale County, and others had large numbers.

Mr. Hall said today boll weevils had been reported on a farm in the Austinville area, but added he did not believe the infestation would be heavy.

[From the Tri-Cities Daily, Sheffield, Ala., June 26, 1939]

FARMERS HELPED OUT OF THE GRASS BY W. P. A. WORKERS—PROBLEM OF SALVAGING CROPS AS RESULT OF EXTENSIVE RAINS IS BIG ONE

With heavy rains throughout Alabama causing considerable damage to crops and holding up work in the fields, allowing grass to get a large headway in crops, farmers have already made appeals for additional labor and the appeals reaching the offices of the Works Progress Administration in Montgomery have brought about a whole-hearted movement of cooperation from officials of the W. P. A. in allowing project workers to hire out to those farmers in need of additional labor to cope with grass and the problem of salvaging crops as a result of the extensive rains.

In a statement issued recently, Col. W. G. Henderson, Alabama administrator of the Works Progress Administration, said, "It is our desire to give every ounce of cooperation we can in providing additional labor for those farmers requesting it. We realize the situation they are up against and we certainly intend to help where and when possible."

Letters being received by the W. P. A. offices in Montgomery have been high in their praise of the cooperation of the W. P. A. in this emergency, and many have gone so far as to say that the workers secured from the W. P. A. have shown a most commendable attitude and have entered into the work with much greater zest than has been anticipated.

In counties where the demand arises for farm labor to meet the problems being faced at this time, W. P. A. projects that can be suspended without loss in materials and money are being temporarily shut down to allow the workers to accept employment on farms. "Of course," Colonel Henderson stated, "We realize this employment on the farms is only temporary, and we have let it be known that if a W. P. A. worker had an opportunity to secure this work he would be reassigned to W. P. A. work if he was still in need after the farm job was completed. This procedure is being followed in all counties where the requests are made and provided there is a sufficient number of W. P. A. workers available, and provided further, the farmer is financially able to pay the workers the prevailing wage for such farm labor in their respective counties."

"So far, not one statement of dissatisfaction has been received on the work being done on farms by those taken from W. P. A. rolls," Colonel Henderson stated. "The greatest need for this additional help on farms has come from the northern part of the State and some from the central part, and we see no reason for anyone saying that they are unable to secure the needed farm labor in this crisis due to W. P. A., because we are certainly lending an ear to any appeals made and endeavoring to give immediate action. It is most gratifying to us to hear that our efforts toward this end are meeting with the desired results."

Farmers desiring to use labor from the W. P. A. rolls will make requisition through the county agent's office for the number of men wanted and should also notify the county agent when the workers have served their purpose on this emergency farm work.

SESSIONS OF CONGRESS

Mr. SHANNON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

Mr. SHANNON. Mr. Speaker, in view of what the Speaker had to say concerning vacations, would it not be well for this body to pause for a moment to look back and see what a violent change has occurred in what the fathers placed in the Constitution concerning the sessions of this House? Since the "lame duck" session was abolished we have had nothing but perpetual sessions of this body. This is a serious matter, a very serious matter. I was one of those who believed it was a wise change, but today I do not believe it was a wise change. I think this body should take notice of the condition that has arisen as a result of the change, in view of the injury to the health of the Members that results from forcing them to stay here during this terrible Washington midsummer weather. In some way we should get back to what we used to have, at least, and occasionally return home instead of having perpetual sessions of Congress. [Applause.]

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. BOREN asked and was given permission to revise and extend his own remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks it might be proper to state that under the circumstances today, there being no business before the House, gentlemen who have made short speeches and received permission to extend their remarks may extend them in the body of the RECORD, this not to be in violation of the usual rule.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 12 o'clock and 26 minutes p. m.), under its previous order, the House adjourned until Wednesday, July 5, 1939, at 12 o'clock noon.

COMMITTEE HEARINGS

COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY

On Wednesday, July 5, 1939, beginning at 10 a. m., there will be continued a public hearing before the Committee on the Judiciary on the bill (H. R. 6369) to amend the act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States," approved July 1, 1898, and acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto; to create a Railroad Reorganization Court; and for other purposes.

COMMITTEE ON INDIAN AFFAIRS

There will be a meeting of the Committee on Indian Affairs on Wednesday next, July 5, 1939, at 10:30 a. m., for the consideration of H. R. 909, H. R. 953, H. R. 2738, H. R. 4831, H. R. 6506, and S. 72.

COMMITTEE ON IMMIGRATION AND NATURALIZATION

There will be a meeting of the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization on Thursday, July 6, 1939, at 10:30 a. m., the meeting to be an executive session of the committee on Senate private bills.

COMMITTEE ON MERCHANT MARINE AND FISHERIES

The Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries will hold public hearings in room 219, House Office Building, at 10 a. m., on the bills and dates listed below:

There will be a meeting of the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries at 10 a. m. Tuesday, July 11, 1939, for the consideration of H. R. 6881, to implement the provisions of the Shipowners' Liability (sick and injured seamen) Convention, 1936.

The notice of June 27, 1939, advised that public hearings would be held on Tuesday, July 11, 1939, at 10 a. m. on H. R. 6881, a bill to implement the provisions of the Shipowners' Liability (sick and injured seamen) Convention, 1936.

On the same day hearings will be held on H. R. 6726, a bill to amend the Merchant Marine Act, 1936, as amended, to provide compensation for disability or death resulting from injury to officers and members of the crew of vessels under the jurisdiction of the United States, and for other purposes. It has been decided to hold hearings jointly on these bills because of the relation between the two.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

942. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a report dated June 2, 1939, from the Chief of Engineers, United States Army, on preliminary examination of Sandy River and tributaries, Oreg., authorized by the Flood Control Act approved August 28, 1937, together with accompanying papers; to the Committee on Flood Control and ordered to be printed.

943. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a report dated June 2, 1939, from the Chief of Engineers, United States Army, on preliminary examination of Harbor Springs Harbor, Mich., authorized by the River and Harbor Act approved June 20, 1938, together with accompanying papers; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

944. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a report dated June 13, 1939, from the Chief of Engineers, United States Army, on reexamination of Palm Beach, Fla., requested by resolutions of the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, House of Representatives, adopted February 15, 1939, and the Committee on Commerce, United States Senate, adopted April 11, 1939, together with accompanying papers; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

945. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a report dated June 2, 1939, from the Chief of Engineers, United States Army, on preliminary examination of Illinois Bayou, Pope County, Ark., authorized by the Flood Control Act approved August 28, 1937, together with accompanying papers; to the Committee on Flood Control.

946. A letter from the Secretary of Agriculture, transmitting a draft of proposed legislation to simplify and provide for adequate administrative facilities in connection with marketing agreement, surplus commodity, and related operations; to the Committee on Agriculture.

947. A letter from the Acting Secretary of the Navy, transmitting a draft of a proposed bill "To amend the Act of October 6, 1917, 'An act to provide for the reimbursement of officers, enlisted men, and others in the naval service of the United States for property lost or destroyed in such service'"; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

948. A letter from the Consumers' Counsel of the National Bituminous Coal Commission, transmitting the Annual Report of the Office of the Consumers' Counsel of the National Bituminous Coal Commission for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1939; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII,

Mr. FLANNERY: Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads. H. R. 4932. A bill to amend the act of March 3, 1879, "Postal Laws and Regulations"; with amendment (Rept. No. 1023). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. LANHAM: Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds. H. R. 6830. A bill to authorize the construction of new buildings for the Navy Department in the District of Columbia; with amendment (Rept. No. 1024). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE

Under clause 2 of rule XXII, the Committee on Pensions was discharged from the consideration of the bill (H. R. 6778) granting an increase of pension to Charles L. Cook, and the same was referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. KITCHENS:

H. R. 7075. A bill for the purchase of a site and construction of a post office and Federal building at Camden, Ark.: to the Committee on Appropriations.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 1 of rule XXII,

Mr. WOLFENDEN of Pennsylvania introduced a bill (H. R. 7076) for the relief of Ralph R. Cunningham, which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

4161. By Mr. KEOGH: Petition of William J. Thompkins, recorder of deeds, District of Columbia, concerning House bill 3950 and House bill 4241; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

4162. Also, petition of New York State Industrial Union Council, New York City, concerning the Wagner-Rogers bill; to the Committee on Labor.

4163. Also, petition of United Marine Division, Local 333, New York City, concerning the Wheeler and Lea bills; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

4164. By the SPEAKER: Petition of Delta Council, Stoneville, Miss., petitioning consideration of their resolution with reference to the life work of General Ferguson; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

SENATE

WEDNESDAY, JULY 5, 1939

The Senate met at 11 o'clock a. m.

The Chaplain, Rev. ZeBarney T. Phillips, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Father of an infinite majesty, of whose wonderful universe we are a part: As the little stream in the valley murmurs of the fountain amid the hills, so may we trust Thee, our Maker, and go forward bravely to do what we find to do with our might, with ready hand, and cheerful heart. Let Thine especial blessing rest upon the youth of America, in whose vast energy there is the passion to enjoy the golden days, the summer sweetness, and the swiftly passing springtime. Grant that they may never postpone the great purposes of life, lest procrastination steal the prophecy of the days of strength and purity and courage; and help us all, both old and young, to realize that, with the Prince of Peace in the world, in the home, and in the heart, life may again be lived as at the first, in a garden, in the sunshine, and in the light of our Father's love. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

On request of Mr. BARKLEY, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of Friday, June 30, 1939, was dispensed with, and the Journal was approved.

CALL OF THE ROLL

Mr. BARKLEY. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Davis	King	Radcliffe
Ashurst	Donahay	La Follette	Reed
Austin	Ellender	Lee	Russell
Bailey	George	Lodge	Schwartz
Bankhead	Gerry	Logan	Schwellenbach
Barbour	Gibson	Lucas	Sheppard
Barkley	Gillette	Lundeen	Shipstead
Blibo	Glass	McCarran	Slattery
Bone	Green	McKellar	Smathers
Borah	Guffey	Maloney	Stewart
Bridges	Gurney	Mead	Taft
Bulow	Hale	Miller	Thomas, Okla.
Burke	Harrison	Minton	Townsend
Byrd	Hatch	Murray	Tydings
Byrnes	Hayden	Neely	Vandenberg
Capper	Herring	Norris	Van Nuys
Chavez	Holman	Nye	Wagner
Clark, Idaho	Holt	O'Mahoney	Walsh
Clark, Mo.	Hughes	Overton	White
Connally	Johnson, Calif.	Pepper	Wiley
Danaher	Johnson, Colo.	Pittman

Mr. MINTON. I announce that the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH] is detained from the Senate because of illness in his family.

The Senator from Michigan [Mr. BROWN], the Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. CARAWAY], the Senator from Florida [Mr. ANDREWS], the Senator from California [Mr. DOWNEY], the Senator from Alabama [Mr. HILL], the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. REYNOLDS], the Senator from Utah [Mr. THOMAS], the Senator from Missouri [Mr. TRUMAN], and the Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER] are absent on important public business.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Eighty-three Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President—

The VICE PRESIDENT. Today's session follows an adjournment, and so this is the morning hour. The presentations of petitions and memorials is in order.

STABILIZATION FUND AND ALTERATION OF WEIGHT OF THE DOLLAR—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the routine morning business be dispensed with, in view of the agreement which was entered into about debate and the vote today.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

The Senate resumed the consideration of the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 3325) to extend the time within which the powers relating to the stabilization fund and alteration of the weight of the dollar may be exercised.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, when the Senate adjourned early last Saturday morning the conference report had not been voted on, and many Senators held the view that it would be a futility to vote upon it at any time in the future; that, whether a vote were taken according to some agreement by an hour certain on the following Wednesday, or whether such vote were taken at sometime years hence, the futility of such action would prevail, and that the Senate could not even create a decent legal issue to submit to the judicial branch of the Government. In this situation it seems to me to be my duty to undertake to state what I regard to be the principle involved.

At the present moment it seems to me there are hurdles to jump which did not exist at any time before the hour of midnight on June 30. If we continue in the course we are starting on today, we may have the opportunity afforded by the Government itself to test a question raised in 1934, when we discussed in advance granting these emergency powers; and that is whether the Congress of the United States may, under any circumstances whatever, delegate to the Chief Executive the primary legislative power.

The other hurdle, of course, is the hurdle relating to a dead statute. A statute which is dead because it has been entirely repealed cannot be more dead than a statute which has entirely expired. In either case powers that were described in that statute as emergency powers, and that were given under a cloud of grave doubt of their constitutionality for only a limited period, cannot be created anew by a statute which was conceived for a situation preceding the expiration of those powers, and which expressly provided that instead of a date therein named for their expiration, another date would be fixed for their expiration.

Therefore, Mr. President, I desire to proceed to the consideration of the character of this conference report and the character of the powers to which it refers.

It will be observed that the latter part of the report reads:

In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following:

"Sec. 3. The second sentence added to paragraph (b) (2) of section 43, title III, of the act approved May 12, 1933, by section 12 of said Gold Reserve Act of 1934, as amended, is further amended to read as follows: 'The powers of the President specified in this paragraph shall be deemed to be separate, distinct, and continuing powers, and may be exercised by him, from time to time, severally or together, whenever and as the expressed objects of this section in his judgment may require; except that such powers shall expire June 30, 1941, unless the President shall sooner declare the existing emergency ended.'

"Sec. 4. (a) Each United States coinage mint shall receive for coinage into standard silver dollars any silver which such mint, subject to regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, is satisfied has been mined subsequently to July 1, 1939, from natural deposits in the United States or any place subject to the jurisdiction thereof.

"(d) The Director of such mint with the consent of the owner shall deduct and retain of such silver so received 45 percent as seigniorage for services performed by the Government of the United States relative to the coinage and delivery of silver dollars. The balance of such silver so received—that is, 55 percent—shall be coined into standard silver dollars, and the same or any equal number of other standard silver dollars shall be delivered to the owner or depositor of such silver, and no provisions of law taxing transfers of silver shall extend or apply to any delivery of silver to a United States mint under this section. The 45 percent of such silver so deducted shall be retained as bullion by the Treasury or coined into standard silver dollars and held or disposed of in the same manner as other bullion or silver dollars held in or belonging to the Treasury.

"(c) The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to prescribe regulations to carry out the purposes of this section. Such regulations shall contain provisions substantially similar to the provisions contained in the regulations issued pursuant to the act of Congress approved April 23, 1918 (40 Stat. L., p. 535), known as the Pittman Act, with such changes as he shall determine prescribing how silver tendered to such mints shall be identified as having been produced from natural deposits in the United States or any places subject to its jurisdiction subsequent to July 1, 1939."

I turn back to the section which the conferees report purports to amend for purposes of dealing with the law as it was, and point out certain singular facts. I say "singular" in this connection because there is on the record an opinion of the Attorney General of the United States which undertakes to use as precedents certain other acts of the Congress by which a power was revived, which acts, as I compare them, are not similar to the statute under consideration.

This statute is an emergency statute. It will be observed that in title III, section 43, the very thing that was intended to be amended is the declaration that an economic emergency requires an expansion of credit. That will be found on page 150 of Federal Reserve Act of 1913, With Amendments and Laws Relating to Banking, a compilation by Elmer A. Lewis, superintendent, document room, House of Representatives. Then, again, on page 210, proof of the emergency character of this legislation appears, and again on page 294.

On page 294 this statute appears, and right in the statute itself there is clear evidence that the power therein set forth is nothing but an emergency power.

That is the first proposition.

The next thing to consider is—and this is what makes it different from anything cited in the opinion of the Attorney General—that—

The powers of the President specified in this paragraph—

"Paragraph," not "section," not "act"—

The powers of the President specified in this paragraph shall be deemed to be separate, distinct, and continuing powers, and may be exercised by him, from time to time, severally or together, whenever and as the expressed objects of this section in his judgment may require, except that such powers shall expire June 30, 1939, unless the President shall sooner declare the existing emergency ended.

Of course, we need not consume time in pointing out that this extraordinary language was an obvious confession of the doubtfulness of this legislation, so separating section (b) (2) from the rest of the act that if this issue should ever get to a court of justice, and the delegation of these primary powers should be held to be entirely void, this section alone would be the thing under consideration, and none of the rest of the act would be tainted by it. But, Mr. President, now, in the event at which we have arrived, we see that there is a different significance to the separation of that paragraph from all the rest of the paragraphs, and it is this: There is nothing in section 43 or in the act itself that can help out section 2. We cannot look to the context. We cannot find some other power elsewhere in section 43 that is a living power. We find this all carved right out, and we have this hard little kernel in section 43 that comes out as a whole. It is not attached to, it is not colored by, any other part of the act; it has no benefit or help in its distress at this moment.

These powers are as follows:

Section (2) of subsection (b) of section 43 of title III:

By proclamation to fix the weight of the gold dollar in grains nine-tenths fine and also to fix the weight of the silver dollar in grains nine-tenths fine at a definite fixed ratio in relation to the gold dollar at such amounts as he finds necessary from his investigation to stabilize domestic prices—

Note, the President was not fighting a war, and Congress was not fighting a war—or to protect the foreign commerce against the adverse effect of depreciated foreign currencies, and to provide for the unlimited coinage of such gold and silver at the ratio so fixed, or in case the Government of the United States enters into an agreement with any government or governments under the terms of which the ratio between the value of gold and other currency issued by the United States and by any such government or governments is established, the President may fix the weight—

This is where he gets the power of fixing the metallic content of the American dollar—

The President may fix the weight of the gold dollar in accordance with the ratio so agreed upon, and such gold dollar, the weight of which is so fixed, shall be the standard unit of value, and all forms of money issued or coined by the United States shall be maintained at a parity with this standard, and it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury to maintain such parity, but in no event shall the weight of the gold dollar be fixed so as to reduce its present weight by more than 50 percent.

There is no limit to the power to increase.

Mr. President, this power is carved out and made separate from any other power. It is made distinct, it is made continuing, and it may be exercised from time to time, according to the President's will and judgment, except that it shall expire by a definite time.

Now, we have the unique situation of having one single paragraph of the whole act lifted right out of the rest of it, and all of it expiring at a definite time. It would be a comparable situation if that particular section had been declared void because it was unconstitutional. It would be a comparable situation if the Congress had stepped in before the time expired and repealed all of that paragraph. No one would question the termination of these powers if the Supreme Court had declared that section void, nor would there be a doubt that they were defunct if Congress had repealed that paragraph before midnight of June 30 last. So, in my opinion, it is equally unreasonable, and irrational, and contrary to precedent, contrary to principle, and contrary to law, to undertake now to accept a conference report on a measure which was designed solely to fix a new date of expiration by enacting the measure into law before the expiration of the powers.

Legislature cannot put life into dead statute by amendment.

So says this dictum, found in the Fourth Decennial Digest. I have sent for the case cited, and though I have not had much time to study this question, I find this language in the case cited, State against Brennan, decided by the Supreme Court of Montana, and reported in Two Hundred Pacific Reporter at page 273:

Section 98, Revised Codes 1921, declares that "An act amending a section of an act repealed is void." And since the act of 1927, and also that of 1929, attempt to amend section 3186, by implication repealed by section 1 of the act of 1921 (sec. 3189), both of these later enactments are void, and the section fixing the penalty is section 3202, as amended by chapter 38, Laws of 1925. It was not possible for the legislature to put life into a dead statute by amendment of it.

So we see that the dictum follows almost the direct language of the decision. There are many other such dicta to be found in these digests. In order to save time and avoid reading I refer to the Third Decennial Digest, volume 25, key No. 135, under the subject Statutes, where several such dicta appear.

Sometimes we get a little help from our forefathers by turning away back to the roots of our system of jurisprudence. I have here an old case, in which the subject of dead statutes being incapable of revival merely by fixing a new date of expiration is somewhat discussed. I read from a case in Hilary term in the forty-third year of George III, argued and determined in the Court of King's Bench, reported in East's Reports, volume 3, page 205. I read from page 210:

With respect to the statute 26 George III, chapter 108, Lawrence, judge, referred to the twenty-seventh section which directs its commencement from the 24th of July 1786, and its continuance till the 24th of June 1795, and from thence to the end of the then next session of Parliament. Then the act of the 36 George III, chapter 61, which was doubtless intended to continue that act, because it refers to the period of continuance named therein by a strange blunder reenacts several former acts which were intended by the provisions of the 26 George III to have expired, and totally omits the latter, which therefore expired at the end of the next session of Parliament after June 1795, and consequently was not in force at the time of the offense committed.

Lord Ellenborough, the chief justice, discussing such statutes at another place in the opinion, reported on page 211, says this:

That would not necessarily follow, for a law, though temporary in some of its provisions, may have a permanent operation in other respects. The statute 26 George III, chapter 108, professes to repeal the statute 19 George II, chapter 35, absolutely, though its own provisions, which it substituted in the place of it, were to be only temporary.

And so on.

Mr. President, I ask to have printed in the RECORD at this place other parts of this opinion marked by me, in an attempt to show why I lay so much emphasis upon the entirety, the distinctness, the separability, of this particular paragraph, paragraph 2 of subsection (b) of section 43.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Vermont?

There being no objection, the matters were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Lawrence, J.: At any rate the argument does not apply here; for the stat. 19 Geo. 2, c. 35. was in itself only a temporary law, continued down by several acts to the 21 Geo. 3., which was one of the acts repealed by the stat. 26 Geo. 3, c. 108., and the stat. 21 Geo. 3, c. 34. would of itself have expired by the time limited for the continuance of the stat. 26 Geo. 3. Then the stat. 36 Geo. 3, c. 61, mistakenly assuming that the act of the 19 Geo. 2., which had been continued down only to the 24th of June 1795 and to the end of the then next session of parliament by the stat. 21 Geo. 3, c. 34., and which, together with the latter act, was then repealed, was still existing, professes to continue a non-existing act as amended by other non-existing acts, and wholly omits the act of the 26 Geo. 3, c. 108., which had repealed the stat. 19 Geo. 2 and the 21 Geo. 3., and which was the real statute meant to have been continued from the period referred to. This blunder was afterwards rectified by the stat. 42 Geo. 3, c. 89. (a), which rectifying that the stat. 36 Geo. 3, c. 61. was passed in order to continue the 26 Geo. 3, c. 108.; but that that act having before expired, doubts had arisen whether it were in force, it therefore enacts that the latter statute shall be revived from and after the passing of this act, which was on the 22d June 1802.

That here it appeared on the whole that the act of the 3 Geo. 2. was in force at the time, and the act of the 26 Geo. 3, c. 108. had expired; and therefore there could be no question but that the penalty under the former act might be recovered.

Rules discharged.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, it will be observed that all of the paragraph in question expired. There is no part of it left. Its position, so far as vitality goes, is exactly the same as if all and every part of this paragraph had been repealed, or as if every part of it had been held to be void after a trial.

Mr. President, I inquire how much time have I remaining?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator has 8 minutes remaining.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I cannot help dealing with this problem in its background, and that background is a cloudy one. When we were considering this legislation originally, I was moved to study the problem of the kind of powers Congress might delegate, and I was thoroughly persuaded that there was a type of power which Congress could not delegate in any way whatever.

Primary powers of legislation must be performed by the Congress itself. They may not be delegated at all. Secondary powers may be delegated provided the Congress tells the delegatee in what manner to execute those powers.

Chief Justice Marshall held in Wayman v. Southard (10 Wheat., 23 U. S. 1, at 42, 6 L. Ed. 253 (1825)), cited with approval in United States v. Guinand (220 U. S. 506, at 517, 55 L. Ed. 563 (1911)):

It will not be contended that Congress can delegate to the courts, or to any other tribunals, powers which are strictly and exclusively legislative.

This premise is important because, Congress, having promulgated the primary principle, may delegate the authority to establish policies subordinate to and consistent with the congressional pronouncement.

The great expounder of the Constitution made this apparent by the holding in the Wayman case (Ibid. 43):

The line has not been exactly drawn which separates those important subjects, which must be entirely regulated by the legislature itself, from those of less interest, in which a general provision may be made, and power given to those who are to act under such general provisions to fill up the details. To determine the character of the power given to the courts (in this debate the Executive) by the Process Act (in this debate the Gold Reserve Act of 1934), we must inquire into its extent.

And that is what we have to do here. This power is the power to coin money and regulate the value thereof. That is a primary power.

POWER TO ALTER THE METALLIC CONTENT OF THE DOLLAR

The clause conferring upon Congress the power to coin money and regulate its value, as well as to regulate the value of everything coined, creates an exclusive power of primary magnitude.

In United States v. Marigold (4 How. 560, 567) it was held:

But the twentieth section of the act of Congress of March 3, 1825, or rather those provisions of that section brought to the view of this Court by the second question certified, are not properly referable to commercial regulations, merely as such; nor to considerations of ordinary commercial advantage. They appertain rather to the execution of an important trust invested by the Constitution, and to the obligation to fulfill that trust on the part of the Government, namely, the trust and the duty of creating and maintaining a uniform and pure metallic standard of value throughout the Union. The power of coining money and of regulating its value was delegated to Congress by the Constitution for the very purpose, as assigned by the framers of that instrument, of creating and preserving the uniformity and purity of such a standard of value, and on account of the impossibility which was foreseen of otherwise preventing the inequalities and the confusion necessarily incident to different views of policy, which in different communities would be brought to bear on this subject. The power to coin money being thus given to Congress, founded on public necessity, it must carry with it the correlative power of protecting the creature and object of that power. It cannot be imputed to wise and practical statesmen, nor is it consistent with common sense, that they should have vested this high and exclusive authority, and with a view to objects partaking of the magnitude of the authority itself, only to be rendered immediately vain and useless, as must have been the case had the Government been left disabled and impotent as to the only means of securing the objects in contemplation.

There follows a discussion of the subject of debasement. I am obliged to omit the discussion of the exercise of that power by any branch of the Government, but I make the assertion that if left with the Congress of the United States the probability of debasement of the coin of the land is less great than it would be if it were in the hands of the Chief Executive.

Mr. President, I ask that the remainder of the citation from United States v. Marigold be printed in the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the matter referred to was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

If the medium which the Government was authorized to create and establish could immediately be expelled, and substituted by one it had neither created, estimated, nor authorized—one possessing no intrinsic value—then the power conferred by the Constitution would be useless—wholly fruitless of every end it was designed to accomplish. Whatever functions Congress are, by the Constitution, authorized to perform, they are, when the public good requires it, bound to perform; and on this principle, having emitted a circulating medium, a standard of value indispensable for the purposes of the community, and for the action of the Government itself, they are accordingly authorized and bound in duty to prevent its debasement and expulsion, and the destruction of the general confidence and convenience, by the influx and substitution of a spurious coin in lieu of the constitutional currency. We admit that the clause of the Constitution authorizing Congress to provide for the punishment of counterfeiting the securities and current coin of the United States does not embrace within its language the offense of uttering or circulating spurious or counterfeited coin, the term "counterfeit," both by its etymology and common intentment, signifying the fabrication of a false image or representation; nor do we think it necessary or regular to seek the foundation of the offense of circulating spurious coin, or for the origin of the right to punish that offense, either in the section of the statute before quoted, or in this clause of the Constitution. We trace both the offense and the authority to punish it to the power given by the Constitution to coin money, and to the correspondent and necessary power and obligation to protect and to preserve in its purity this constitutional currency for the benefit of the Nation.

THE POWER TO COIN MONEY AND TO REGULATE THE VALUE THEREOF, AND OF FOREIGN COINS, IS A LEGISLATIVE POWER OF THE GREATEST MAGNITUDE

Mr. AUSTIN. In the Legal Tender cases, decided in 1870 (79 U. S. (12 Wall. 457)), the Supreme Court, Mr. Justice Strong delivering the opinion of the Court, at page 545, expressly held as follows:

* * * Whatever power there is over the currency is vested in Congress. If the power to declare what is money is not in Congress, it is annihilated.

And again, at page 547:

* * * The Constitution does not ordain what metals may be coined, or prescribe that the legal value of the metals, when coined, shall correspond at all with their intrinsic value in the market. Nor does it even affirm that Congress may declare anything to be a legal tender for the payment of debts. Confessedly the power to regulate the value of money coined, and of foreign coins, is not exhausted by the first regulation. More than once in our history has the regulation been changed without any denial of the power of Congress to change it, and it seems to have been left to Congress to determine alike what metal shall be coined, its purity, and how far its statutory value, as money, shall correspond, from time to time, with the market value of the same metal as bullion.

And again, at page 554:

* * * The questions involved are constitutional questions of the most vital importance to the Government and to the public at large.

There is a declaration in itself of the magnitude of this power and its primary importance.

Mr. Justice Bradley, concurring, stated, as reported at page 557:

In this country the habit had prevailed from the commencement of the eighteenth century of issuing bills of credit; and the revolution of independence had just been achieved, in great degree, by the means of similar bills issued by the Continental Congress. These bills were generally made a legal tender for the payment of all debts public and private until, by the influence of English merchants at home, Parliament prohibited the issue of bills with that quality. This prohibition was first exercised in 1751, against the New England Colonies, and subsequently, in 1763, against all the Colonies. It was one of the causes of discontent which finally culminated in the Revolution. Dr. Franklin endeavored to obtain a repeal of the prohibitory acts, but only succeeded in obtaining from Parliament, in 1733, an act authorizing the Colonies to make their bills receivable for taxes and debts due to the Colony that issued them. At the breaking out of the war the Continental Congress commenced the issue of bills of credit, and the war was carried on without other resources for 3 or 4 years. It may be said with truth that we owe our national independence to the use of this fiscal agency. Dr. Franklin, in a letter to a friend, dated from Paris, in April 1779, after deploring the depreciation which the continental currency had undergone, said: "The only consolation under the evil is that the public debt is proportionately diminished by the depreciation, and this by a kind of imperceptible tax, everyone having paid a part of it in the fall of value that took place between the receiving and paying such sums as passed through his hands." He adds: "This effect of paper currency is not understood this side the water. And, indeed, the whole is a mystery even to the politicians how we have been able to continue a war 4 years without money and how we could pay with paper that had no previously fixed fund appropriated specially to redeem it. This currency, as we manage it, is a wonderful machine. It performs its office when we issue it; it pays and clothes troops and provides victuals and ammunition." In a subsequent letter of October 9, 1780, he says: "They (the Congress) issued an immense quantity of paper bills to pay, clothe, arm, and feed their troops, and fit out ships; and with this paper, without taxes for the first 3 years, they fought and battled one of the most powerful nations of Europe." The continental bills were not made legal tenders at first, but in January 1777 the Congress passed resolutions declaring that they ought to pass current in all payments and be deemed in value equal to the same nominal sums in Spanish dollars, and that anyone refusing so to receive them ought to be deemed an enemy to the liberties of the United States; and recommending to the legislatures of the several States to pass laws to that effect.

Mr. Justice Bradley, concurring, stated, as quoted at page 562:

Referring to the money of the land—

what its character and qualities, will depend upon the greatness of the exigency and the degree of promptitude which it demands. These are legislative questions.

And he refers to this power as a vital and essential power inhering in every national sovereignty and necessary to its self-government.

And again at page 564:

These views are exhibited, not for the purpose of showing that the power is a desirable one, and therefore ought to be assumed; much less for the purpose of giving judgment on the expediency of its exercise in any particular case; but for the purpose of showing that it is one of those vital and essential powers inhering in every national sovereignty and necessary to its self-preservation.

Again at page 565:

* * * Subsequent acts of Parliament fixed the standard of purity and weight in the coinage of the realm, which has not been altered for 150 years past. But the same authority which fixed it in the time of Queen Anne is competent at any time to change it. Whether it shall be changed or not is a matter of mere legislative discretion. And such is undoubtedly the public law of this country.

Even the dissenting judges concurred in respect to the magnitude of this power and its purely legislative character.

The Chief Justice, dissenting, at page 585, said:

Mr. Webster expressed not only his opinion but the universal and settled conviction of the country when he said: "Most unquestionably there is no legal tender and there can be no legal tender in this country, under the authority of this Government or any other, but gold and silver, either the coinage of our mints or foreign coin at rates regulated by Congress. This is a constitutional principle perfectly plain and of the very highest importance."

Mr. Justice Clifford, dissenting, stated at page 587:

Power to fix the standard of weights and measures is evidently a power of comparatively wide discretion, but the power to regulate the value of the money authorized by the Constitution to be coined is a definite and precise grant of power, admitting of very little discretion in its exercise * * *

And again at page 602:

Interests of such magnitude and pervading importance as those involved in providing for a uniform standard of value throughout the Union were manifestly entitled to the protection of the national authority, and in view of the evils experienced for the want of such a standard during the War of the Revolution, when the country was inundated with floods of depreciated paper, the members of the convention who framed the Constitution did not hesitate to confide the power to Congress not only to coin money and regulate the value thereof, but also the power to regulate the value of foreign coin, which was denied to the Congress of the Confederation.

And again at page 622:

Exclusive power to coin money is certainly vested in Congress, * * *

And again at page 633:

Constitutional powers, of the kind last mentioned—that is, the power to ordain a standard of value and to provide a circulating medium for a legal tender—are subject to no mutations of any kind. They are the same in peace and in war. What the grants of power meant when the Constitution was adopted and ratified they mean still, and their meaning can never be changed except as described in the fifth article providing for amendments, as the Constitution "is a law for rulers and people, equally in war and in peace, and covers with the shield of its protection all classes of men and under all circumstances."

Mr. Justice Field dissenting, at page 653, quotes Daniel Webster, as follows:

"We all know," says Mr. Webster, "that the establishment of a sound and uniform currency was one of the greatest ends contemplated in the adoption of the present Constitution. If we could now fully explore all the motives of those who framed and those who supported that Constitution, perhaps we should hardly find a more powerful one than this."

And again at page 675:

The power to coin money, as already declared by this Court, is a great trust devolved upon Congress, * * *

THE EXPERIENCE WITH THIS POWER DURING THE REVOLUTION FOR INDEPENDENCE PROVED IT TO BE SO GREAT THAT THE TRIUMPHANT LIBERTY WAS DEPENDENT UPON IT

Mr. Justice Bradley, concurring in the Legal Tender cases (12 Wall. 557), declared:

In this country the habit had prevailed from the commencement of the eighteenth century of issuing bills of credit; and the Revolution of Independence had just been achieved, in great degree, by the means of similar bills issued by the Continental Congress. These bills were generally made a legal tender for the payment of all debts, public and private, until, by the influence of English merchants at home, Parliament prohibited the issue of bills with that quality. This prohibition was first exercised in 1751 against the New England Colonies; and subsequently, in 1763, against all the Colonies. It was one of the causes of discontent which finally culminated in the Revolution. Dr. Franklin endeavored to obtain a repeal of the prohibitory acts, but only succeeded in obtaining from Parliament, in 1773, an act authorizing the Colonies to make their bills receivable for taxes and debts due to the Colony that issued them. At the breaking out of the war the Continental Congress commenced the issue of bills of credit, and the war was carried on without other resources for 3 or 4 years. It may be said with truth that we owe our national independence to the use of this fiscal agency. Dr. Franklin, in a letter to a friend, dated from Paris, in April 1779, after deploring the depreciation which the continental currency had undergone, said: "The only consolation under the evil is that the public debt is proportionately diminished by the depreciation; and this by a kind of imperceptible tax, everyone having paid a part of it in the fall of value that took place between the receiving and paying such sums as passed through his hands." He adds: "This effect of paper currency is not understood this side the water. And, indeed, the whole is a mystery even to the politicians how we have been able to continue a war 4 years without money, and how we could pay with paper that had no previously fixed fund appropriated specially to redeem it. This currency, as we manage it, is a wonderful machine. It performs its office when we issue it; it pays and clothes troops and provides victuals and ammunition." In a subsequent letter, of 9 October, 1780, he said: "They (the Congress) issued an immense quantity of paper bills to pay, clothe, arm, and feed their troops and fit out ships; and with this paper, without taxes for the first 3 years, they fought and battled one of the most powerful nations of Europe." The continental bills were not made legal tenders at first, but in January 1777 the Congress passed resolutions declaring that they ought to pass current in all payments and be deemed in value equal to the same nominal sums in Spanish dollars, and that anyone refusing so to receive them ought to be deemed an enemy to the liberties of the United States; and recommending to the legislatures of the several States to pass laws to that effect.

And again, page 563:

It is absolutely essential to independent national existence that government should have a firm hold on the two great sovereign instrumentalities of the sword and the purse, and the right to wield them without restriction on occasions of national peril. In certain emergencies government must have at its command not only the personal services—the bodies and lives—of its citizens, but the lesser, though not less essential, power of absolute control over the resources of the country. Its armies must be filled and its navies manned by the citizens in person. Its material of war, its munitions, equipment, and commissary stores must come from the industry of the country. This can only be stimulated into activity by a proper financial system, especially as regards the currency.

And again, at page 567:

I do not say that it is a war power, or that it is only to be called into exercise in time of war; for other public exigencies may arise in the history of a nation which may make it expedient and imperative to exercise it. But of the occasions when, and of the times how long, it shall be exercised and in force, it is for the legislative department of the Government to judge.

Mr. President, many times has the Supreme Court of the United States passed upon this power, and every time, without exception, so far as my reading discovers, they have referred to it as a power of the highest magnitude. They have even discussed the absolute importance of it with respect to national defense.

And so we claim that, confronted as we are today with the question of the futility of our act, if now or at any time in the future we agree to the conference report we ought to pause and consider the character of the thing that is involved in it. If one had no doubt, considering solely the meaning of the word "expire," if one felt that it was worth gambling on to undertake to agree to the conference report with a view to creating a lawsuit, he ought, it seems to me, to pause before this particular consideration: That the power is one of the chief powers and functions of the Congress; that it is a legislative power of the highest magnitude; that probably it was not validly given in the first instance, and therefore we ought not to continue in the attempt to create it by this very doubtful method.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The time of the Senator from Vermont has expired.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I wish to discuss this matter from a different standpoint than that from which the Senator from Vermont has discussed it. The question as it faces the Senate seems to me to divide itself into two parts. First, the merits of the question in itself. Second, whether or not the conferees appointed by the Senate to maintain the Senate view fully discharged their duty in the conference last Friday.

In the beginning I wish to say that the measure under consideration is a short one. It is not a long, complicated measure, as an appropriation bill would be or a bill which contained a hundred different items upon which the two Houses might have to disagree and each make concessions in order to reach an agreement. The measure in question is confined substantially to three points. First, the powers delegated to the President to fix the value of the dollar; second, the purchase of silver from foreign countries; third, the treatment to be accorded to silver of domestic origin.

There were three groups in the Senate, and each of these three groups might attach different weight to these three different points, each placing its own particular point first.

So far as I am concerned, Mr. President, the most important thing in the measure was covered by the amendment of the Senator from Delaware, and that is the purchase of foreign silver, which is the most useless and needless of all the things we have done. It has cost more than a billion dollars and has resulted in the purchase of foreign silver almost without end. I wanted to stop that, and my vote was cast for the measure as amended in the Senate with that subject uppermost in mind as the point of first importance.

There were different views. Some Senators attached the most importance to the question of the monetary-control question. Other Senators, especially those from the Western so-called silver States, were more interested in the price to be paid, or at least the treatment given, domestic silver.

I am sorry the majority leader has left the Senate Chamber. I hope he returns soon, because, being a new Senator, I am trying to absorb all the information I can about the traditions of the Senate.

It so happens that last Wednesday night an amendment was offered to the so-called relief measure. The Senator from Colorado [Mr. ADAMS] was in charge of the measure, and, in order to reinforce him as he went into conference with the conferees on the part of the House, I suggested that on that amendment a ye-and-nay vote be taken. It was taken. But in the course of the debate the distinguished Senator from Kentucky, the majority leader, delivered at least a kind of an offside lecture to me as to what conferees appointed by the Senate ought to do. I read the language of the Senator from Kentucky appearing in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of Wednesday, June 28, which was occasioned in the manner I have mentioned. The Senator from Kentucky said—and the crux of the whole thing is here—

I understood that the Senator from Colorado would consider himself * * * under the same obligation to use all reasonable and honorable means to see that the Senate's viewpoint on this amendment was sustained as much as in the case of any other amendment the Senate puts in the joint resolution.

Later, in the course of the same debate upon the same bill, the Senator from Kentucky said:

That is, as a Senate conferee he would attempt to see that the Senate viewpoint was sustained so far as he could reasonably do so.

I think that is a fair statement of the duty of a conferee. I shall now read what I read last Friday night in an inquiry directed to the Senator from Colorado [Mr. ADAMS]. The New York Times, in speaking in advance of the kind of report the conference committee of the Senate was likely to bring back, used the following language in the issue of Friday, June 30, on page 8:

There was little question from the first naming of the conference committee that it would report an agreement acceptable to the President, inasmuch as it was weighted with administration followers.

That newspaper writer was correct. He must have had in mind the senior Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER], the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY], and the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES] as composing a majority of the Senate conferees. Right there I want to stick a pin upon two of these three points. A yea-and-nay vote was had in the Senate which left no doubt as to the position of this body upon the bill. Upon the third point, that of the purchase of foreign silver, the sentiment in the Senate was so overwhelming that no Member had the temerity to risk asking for a yea-and-nay vote. The Senate's position upon the purchase of foreign silver was adopted by an overwhelming indication.

Mr. President, what happened? The senior Senator from Colorado [Mr. ADAMS] told us what happened in the conference committee. The majority, designated by the New York Times in its news story as administration followers, calmly informed the other two members, the Senator from Colorado [Mr. ADAMS] and the Senator from Delaware [Mr. TOWNSEND], that during the recess of the conference committee they had decided to recede from the Senate amendment, thereby entirely changing the position of this body, thereby abandoning without a struggle what the Senate itself had strongly indicated on two roll-call votes and one voice vote that was overwhelming.

These are all honorable men. Mark Antony said that much about Brutus and the other Roman senators who had stabbed Caesar. Brutus was an honorable man. They are all honorable men. These are senior Senators. I could have no quarrel with them as to their votes as individual Senators. The question is whether they have served the Senate, of which they are Members, or whether they have meekly surrendered, and betrayed the Senate's viewpoint, and failed to use the diligence that could reasonably be expected of men of their experience and standing, and, as the Senator from Colorado has said, of their fighting ability.

It will be remembered that last Friday night the Senator from Colorado said he had previously served on conference committees with these Senators. I do not purport to quote his exact language, but the Senator from Colorado said that somehow they seemed to have lost the energy, the fighting disposition, the power to maintain the Senate's position, which could reasonably have been expected of them.

Mr. President, it seems to me that if we have any respect left for ourselves, if we mean to maintain the prestige of the Senate as a lawmaking body, this is the first question that arises, and the question upon which the Senate should first pass judgment.

The Senator from Vermont [Mr. AUSTIN] has made an able legal argument. Other legal arguments will be made. No matter how the question goes, it will wind up in the courts. If the Senate shall recede from its position, the legal phases of this question will be determined in the courts and not upon the floor of the Senate. However, when the Senate takes a position by a definite and substantial vote, it has a right to know whether or not its conferees may be reasonably expected to make all honorable efforts to maintain that position.

The Senator from Colorado described the action of the Senate conferees as a surrender. The Senator from Delaware [Mr. TOWNSEND] said that in his 12 years of experience in the Senate he had seen no proceeding so high-handed as that of the majority of the Senate conferees. The Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG] said the same thing in different language. The junior Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT] termed the action of the Senate conferees an outrageous thing. I agree with all of them.

The question arose as to whether or not the conferees selected should have been the conferees to be selected, and the question was raised as to the seniority of the Senators on the conference committee. It was said that they were selected because of their seniority. The distinguished Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE] rose and said it was not always the practice of the Senate to choose its conferees solely upon the ground of seniority. When the debate became warm the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES] was fair enough with himself and with the Senate to rise and say that in his mind there was some doubt as to whether or not, on a bill of this kind and under these circumstances, the conferees should have been selected by the seniority method, because the seniority method put the Senate conferees under the control of a majority all of whom had voted against the position of the Senate upon the roll call. To me, that is the important thing. Is the Senate to maintain its prestige and position when a difference arises between the Senate and the House of Representatives? The only excuse given—and it was an excuse, not a reason—for the action of the majority was that they had to reach some sort of an understanding on Friday, so that the House could consider the report of the conference committee on Saturday. That reason has passed. The time element has disappeared. We can take a day or 2 days or a week to thrash out the differences between the Senate and the House. However, in order that the Senate's position may be given fair, full, and complete consideration the Senate must be represented by conferees who believe in the cause for which they are battling and not by Senators who were in the first instance opposed to the Senate's position, and who, as described by older Senators than I, surrendered without firing a shot.

I recall, Mr. President, that the distinguished Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN], the President pro tempore of the Senate, was in the chair Friday night, or early Saturday morning, when the parliamentary position of the conference report was discussed, and the presiding officer at that time being the same one who is now in the chair held—and I read from page 8445 of the RECORD of Friday, June 30:

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is the opinion of the Chair that there is no action that the Senate may take in regard to the conference report except to adopt it, reject it, or indefinitely postpone it. If the Senate should reject the conference report, then the bill would not be dead, and on the bill itself the Senate could ask a new conference, but it would have to be after action was taken by the Senate on the conference report and only if it were rejected.

Mr. President, the majority of this body, including myself, have not been fairly represented in conference with the other House. For its own dignity, for its own self-respect, in the name of simple honesty and common decency, the conference report should be rejected, and when new conferees on the part of the Senate are appointed, as suggested by the Chair, and as is possible under the rules, they should be men who are in full sympathy with the views of the Senate overwhelmingly expressed on two yea-and-nay votes, and upon a voice vote, that left no doubt whatever as to the position of the Senate.

It is my belief, Mr. President, that that is the only way by which this body may maintain its self-respect and its dignity, and there is ample time now for this matter to be worked out in a way that will at least give some consideration to the substantial majority of the Senate instead of meekly, tamely, and abjectly surrendering the views so strongly expressed by this body.

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, I listened with a great deal of interest to the debates in this body on Monday, June 26, and on Friday, and on Saturday of last week, and also this morning in relation to the subject that is now before the Senate. I was especially interested in that portion of the debate that related to the obligation of conferees. I personally cannot help but feel that when the Senate votes, as it did last Monday, the conferees representing this body should represent in letter and in spirit the vote of the body.

If there is no rule to that effect, I think it is about time we woke up and adopted one. I like the expression of the distinguished Senator from Colorado [Mr. ADAMS] when he said:

We may well remember that there are things of greater value than the mere temporary accomplishments. And loyalty and faithfulness rank above all.

I repeat, Mr. President, and "loyalty and faithfulness rank above all."

Mr. President, these are times of great moment, of great decisions. What we do now will give direction to the future of this country.

SHALL WE CONTINUE THE POWER IN THE PRESIDENT TO DEVALUE THE AMERICAN DOLLAR?

In my opinion, the country is as interested in answering this question "No" as it is in seeing that the Congress pass the Hatch bill or amendment, or whatever it may be called. The country does not want any further tinkering with its money, and it does not want any further political debauchery by officeholders under the Government. The people of this Nation do not expect the Senate to capitulate on either one of these measures.

Mr. President, I am glad to see that the distinguished Senator from New Mexico [Mr. HATCH] is in the Chamber. I want to say to him that I have information, definite and certain, that the Democratic politicians are starting out in their campaign for 1940 utilizing the A. A. A.—utilizing the men in the employ of the A. A. A.—to advance their political ambitions. I measure my words in making that statement. Perhaps that is why the Hatch bill or amendment is having so much trouble in the other House.

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WILEY. I yield.

Mr. MINTON. I hope the Senator does not refer to the A. A. A. set-up in Indiana, for most of them are Republicans.

Mr. WILEY. I want to put the law above them, and if Republicans are used that the same precept be applied to them as it is sought to apply to all W. P. A. workers. We know that last week telephones on Capitol Hill began to jangle when it appeared that there might be some action in the House on the so-called Hatch amendment. We know that versatile and watchful Charles Michelson and others stepped into the breach. I do not intend today to discuss at any length this particular subject. But I am here to say that figures will be obtained which will show that in the month of June emissaries went forth and started to do to A. A. A. that which was done to W. P. A. in many sections of this country in the last election. I repeat, the information is definite and certain that there exists a plan and a scheme which has already been put into operation in certain portions of this country to make A. A. A. a political instrument in the next campaign for the administration forces. Already workers in the field—and when I say "workers in the field" I mean loyal A. A. A. workers—already patriotic citizens are sensing the danger. I say I want to make myself clear. I am not against the objectives of the A. A. A., but I am against using an instrumentality of government for political purposes. Therefore I am for the so-called Hatch bill or amendment 100 percent, and I hope the Senator from New Mexico will not cease his fight to prevent the repetition in the next campaign of what was done in the last campaign and in the campaign of 1936. Therefore, I repeat, I am strongly in favor of the so-called Hatch measure; and if the so-called new dealers are not aware that the country is in favor of passing the Hatch bill, they will be made aware of the country's opinion in no uncertain way if they keep on trying to utilize this instrument of government for political purposes.

I now return to the subject which is under discussion. The eloquent Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS] gave a graphic word picture of why in 1933 the Senate passed the original devaluation bill. Everyone knows the character of the national and international situation at that time. But now, after 5 years, with war clouds on the horizon, with a great percentage of our private debt liquidated, with $16,000,000,000 of gold, which is 60 percent of all the gold in the world, in our possession, with practically every great economist in America sustaining the position that from an economic viewpoint it would be unwise to continue this power in the President, and with the foreign situation as it is, the Senate the other day expressed its opinion definitely—and I believe it will continue in that conviction—that the constitutional power lodged by the people in the Congress must be retained by the Congress and exercised by the Congress.

Mr. President, why is this so? Because it is common sense that we do this thing.

The people desire it.

The judgment of the best economic minds in America is that it is imperative that we do not give this power again to the President.

Mr. President, while I am on this subject I ask unanimous consent to place in the RECORD at this time as a part of my remarks a list of the powers that have been delegated to the President since 1933.

There being no objection, the list was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

POWERS DELEGATED TO PRESIDENT

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, I am arguing as if the legal question were out of the way; I am arguing as if it were half past 11 o'clock on last Friday evening.

I agree with the distinguished Senator who spoke this morning as to what the real legal issue is and how it will be decided by the courts if it ever comes to the courts.

From a political standpoint, if we refuse to accept the report of the conference committee we shall not only be reclaiming our right, but we shall be waking up to the responsibility of the Senate. I have just sent to the Chair four solid sheets of powers that the Congress has given to the President since 1933. I say it is time that we, the legislators of the Nation, reclaim those powers which are ours under the Constitution instead of "passing the buck" and asking George to do it or asking Franklin to do it.

History will speak in very decisive terms of the "buck passing" period of Congress. From the action of the present Congress it is apparent that we are over this period of "buck passing" and "letting George do it."

We can no longer maintain our dignity and our sense of fulfillment of the duties of the high office we occupy if we continually delegate to the President the functions that are ours. "Letting George do it"—or Franklin—is probably the main reason why this Nation is still on the economic detour.

As was indicated in the debate, the power to devalue the dollar is so significant, so extensive, so similar to powers that are granted dictators in other lands that some of us feel that it would be unwise to continue in other hands than our own this great power for good or evil.

We do not want the Executive of this country to have the power to reduce the wages and salaries of every worker in this Nation by a decree or increase the cost of living to such wage earners by a decree. Yes, if we should give him the power to devalue the dollar he could by his decree, as was so well said by the Senator from Maryland [Mr. Tydings] not only decrease in terms of wealth the custom revenues of the Nation but increase the cost to our citizens of all imports.

In thinking of my obligation today I am thinking of the future. We are not only mapping out the highway for tomorrow for this country, but we are also, because of the significance of America in the family of nations, placing landmarks by which other nations may travel. Our philosophy, political and economic, that we put into practice will shape those landmarks.

Other nations have "walked out" on democracy. I propose to do my bit to the end that America shall not follow that course. I believe we have already gone too far in the direction of European nations and that it is time that Congress should stand on its own feet and stop delegating away its powers to the President or to others.

I also agree with the distinguished Senator when he said the statement of the President was "silly" when the President implied that Congress' refusal to give him the right to devalue the dollar was equivalent to placing control in the hands of Wall Street.

The people of this country are getting "hep" to statements of this kind. In spite of the lopsided nature of a certain Washington columnist, even he could not stomach that one. Of this columnist it was said that if the President sneezed, and called the sneeze a symphony, the columnist would say, in his column next day, that it was a symphony; but even he could not stomach this statement.

I agree that peevishness in an Executive or in Senators is not conducive to clarity of thought or perspective, nor does it tend to solve constructively any problem.

I repeat what I said the other day in the Senate, that the people are awakening to a realization that the job has not been done that was promised to be done back in 1932 and 1936; and no camouflage or smoke screen will hide that fact.

Mr. President, I believe that the words of Webster in his famous 7th of March speech can be appropriately quoted now.

I quote:

I wish to speak as an American, and a Member of the Senate of the United States. It is fortunate that there is a Senate of the United States; a body not yet moved from its propriety, not lost to a just sense of its own dignity and its own high responsibilities, and a body to which the country looks, with confidence, for wise, moderate, patriotic, and healing counsels.

Mr. President, this country is looking for healing, or, as Webster says, "wise, moderate, patriotic, and healing counsels," not biased, prejudiced minds. In this statement of Webster's we find what we are looking for—a signpost. It is the word "confidence." Let us today recapture the position that rightfully belongs to us. Let us not, by the crack of the whip of patronage, or threat of purge, forget our obligation as Senators. If the President of the United States tomorrow, or in the future, thinks it is wise to devalue our currency, then we shall be willing to listen, weigh the pros and cons of the argument, discern the fallacies, appropriate the truth, and then make the decision—our decision, which the Constitution says we should make.

The advisability of devaluation, even if foreign nations further devalued their currency, is, in the vernacular of the street, "entirely up in the air." In other words, we do not know the answer to that question, though 54 economists say, "Don't give the power to the President"; but it is not necessary to get the answer, because we are not going to decide by this vote today whether or not it is advisable to devalue the dollar further. We shall decide but one thing, and that is this: Do we want to recapture the power which is ours, and which the Senate back in 1934 gave to the President, or do we want it to continue to rest in him for another 2 years?

Mr. President, when we sent the monetary bill to conference it carried a Senate amendment discontinuing the purchase of foreign silver. That provision was literally kicked out by the conference committee. Consequently, the foreign silver-purchase program will apparently go on, regardless of our wishes in the matter, and regardless of what we do here today. This little incident is more important than the amount of silver involved. It means that the will of the Senate is being thwarted, bent, or submerged.

While the purchase of foreign silver has no real significance as a monetary measure, it is regarded by the administration as a way and a method of putting into practice an American appeasement policy. It is argued, of course, that buying by our Treasury has stimulated world production, and made possible a certain amount of foreign trade whereby we could take superfluous silver in exchange for useful goods. On the other hand, by this very policy we have rewarded Mexico, which confiscated our American-owned properties. We have forced China off the silver standard. We have given Japan a chance to sell us Manchurian silver so that she could buy our ammunition, and we have put off the day of reckoning. This policy is self-defeating. Instead of restoring the prestige of silver, we are using less of it for money and less for commercial purposes.

Yes, Mr. President; it would be wise for this Government at this time to stop buying foreign silver. You will notice that I said "this Government." Under existing conditions, the Government buys all the silver bullion mined in this country. That leaves to the other nations the opportunity to sell their silver on the world market to the manufacturers of America who use silver. We use a great deal of silver. We shall use a great deal more of it for manufacturing purposes if the Government will keep its hands off buying it. Everybody in this country is looking for fine silverware. If we were not stimulating the foreign market, our manufacturers could buy silver at the world price, and you and I could have silverware and use it on the basis on which we should be able to buy it.

When the people of this country realize that the Senate and the Congress are not simply order takers—I repeat, order takers—that conclusion registered in the minds of the average citizens might be the psychological "shot in the arm" that would start prosperity coming our way again. We have the greatest demand the world has ever known for goods, machinery, and so forth. We have the manpower; we have the greatest money supply in the world; we have the greatest manufacturing plants; and yet, for some reason, we do not go places.

Idle men, idle money, idle plants, unfilled wants provide a challenge not only to this body but to every thinking American. After 6 years now the answer is pretty clear that you shall not find the solution to that problem by delegating more power to the executive branch of the Government.

The solution of the problem of the farmer, the small-business man, the manufacturer, and the workman will be found only when we realize that they are all tied up together. We shall find that solution when the average citizen begins to feel a return of confidence in his government; when he begins to feel that government is not simply a bungler, is not simply indulging in "shots-in-the-arm tactics," is not the exponent of outmoded theories and fancies, but is the exponent of thrift, industry, honesty, and common sense.

I realize the need of being careful not to hurt or wound. Not by bitterness but by kindness, not by sonorous phrases but by reason, not by fear but by cheer will we bring healing to the afflicted and solution to our problems.

Mr. President, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, the brother of our distinguished Senator from Alabama, recently used these significant words—I quote:

Maybe we have been grasping at shadows when the substance was within our hands. The chastening rod of frustration may yet drive us back to some of the sublimer but more simple things of the spirit.

Milton spoke of life as a "labor to be done." Some of us here at the vortex of political thought feel if the storms that have afflicted other nations should strike here they would have a tendency to destroy three great American ideas and ideals: First, Christianity, which teaches man a sense of his own dignity as the son of God and respect for his brother man. Second, a republican form of government, a covenant among free men to maintain and respect the rights and liberties of their fellow citizens. Third, international law, that link of faith and honor and good will which must exist before nations can go forward.

Some of us feel, Mr. President, that the challenge to these three great American institutions can be better met by maintaining the American concept of government, by not delegating to the Executive powers such as are now desired, and which the Constitution provided and the wise men who founded this country thought should be retained by the legislative branch.

I indulge in no denunciation of the Executive because he wants this additional power. I have no bitterness toward him because he and his advisers think he should have it. All I am doing is to use the intelligence that is mine to persuade my fellow Senators not to give him that power, because I think following this course does not lead forward and upward; it leads backward and downward. Today we are still in control of the powers delegated to the Congress, and the future of America depends upon us who control its destiny to keep that control. It would be a great tonic for the country, Mr. President, if we were to keep faith and vote not to accept the report of the committee.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, I wish to quote from chapter 5 of the provisions of Senate bill 416, now Public Act No. 1, passed at the first session of the Seventy-fifth Congress, approved January 23, 1937. I quote subdivision (c) from the act:

All powers conferred by this section shall expire June 30, 1939, unless the President shall sooner declare the existing emergency ended and the operation of the stabilization fund terminated.

Mr. President, we observed an unusual occurrence in this body on Monday, June 26. The Senate of the United States took a threefold action. That action was clear; it was unmistakable; and it left no shadow of doubt as to where the majority of the Members of the United States Senate stood, or how the American people, whom they represented, stood. The action taken on that day was, first, discontinuance of the power granted the Chief Executive to devalue the dollar, or the power to vary the gold content of the dollar; second, provision for the payment of seventy-seven and a fraction cents an ounce for domestically mined silver for a 2-year period; third, provision for the discontinuance of the right to purchase foreign silver.

After this very decisive action by the Senate on the bill then before us, the bill was sent to conference with the House of Representatives. During my brief service in this body—and this is the third year I have had the pleasure of being a United States Senator—I have never seen a group of conferees so completely and so thoroughly ignore the express wishes and desires of the United States Senate as that group of conferees who discussed the bill to which I have referred, and as was evidenced in the action which they took and in the conference report.

The policies established by the act which I have quoted have been in force for about 4 years. When the law was enacted the administration leaders on the other side of the aisle, the President, and administration spokesmen made statements to the effect that this great authority granted the administration by the passage of the measure allowing this country to pay a premium to foreigners in the purchase of gold and silver would increase prosperity in this country, would increase prices of foreign commodities and manufactured goods, and that it would develop our markets abroad. Instead of that, we have lost our markets abroad, and prices of our products have been depressed.

Let us consider cotton, for example. In 1933 we exported 8,400,000 bales of cotton. In 1939 we exported about 3,000,000 bales of cotton, in spite of the fact that in the meantime we contributed to the world silver powers and to the international silver speculators about $500,000,000.

What is the situation in this country today? There are about 12,000,000 people unemployed; there are 22,000,000 receiving some form of public relief. What has resulted from the policy adopted? About the only thing that has resulted has been prosperity to the international monetary speculators. Do we need any more foreign silver? The answer is that we have a billion one hundred and thirty million ounces of idle silver today, most of it buried in holes in this country.

Let us consider the Mexican situation for just a moment. That is certainly a great example of the outstanding wisdom of this administration. We have been subsidizing the Mexican Government for the past 4 years by the purchase of silver from Mexico. Millions and millions and millions of dollars a year have gone toward maintaining the Mexican Government, and while we have been following this good-neighbor policy, so-called, Mexicans have been engaged in seizing property of Americans. Whether it was sugar plantations, or oil properties, or private farms, they have been having a glorious holiday at America's expense, and we have been the "suckers."

Mr. President, I should like at this point to put into the RECORD the latest figures as to the acquisition of foreign silver, compiled from the United States Treasury bulletin for June, page 49. The figures are as follows:

Supply of foreign silver to the United States since the passage of the Silver Purchase Act through May 1939.....	$1, 078, 568, 000
Supplies of foreign silver to the United States from Latin America (approximately 22 percent of total supply to the United States).....	236, 770, 000
Supply from Mexico.....	216, 625, 000
Balance of supply by Latin America outside of Mexico (2 percent).....	20, 145, 000

These figures conclusively prove that so-called Latin-American purchases of silver are 98 percent Mexican.

When the Senate took the action on Monday to which I have referred, leading Mexican papers stated that the action of the Senate was disastrous, that it was an unfriendly act. Yet the attitude of Mexico for the past 2 years has been unfriendly, insofar as this country has been concerned, and the administration has taken no action regarding the unfriendly actions of Mexico.

The program today is based upon a legal opinion, and I presume that is the reason why we are voting today. I assumed, and I believe the majority of Americans had assumed, that when midnight Friday June 30, 1939, arrived the act to which I have referred went out of existence. There came forth from a great legal authority, Mr. Murphy, the Attorney General of the United States, an advisory opinion, in which he stated that in case the bill should be enacted after midnight of June 30, and even after a long intervening period, it would still be the law of the land.

Mr. President, to my mind that is a very decisive and important question. Who is this Mr. Murphy, the Attorney General of the United States, who sets himself above the Senate of the United States and the whole legislative branch of our Government? Who is he, this great legal authority, this crusader in armor who has been out cleaning up several Democratic messes in this country?

I opposed the confirmation of Mr. Murphy as Attorney General. There were only a few Members of the Senate who agreed with me. When I saw his crusading action in various places in recent months I wondered whether I had been wrong. But when I saw this advisory opinion he put forth, setting himself above the American Congress, one great branch of the American Government, then I knew he was running true to form, and I knew that he was delivering an opinion for the purpose of getting the administration out of a hole and to save the hides of the international speculators.

Who is he? He worked for a while as a law clerk in a lawyer's office in Detroit. For some time he was a judge of the recorder's court. If his private record as a lawyer in the State of Michigan is examined, not a case will be found where he appeared as an attorney before the Supreme Court of Michigan. Further it will be found that when he was appointed Attorney General of the United States by Mr. Roosevelt he had not even been admitted to practice before the Supreme Court of the United States, and had to be subsequently admitted.

Who is Mr. Murphy, and what has he done? He has specifically, and on several occasions, ignored the law of the land, such as the handling of the sit-down-strike situation in Michigan as the Governor of that State.

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BRIDGES. I yield.

Mr. MINTON. Is the Senator from New Hampshire himself a lawyer?

Mr. BRIDGES. No; I am not.

Mr. MINTON. But the Senator assumes to criticize the Attorney General of the United States because of an opinion which he handed down, and the Senator himself is not a lawyer.

Mr. BRIDGES. Certainly. [Laughter in the galleries.] Most certainly. I wish the Senator from Indiana had inquired whether or not Mr. Murphy is a lawyer. In answer to that question I will not have to say that he does come under that category, but if the Senator should ask me how good a lawyer he is and what his past record as a lawyer shows, then the answer would be very different.

It is on the advisory opinion of this man who worked as a law clerk in Detroit, this man who served a few years as judge in a recorder's office, this man who never had a case before the Supreme Court of Michigan, this man who had not even been admitted to the Supreme Court of the United States when he was appointed Attorney General of the United States—it is on the opinion of this great legal authority that we are acting today. In other words, Mr. Murphy, as Attorney General of the United States, is going through as a "stooge" of the administration. The issue we have before us today is whether or not the legislative branch of the Government is going to be ignored, and whether we are to accept as the basis of authority the opinion of Mr. Murphy, the Attorney General of the United States.

I read now an article containing a reference to a speech by the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. GUFFEY], an amazing speech, in which he intimated that if Mr. Roosevelt were not elected again for a third term we were going to have civil war. He said:

I'm for a third term for Roosevelt because I am a liberal and I believe in democracy. The judges and the lawyers cheated the people out of President Roosevelt's first term. The ingrates and the "middle-of-the-roads" robbed the people of President Roosevelt's second term. If the Tory politicians and the big-business magnates succeed in bamboozling the American people for a third term in 1940, then there's going to be an upheaval which will sweep away all politicians and all big business. I don't kid myself that the American people love their politicians.

Mr. President, those are the words of a United States Senator—the junior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. GUFFEY]. He said the people were robbed of the President's services in his first term by the judges, but he did not say that that is what occurred during the second term. Why did he not? I do not know that I could answer for the Senator from Pennsylvania, but probably because Mr. Hugo L. Black and some others had been appointed to the Supreme Court, and Senators in this body voted to make Mr. Hugo L. Black a Justice of the Supreme Court, and a Senator on the other side of the Chamber, the junior Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY] rose and said, "If Mr. Hugo L. Black does not make a good judge then God Almighty will be responsible." Well, that is too much responsibility to put on God Almighty. The Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY] made that statement. He is prone to make exaggerated statements in debate to further the cause he is advocating.

The issue is very clear, Mr. President, and in order not to occupy too much time of the Senate, I ask that as part of my remarks three articles appearing in the Baltimore News-Post of Saturday, July 1, 1939, one by Dr. Lewis Haney, another by M. S. Rukeyser, and another by Mr. B. C. Forbes, be printed in the RECORD at this point.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The articles referred to are as follows:

[From the Baltimore News Post of July 1, 1939]

DR. LEWIS HANEY CLEARS UP QUESTIONS ON MONEY STANDARD

The subject of money keeps coming up—which shows how important that subject is.

In fact, the lack of a standard for our money is the sign and symbol of the general break-down of standards in our social life today. Just as we have no standard money, so we have no standard of honor in political pledges, no standard of international honor, and no standard of work and pay.

On all sides we hear that rules, laws, and principles are out-moded. Times are different. One man's guess, or happy thought, is as good as another's.

Thus, it seems, a man doesn't have to bother about gaining knowledge through study and experience. He can set up as an expert by announcing some "objective" that appeals to people.

"Economists" spring up like weeds, and the fact that those who direct the Nation's economic policies have never been heard of, and have never done anything to prove ability, seems to bother no one.

If anyone states that established principles demonstrate the unsoundness of a scheme, he is told that times are different. The standards of the past are mere horse-and-buggy affairs.

That we now have no standard for our money is well illustrated by the fact that we are considering a proposal to take away from Mr. Roosevelt his power arbitrarily to change the size of what used to be our monetary yardstick.

Suppose that Mr. Roosevelt had the power at will to change our yardstick, pound weight, and bushel basket. We would then realize that we had no standard of weights and measures. To be a standard, a thing must be definite and nonarbitrary.

What, then, is good money? And what is the importance of a standard for money? These are the questions we need to answer in order to understand the devaluation power.

Good money is that which does the work of money well.

The work of money is to measure values in exchange. That is what a medium of exchange does—it enables two or more individuals to use a common yardstick to measure the values of different goods.

But to measure anything in a way that two or more individuals will accept, we must have a standard. In measuring cloth, we have to have a standard yard, which is the length of a certain bronze bar at a certain temperature.

So, in measuring value, if all men are to participate and agree, we must have a standard dollar—one that is definite and not subject to arbitrary change, so that all men can figure on it.

There are two classes of measurement: One is current and concerns values in the present. The other is future and concerns deferred payments. It is of the greatest importance that our money should serve as a standard for deferred payments, such as are required in credit transactions.

Accordingly, over a period of months or years, good money must not only be free from arbitrary changes but also be as stable in value as possible. (Nothing is absolutely fixed in value, but gold has a more stable value than any other known object which would be available for use.)

Thus, we see how opposed to the idea of good money and a standard of value is the power to devalue. That power is exactly as if Mr. Roosevelt were empowered to change the length of the bronze bar which determines our standard yard.

The whole scheme of monetary manipulation and "managed currency" is really fantastic. It is an Alice-in-Wonderland sort of system, and is a nightmare to business planners and investors. (This is the greatest single reason for our unemployment and depressed capital-goods industries.)

To take away the devaluation power is thus a first step toward a return to standards and toward law and order in economic life.

This could start us toward a condition in which confidence in the stability of money would beget business confidence, full productive employment, and general prosperity.

DEVALUATION CONCERNS LIFE SURETY POLICIES

(By M. S. Rukeyser)

The stir at Washington over devaluation is of direct concern to the 64,000,000 holders of policies in American life-insurance companies.

Likewise it is of interest to the 44,000,000 owners of American savings accounts, amounting in the aggregate to some $24,000,000,000.

Savings represent goods produced which remain unconsumed, and usually are available in the form of tools to facilitate additional production.

Insurance policies are long-term calls under which policyholders and their beneficiaries (or heirs) may demand dollars from the insurance companies in future years, under stipulated contingencies.

If politicians through overspending or otherwise decide to get by through clipping coins of part of their gold, they in effect tend to change the deals which millions of Americans have made with insurance companies and savings banks.

But curiously enough, communications between most financial institutions and their clients are frequently so stiff and formalized they do not get across the realization that when politicians soak wealth they are soaking all the thrifty people of the Nation.

Once officers of financial institutions learn to use language, pictures, and arithmetical symbols to express themselves simply and unmistakably, they will help to interest the thrifty people of the Nation in natural fiscal affairs which bear directly on their own future economic security.

And the soundness of the currency is likewise equally important to the tens of millions of participants in the old-age-benefit provisions of the Social Security Act.

The kind of dollars which the Government pays out to those 65 and over will determine the living standards of the pensioners.

It is a healthy development to diffuse so widely among the people direct stakes in the soundness of the currency and the Nation's economic life.

Historically, whenever the subject of inflation used to come up, seductive politicians would try to make it appear that diluting the value of the dollar would injure only a small and select group, the bloated bondholders.

But nowadays the creditor class is vastly wider. As a matter of fact, it is larger numerically than the debtor class.

Every holder of a life-insurance policy, a savings account, or a social-security card now belongs to the creditor class.

This broad creditor group is not only concerned with manipulation of the dollar, but is even more concerned with keeping the national economy healthy.

For, despite the wording of contracts and legislation, the validation of future claims to dollars, which are tickets entitling holders to goods and services, are contingent on keeping the productive mechanism of the Nation in sound working order.

From this standpoint, the politician who thrives on business baiting is striking at the economic vitals of all the people. Unsound economic legislation not only injures the creditor class, but also the 51,000,000 Americans subject to gainful employment.

Once these simple facts are clearly grasped, the majority of intelligent citizens will boot out politicians who seek to play fast and loose with the economic bases for national prosperity.

And ignorance and incompetence on the part of public officials can be as disastrous to national welfare as willful demagoguery itself.

BUSINESS FOR RULE BY LAW, NOT PRESIDENT

(By B. C. Forbes)

President Roosevelt dealt a severe blow at himself in his press-conference tirade against the Senate for having voted to restore to Congress the right to determine the gold content of the dollar. A right always enjoyed by our legislative body until Mr. Roosevelt, on the pretext of extreme "urgency," induced Congress to repose that power in him.

In his indignation at being thwarted he made amazing factual misstatements.

Not only so, but he sought to mislead the public into believing that Wall Street would be able to kick around foreign exchange as if it were a football unless he were again invested with authority to depreciate the gold content of the dollar still further.

As a matter of fact, the market for foreign exchange has been governed by the gigantic stabilization funds created for that specific purpose by the United States, Britain, and France.

Such fluctuations as have actually occurred in foreign exchange have been invariably based on rumors that Franklin D. Roosevelt contemplated cutting the dollar in half; that is to say, from its old-time gold content, already reduced by 41 percent.

The man in the street, busy trying to earn his living and not versed in international finance, cannot be expected to know the intricacies of the whys of fluctuations in the international value of various currencies.

So he is open to being deluded when the Chief Executive of the Nation makes a statement not in accordance with the actualities.

Mr. Roosevelt, who, from his exalted position, has delivered more blows against financial and business leaders than any other American President, reveals that he "can't take it."

Apparently he is sincerely convinced that in him reposes all financial wisdom—this notwithstanding that his own excursions into the world of finance before he became a politician proved disastrous for himself and others.

Tampering with a nation's currency, especially with the currency of the richest nation on the face of the earth, is a most serious matter, calling for the utmost deliberation.

License to do this should not be sought by any one individual. It should be delegated to our elected legislative representatives.

This writer favors continuation of the $2,000,000,000 fund dedicated to maintaining stability in the international value of the dollar.

While such a fund remains in operation it is something worse than nonsensical for Franklin D. Roosevelt or any other individual to attempt to beguile the public into believing that Wall Street can play ducks and drakes with the stability of our national currency.

The Senate's action, as I see it, was symptomatic. Do the American people want to invest any one man with unprecedentedly autocratic powers? Or do they want to return to our long-cherished constitutional form of government?

While an "emergency" admittedly existed, the disposition was to grant almost unlimited power to the President. Such power was granted and has been exercised for more than 6 years.

But the economic and social results have been disappointing. Depression still grips the land. Ghastly unemployment continues.

Government spending on a scale never before visioned has failed to restore old-time prosperity. Confidence in the administration is woefully lacking.

Men of affairs all over the land will follow events at Washington with intense interest. Developments in business, in industry, in investments, in employment during the second half of this year will be potentially influenced by how Congress acts.

If it submits to the dictates of Mr. Roosevelt, fillers of pay envelopes are hardly likely to exhibit impressive demonstrations of optimism, enterprise, employment expansion.

If Congress insists on exercising its constitutional independence, and if the undercurrent of public sentiment does not change, genuine progress toward better times may be made this year.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, I also ask to have printed at this point as part of my remarks an editorial published in the Springfield Union of September 20, 1938, entitled "New Deal Silver Fiasco"; an editorial published in the New York Times of June 29, 1939, entitled "Silver and Mexico"; and an editorial published in the New York Times of July 5, 1939, entitled, "The Monetary Bill"; all of which have bearing upon the situation under consideration.

There being no objection, the editorials were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Springfield Union of September 20, 1938]

NEW DEAL SILVER FIASCO

About a billion dollars of the 5-year increase in the national debt has been really incurred in Treasury purchase of silver which is now being trucked at the rate of over 200 tons a day to recently completed vaults at West Point, N. Y., and, of course, at additional public expense. At the same time gold is being shipped to new underground vaults in Kentucky.

All of the 15,000 tons of gold in the Treasury present stock is kept underground and out of the hands of the people and most of the 75,000 tons of silver is likewise buried in vaults, because the people do not care to have it in their hands, except as subsidiary coins or as silver certificates.

Having called in all the gold in the banks or in the hands of the people on a payment of $20.67 an ounce, the President thereupon jacked the price up to $35 an ounce by cheapening the dollar about 40 percent and the Treasury credited itself with a profit of $2,800,000,000, of which about two billions was called a stabilization fund concerning the state or operations of which the public is not allowed to know anything.

Five months later, or in June 1934, the Silver Purchase Act went into effect under the New Deal delusion either that the price would rise to $1.29 an ounce or that the Treasury's silver holdings would gain a value of one-fourth the combined holdings of gold and silver. At first, Secretary Morgenthau tried to raise the price to $1.29 by raising his bids, only to find when he had bid up to 81 cents an ounce that speculators were buying the metal on the way up, expecting to dump it on the Treasury at or near the goal of a $1.29 price.

So that New Deal experiment failed; the Treasury ceased bidding up and the price went back to about 43 cents an ounce at which the Treasury continued to buy silver offered in the world markets. To keep our own silver States politically in line, the President subsidized domestic production at a price from 21 to 32 cents higher. The present subsidy is 21½ cents above the Treasury bid price which is a fraction above the world market price.

The result of about 4 years of the Silver Purchase Act is that the Treasury has bought about 1,720,000,000 ounces of silver at better than 50 cents an ounce in the average and has had to make a cemetery for it in West Point.

This, with the 696,000,000 ounces already held when the Purchase Act went into effect, might have brought silver holdings up to the value of one-fourth that of the combined gold and silver holdings, provided gold holdings had remained as at the time of devaluation of the dollar. But at a bid price of $35 an ounce gold holdings didn't remain where they were. So that New Deal experiment also failed after buying nearly a billion dollars' worth of silver and over $2,000,000,000 worth of gold.

If now our gold stock remained at about $13,100,000,000, the Treasury would need to buy another billion ounces of silver to get a value at silver prices of a quarter of the total gold and silver holdings.

But our present gold stock of over $13,000,000,000, or about 52 percent of all the world's monetary gold, is not staying put. Gold keeps coming into the Treasury at $35 an ounce to be paid for in gold certificates which go to swell excess banking reserves big enough to blow the lid off for a tremendous inflation of credit, were business not so hamstrung by Federal taxes and regulations as to make it impossible to use credit at a profit.

So the Treasury continues to buy silver at 43 cents an ounce and gold at $35 an ounce but the intended ratio of silver to gold keeps about as far out of reach as ever. Thus we have to have a cemetery in Kentucky for gold that the people can't have and a cemetery in West Point for silver that the people don't want.

There is, however, this difference. The people are denied the use of gold or gold certificates. But they can have silver certificates if they won't take silver dollars. An ounce of silver bought at 43 cents can be coined on the assumption that the ounce is worth $1.29 and a dollar silver certificate issued for the coin. The people can have the certificates with 43 cents worth of silver back of them and can even pay their increased taxes with them, so considerable is the New Deal for the more abundant life of the people.

But it should not pass unnoticed that the Government pockets most of the difference between 43 cents and $1.29 in the operation and calls it seigniorage as a revenue receipt. It is said that the Government has already coined enough of its silver to have a revenue profit of about $640,000,000. Hence, from the alleged profits of seigniorage the Treasury has largely paid for the tons of silver in the West Point cemetery.

It is reported to have about a billion of ounces as yet uncoined, still capable of a further seigniorage profit and still to be valued at $1.29 an ounce when and if issued in dollar certificates for the more abundant life of the people, supposed to be fooled by a New Deal fiasco and failure.

SILVER AND MEXICO

Immediately following the Senate's vote to terminate purchases of foreign silver, "emergency conferences" were held by officials of the State Department to consider "the serious crisis caused in Mexico." The Mexican Government, it appears, obtains more than half its total revenues, either directly or indirectly, from the silver industry. It has depended largely on income from silver to keep going since the American oil properties were expropriated. Some officials of the State Department are said to fear that a "dangerous situation politically as well as economically" has been caused by the Senate's action. One of their fears is that the Mexican Government may now expropriate American mining properties, valued at $400,000,000, in order that the government might get all money from silver sales at what is expected to be a lower price.

All this sounds as if the Senate, in voting to discontinue purchases of foreign silver, did something irresponsible. But what do such fears really imply? Must we continue to buy Mexican silver that we do not need, and continue to pay a wholly artificial price for it, to prevent Mexico from expropriating American mines? Are our purchases of Mexican silver to be thought of as a form of political blackmail that we must pay to keep more American property in Mexico from being seized? A worse argument for continuing our purchases of foreign silver could not possibly be imagined.

It is true that if we cease to buy foreign silver at an artificial price the foreign individuals and governments who were profiting from those sales will be less well off than they are now. Our Government will no longer be supporting them. But the inconveniences of readjustment are no reason why our Government must continue to support them indefinitely. By our silver purchases we have actually continued to contribute heavily to the support of a government that meanwhile has been seizing American private property on a grand scale. It is an astonishing situation. Even now we would not be discontinuing these silver purchases in any sense out of retaliation but because there is no good reason why we should ever have made them in the first place. If the American people decide that they owe any foreign government their financial support, they can give that financial support directly and not under the subterfuge of doing something else.

[From the New York Times of July 5, 1939]

THE MONETARY BILL

There is disagreement in Washington regarding the situation that has been created by the defeat of the administration's monetary bill. The immediate question at issue is whether passage by the Senate of the measure which failed of enactment in the midnight session Friday evening will in itself be sufficient to reestablish the powers which the President desires, or whether—these powers having expired automatically on June 30 under existing legislation—entirely new legislation must now be initiated in both Houses in order to recreate an authority which has ceased to exist. The point of law is one for legal minds to decide, and perhaps it will not be decided finally to the satisfaction of all parties until the question is carried to the courts. Meanwhile, so far as the common sense and the morals of the matter are concerned, the layman cannot fail to note that some of the administration's spokesmen have taken a curious position—first, in attempting to bring great pressure to bear to get the pending measure passed by midnight on Friday, on the ground that new legislation would be needed in case it failed to pass by that critical hour, and then, after the bill had failed to pass, in arguing that the precise hour of its passage does not matter anyway.

So far as the larger questions of policy are concerned, three points are at stake in the present controversy: (1) the President's power to devalue the dollar; (2) the maintenance of the $2,000,000,000 exchange stabilization fund, and (3) the provision for the purchase by the Treasury of domestically mined silver at a premium above the market. Of these three points it can be said:

1. Discontinuance of the President's power to devalue the dollar is greatly to be desired, on the ground that this will remove from the present economic situation a major source of continued uncertainty. So long as the President had such power—an arbitrary and personal power never before given to a Chief Executive in the whole history of the United States—there were bound to be intermittent rumors and guesses regarding what use he would make of it, with a consequent invitation to speculation and an accompanying uncertainty regarding the future value of the dollar in any plans involving long-term investment. It will be a step in the direction of greater monetary stability if all efforts to revive this power, now or later in the present session, are defeated.

2. There are sound reasons for desiring the reestablishment of the stabilization fund. Moreover, there is every reason to believe that both Houses of Congress will readily approve such action, provided the question is presented in an independent measure, wholly separate from the question of power to devalue the dollar. Operation of the stabilization fund is a steadying influence in preventing unnecessary fluctuations in foreign exchange—standing in sharp contrast to the proposed arbitrary power to devalue.

3. As for purchases of silver: none of the proposals put forward during the present debate goes far enough, or in the right direction, to meet the real needs of the present situation. The whole silver-purchase program has been an egregious and unmitigated failure, the only visible results of which have been an unwarranted sop to the silver interests and the acquisition by the Treasury of some two billion ounces of a metal for which no earthly use is now in prospect. The time is long overdue for repeal of the entire Silver Purchase Act—lock, stock, and barrel.

Mr. BRIDGES. I now wish to call on a great authority in the administration on this silver question—a man who is an outstanding authority. Even some of the most rabid gentlemen on the other side of the fence will have to say that he is a great authority because he is one of them. I quote from Mr. Eccles, who is the head of the Federal Reserve System of this Nation. Mr. Eccles was asked during the Senate hearings regarding the silver-purchase program, and Mr. Eccles, the head of the Federal Reserve System of the United States said:

Mr. ECCLES. The domestic-silver program which could continue for subsidiary coinage for commercial purposes, and even to the extent of issuing the silver certificates for the domestic silver—it could continue for a very, very long period without having any appreciable effect upon our monetary system. It is a comparatively small amount. But when you buy the world's silver you tend to destroy the use of silver elsewhere in the world. That has been the effect, and I think the policy has had a great deal to do with that.

That is the statement of the Chairman of the Federal Reserve System of the United States. I wish to quote further from the remarks of the same gentleman. Mr. Eccles was asked a question and he answered:

Mr. ECCLES. That price tends to bring silver here. It appears to be more than other nations will pay for silver; otherwise it would not flow to this country as it does.

Again I take the Senate to the committee hearings where Mr. Eccles is testifying. He said:

I have made this statement before the special committee which I think would indicate my feelings with reference to the President's silver program, that I did not know anything that tended to destroy ultimately the domestic silver industry as thoroughly as the present silver policy.

That is the head of the Federal Reserve System of the United States speaking. That is what he thinks of the silver-purchase policy of the present administration of which he is a part. I quote from him again:

Silver is only a part of the picture, but it is an important factor in it; and to the extent certainly that we buy foreign silver it seems to me to be wholly and totally unnecessary.

That, again, is the Chairman of the Federal Reserve Board speaking—the head of the great Federal Reserve System of this country, a man who is a part of this administration, who at this time is speaking for it. He condemns the action of Mr. Roosevelt and the administration right down the line on the silver policy they are following.

Again Mr. Eccles speaks:

Silver, however, is of almost no use as an international reserve. Foreign governments and central banks do not want it. While it may be dumped on the commercial markets like other commodities, any attempt to sell a substantial amount overnight in order to meet a sudden adverse balance of payments would disrupt the market. Not only would the Government suffer heavy losses on its silver sales but it would almost certainly be unable to realize the large amounts that are often necessary for the purpose of settling international balances. Silver cannot serve, therefore, the chief purpose of a metallic reserve today.

I again quote from the Chairman of the Federal Reserve Board of the United States speaking about this policy of his own administration:

MR. ECCLES. Well, of course, what we could do is this: We could take anything that a foreigner might give us, that we did not need, for instance, and give him our goods. Now, whether it is silver or some other metal or some other product, we could take it as well as we could take silver, and as a result we would find a foreign market for our goods. Then we could issue money against what we took, whether it happened to be copper or seashells or what not. We could issue money to pay for what we took, or we could give a foreign loan; and the foreigners would spend the money. We would get export trade that way. The point I am trying to make is that there is no particular argument from a monetary or a credit standpoint to justify our continued purchase of foreign silver. As I said awhile ago, the question of a broader policy, outside the monetary field, that might justify the purchase of silver from Mexico or China or other countries, is another matter.

Mr. President, this situation is rather amusing to me. If this matter is so important to the administration, rather than getting an advisory opinion from that great legal authority, Mr. Murphy, the Attorney General of the United States, why did not the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY] and other administration leaders, go around by the front door; why did they not bring up a new bill and let it be before the Senate on its merits rather than go around the back door and proceed by trickery to try to obtain the same results?

Mr. President, this is a serious issue. The issue should have been ended at midnight of Friday, June 30. Instead, as a result of Mr. Murphy's opinion, the issue was prolonged and is now before the United States Senate. I believe that as representatives of the American people Senators will find today a good time to show their independence of the executive branch. Now is a good time to show that we have three branches of our Federal Government, and that we are a component part of the legislative branch; that we have a definite duty to perform; and that we will not be bamboozled into doing something that is not right.

Mr. President, many authorities in this country have expressed opinions upon the various parts of the measure before us. In Friday's debate many of those authorities were quoted. I have before me a booklet published by the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York. In this booklet is a report of the committee on finance and currency, together with the resolution adopted by the chamber, comprising eight points. I ask that the pamphlet be printed in the RECORD as a part of my remarks.

There being no objection, the pamphlet was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[At the regular monthly meeting of the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York, held November 3, 1933, the following resolutions and report, submitted by its committee on finance and currency, were unanimously adopted:]

REPEAL OF SILVER PURCHASE ACT URGED

To the Chamber of Commerce:

The committee on finance and currency offers the following resolutions:

"Resolved, That the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York urges upon the President and Congress the prompt repeal of the Silver Purchase Act of 1934 and the termination of all buying of silver bullion by the Government for the following reasons:

"1. The Silver Purchase Act has failed to achieve any of its major objectives and has proved of no economic value whatsoever to the Nation.

"2. The Government's efforts to bring about international co-operation for the wider use of silver as a monetary metal have resulted in complete failure. Silver coinage has been demonetized among the nations of the world on an extensive scale and China, the last large country using silver as a money standard, has been forced to adopt a managed currency. Instead of increasing our commerce with China, the American silver policy demoralized her currency structure and alienated her goodwill.

"3. Treasury buying of silver bullion has further increased the liabilities of the Federal Government, which stood at $38,429,779.826 on October 15 last, and has reduced confidence in the Nation's currency both at home and abroad.

"4. In its efforts to raise the price of silver to levels entirely unwarranted by the large world supplies and limited world demands for the metal, the United States Government has spent on an experiment previously proved unsound upwards of a billion dollars of the taxpayers' money—public funds which could have been used advantageously for relief or which would have helped reemployment if devoted to the rehabilitation of private industry.

"5. Although the United States Treasury on June 30 last held approximately one-seventh of all the silver the world had produced in nearly four and one-half centuries—silver for which it had no use and could not dispose of without causing a collapse of world prices and panic—the Secretary of the Treasury was powerless to cease buying more because the Government was still short nearly 1,000,000,000 ounces of the amount required under the Silver Purchase Act to bring the silver holdings up to one-quarter of the monetary value of the combined gold and silver holdings.

"6. Foreign silver-producing countries, led by Mexico, have been the greatest beneficiaries in the aggregate of the Silver Purchase Act. For only about 13 percent of the total silver purchases of the United States Treasury since 1934 has been the product of mines in the United States.

"7. While it is true that the Government has paid United States producers higher prices than it paid for foreign silver, this subsidy has been of direct benefit only to a few mining States whose combined population equals but a very small percentage of the total population of the country. Unfortunately, this benefit to a few has been at the expense of the taxpayers of the Nation as a whole in an amount many times the amount of benefit to the few.

"8. In urging that the Treasury end its purchases of silver, your committee is mindful of the disastrous results of the 15-year period of silver bullion buying by the Government which undermined national credit and was finally terminated by repeal in 1893, when the country was in the midst of a panic for which the silver policy was held largely responsible. While our huge gold reserves today place the country in a much stronger financial position than it was in 1893 when the Government was endeavoring to maintain at par nearly 600 millions of silver with a gold reserve of less than 100 million, nevertheless the continued wastage of public funds by expending hundreds of millions of dollars annually for useless silver cannot but have a weakening influence upon the credit of a nation whose public debt is fast approaching the 40-billion-dollar mark; and be it further

"Resolved, That copies of this report be sent to the President, the Secretary of the Treasury, and the Members of Congress."

Respectfully submitted.

A SURVEY OF THE $1,000,000,000 SILVER EXPERIMENT SOME RESULTS OF UNITED STATES SILVER POLICY

The United States Government now holds approximately one-seventh of all the silver the world has produced since Columbus discovered America.

Most of it was purchased in the last 4 years. It costs the taxpayers around $1,000,000,000. About 35,000 tons of the silver are now being buried in Government vaults.

The Treasury is still buying more silver. On June 30 last it was nearly a billion ounces short of the amount required to reach the monetary ratio to gold holdings.

World production of silver has increased 62 percent since 1933. Last year's production set new high record.

The United States purchased one and one-half times the total world production 1934-37 inclusive.

Foreign silver producers have reaped the greatest benefit from America's Silver Purchase Act of 1934.

Treasury buying advanced open-market prices of foreign silver to 81 cents an ounce in 1935. They are now around 43 cents.

China, an intended beneficiary of United States silver philanthropy has become a victim, driven to a managed currency.

United States as buyer now controls world silver market. Should it attempt to sell, world price collapse and panic would ensue.

The United States Government on June 30 last, the end of the 1938 fiscal year, held approximately 2,373,000,000 ounces of silver, the greatest accumulation of that metal the world has ever known—one-seventh, in fact, of all the silver the world is known to have produced in nearly 4½ centuries. Most of this silver was acquired by the Treasury in the last 4 years. It cost the taxpayers around $1,000,000,000.

But even with this great hoard of silver, the Government still needed almost another billion ounces—968,800,000, to be more exact—to bring its holdings up to the metallic base of the currency. For on that date—June 30, 1938—the amount of gold in reserves stood at $12,962,000,000 (On October 5, 1938, $13,812,000,000) and Congress, in June 1934, had decreed that the Secretary of the Treasury should purchase silver until the total holdings (at a statutory value of $1.29 an ounce) equalled 25 percent of the monetary value of the combined gold and silver held by the Treasury.

On the same day when the Treasury held nearly two and one-half billion ounces of silver and still was short almost another billion ounces of its requirement, as stated above, it hired one Peter J. Malley, a New York truckman, to transport 1,000,000 72-pound bars, about half of its silver hoard, to West Point for burial, figuratively speaking, in the ground from whence it came.

Mr. Malley's specific job is to haul about 35,000 short tons of the silver from depositories in New York to the new steel and concrete vault on the grounds of the United States Military Academy. He began his task on July 5 last and is now running about twenty 7-ton truckloads a day. He expects to finish his work sometime next January, if all goes well.

For his work Mr. Malley will be paid $157,000 by the Government. The silver storage vault cost $529,000. A force of 75 mint supervisors and laborers are assisting in the movement of the silver and the services of 55 coast guardsmen are being used to protect the contents of Mr. Malley's trucks on their 50-mile trek. So it will be seen that the moving job makes a sizable addition to the cost of administering the Silver Purchase Act, which for the fiscal year 1937 was $287,000, exclusive of the cost of silver. When the act was approved, $500,000 was appropriated to carry it out.

UNITED STATES SILVER POLICY SPEEDS UP WORLD PRODUCTION

The enactment of the Silver Purchase Act in June 1934 was an open invitation to the silver-producing nations of the world to speed up their production and they lost no time in accepting. Each year since, world production has increased. In 1933 it was 169,000,000 ounces; in 1937 it reached 276,000,000 (estimated), establishing a new record and showing an increase of 62 percent over 1933. Large as this record 1937 production was, however, it fell far short of meeting the demands of Treasury buying that year. This situation has held true ever since the Silver Purchase Act went into effect.

Among foreign countries, Mexico, as the world's largest producer of silver, has profited extensively from the beneficent silver policy of the United States. Her production jumped from 63,000,000 ounces in 1933, the year before the last Silver Purchase Act became operative, to 88,000,000 in 1937, while that of Canada increased from 15,000,000 to 24,000,000 in the same period. (The figures for the year 1937 are taken from Handy and Harman reports and are subject to revision.)

The United States Mint reports show the production of the leading foreign silver-producing countries for the years 1933 and 1936, the latest year available, as follows:

	1933	1936	Percent of increase
Mexico.....	68,101,062	77,463,901	14
Canada.....	15,187,063	18,231,419	20
New South Wales.....	8,221,271	9,150,000	11
Peru.....	6,760,534	19,901,309	194
Japan.....	5,938,842	9,606,432	61
Bolivia.....	5,469,069	10,723,333	96

For the last 4 years the United States has purchased more silver each year than the world produced each year. In 1935 it acquired two and one-half times what the world produced that year, as the following table made from compilations by Handy and Harman shows:

Year ended Dec. 31—	World production	United States acquisitions	Total United States holdings

The report of the Secretary of the Treasury for the fiscal year 1935, which shows acquisitions of silver totaling 437,798,807 ounces for the 12 months ended June 30, describes on page 42 the extent of the Government's buying during the first full year's operation of the Silver Purchase Act as follows:

"It is estimated that the total acquired was 12 times as much silver as was produced in the United States in the same period, 17.5 times as much of that production as was available for monetary use, 2.2 times the total world production, and 2.9 times the current world output available for monetary use."

UNITED STATES HOLDS ONE-SEVENTH OF SILVER WORLD PRODUCED SINCE 1493

The world production of silver from 1493 to 1936, inclusive, a period of nearly 450 years, totaled 16,170,080,050 ounces, according to a table published in the annual report of the Director of the United States Mint. The estimated world production for 1937 was 276,000,000 ounces, a new high record; and if production in the first half of 1938 kept pace with the record year 1937, this would make the total world production from 1493 to June 30, 1938, approximately 16,584,080,050 ounces. On the last-named date the United States, with estimated holdings of 2,373,000,000 ounces (most of it acquired in a period of 4 years), had possession of approximately one-seventh of all the silver the world has produced in nearly four and one-half centuries.

Official figures on Government silver operations for the fiscal year 1938 are not yet available. Preliminary reports which are subject to considerable revision have been made public by agencies of the Treasury Department, however. They show that the Government acquired 405,360,000 ounces during the 12 months ended June 30 last. Of this quantity, 68,117,400 ounces were purchases of American-mined silver. While this is the largest amount of domestic silver acquired by the Treasury in any fiscal year since the purchase act became effective, it represents but 17 percent of its total purchases for the year.

FOREIGN PRODUCERS REAP MOST BENEFIT OF UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT BUYING

In other words, five-sixths of the total amount of the Government's acquisitions during the fiscal year 1938 were of no benefit to the American silver-mining industry. Despite the higher prices paid for domestic silver, foreign producers and sellers as a whole, due to the preponderant volume of their sales, were the chief beneficiaries, as they have been ever since the Silver Purchase Act went into effect.

During the 4 fiscal years 1934-37 the Treasury spent nearly three-quarters of a billion dollars for its total purchases of silver. The average cost on a yearly basis ranged from 53 to 64.8 cents an ounce. This was considerably in excess of the open market price, except for the year 1935, when heavy purchases by speculators temporarily advanced prices to a level the Treasury declined to meet, and the Government average price was 4.6 cents lower. The prices paid American producers, as shown by the following table, averaged from 14.2 to 32.2 cents an ounce over the open market price.

The effect of the purchase act on the American silver mining industry was to double the production of domestic silver and quadruple its money value in the short space of 2 years. The production of 1934 was 42 percent greater than 1933; the 1935 production increased 99 percent over 1933 and the 1936 production 177 percent over 1933, according to the Treasury figures. The official production for 1937 has not yet been made public by the Treasury Department. Handy & Harman estimate it at 68,400,000 ounces, which would be an increase of 197 percent over 1933.

The Government paid as high as 77.57 cents an ounce for much of that part of its silver hoard acquired from domestic producers. It is now paying the same group 64.64 cents for what it acquires. Silver is selling in the open market in New York at 42.75 cents an ounce. It sold as high as 81 cents in New York in April 1935 when the Government's buying policy led to wild speculation in the world markets.

SILVER A STORMY PETREL IN AMERICA'S FISCAL HISTORY

Silver has played a sinister part in American history commencing with the ill-considered adoption of bimetalism by Alexander Hamilton in 1792 with the same silver dollar we now have and a gold dollar. The result was that our gold was drained to England. In 1834 and 1837 Congress reduced the size of the gold dollar, establishing a ratio of 16 to 1. This diminished the floating supply of silver change in the country to such an extent that it created havoc in retail trade.

Silver production was greatly stimulated by the Bland-Allison Act in 1878 and the position of the silver interests in Congress strengthened. In 1890 they helped pass the Sherman Act, one of the provisions of which forced the Government into the market for silver to about twice the extent it had been. Together, the Sherman and the Bland-Allison Acts resulted in the Government coining nearly 600,000,000 silver dollars.

The dollars were refused in payment of foreign debts and our supply of gold began to shrink. In 1893 a severe depression set in and the country was in the midst of a panic when President Cleveland, denouncing currency experiments which jeopardized the soundness of the people's money, called a special session of Congress and the Silver Purchasing Act of 1890 was repealed. This ended a 15-year period of silver buying which cost the Government $464,210,000 and was undermining the credit of the Nation.

The country failed to learn a lesson from this, however. Again the silver forces urged bimetalism as a cure for the depression for which the lately repealed silver legislation had been in large part responsible. In 1896 Bryan's "cross of gold" speech brought silver violently into the foreground where it continued a subject of bitter controversy until the depression ended in 1897.

WORLD DEPRESSION REVIVED AGITATION FOR REHABILITATION OF SILVER

It has been the unfortunate history of silver that it is called upon to play a prominent part on the world's monetary stage only in times of acute depression or national crisis and that with the return of prosperity or the ending of the emergency it is retired to the minor role it fills in its relationship to gold in the economic life of nations and the useful place it occupies as a commodity in the arts and industries.

During the World War, in 1918, England was hard pressed for silver because of the continuous presentation of rupee currency for redemption in silver in India where she was buying large war supplies. The United States had a reserve of some 568 million silver dollars in the Treasury and sold England 200 million of them which were immediately coined into the form of rupees. This reduction in the silver stock of the United States was a short-lived blessing, however, as Senator PITTMAN of the silver-producing state of Nevada succeeded in having it replaced in the Treasury vaults at a buying price of not less than $1 an ounce.

The world depression gave the silver interests an excuse for a renewed demand for the rehabilitation of silver. Arguing that the supply of hard money was insufficient to meet the requirements of modern domestic and foreign commerce and that the limit of the world's gold supplies had been reached, they suggested in 1930 that the hard money of the world should be replenished with silver.

One of the arguments of these enthusiasts was that if the price of silver could be raised to $1.29 an ounce, the former United States coinage rate, the purchasing power of China, the only important country then on a silver standard, would be increased, American exports to China could expand, bimetalism would be established, and the world depression halted.

WISDOM FROM CHINA

The fallacy of this theory was pointed out in the August 1933 bulletin of the National City Bank in an article entitled "The World's Greatest Silver Hoard," when it quoted the following excerpt from a statement by Li Ming, chairman of the Bank of China, made when he was in New York in 1934:

"The theory that by raising the price of silver China would be able to buy more in America, or America would be able to sell more to China, is not economically sound. America's purchasing power is not measured by the gold you possess, but is measured by the productivity of your national wealth. China, like every other country, pays for her imports chiefly by her exports. The silver in her possession, no matter how big that amount may be, does not help much in her purchases abroad. She will have to depend upon her exports and her exports alone."

UNITED STATES "HELD THE BAG" IN EIGHT-NATION SILVER PACT

When the World Economic Conference met in London in June 1933 an agreement for holding or buying silver, initiated by the American delegates, was entered into between them and the delegates of seven other nations. The nations were China, India, and Spain, as the holders and users of large quantities of silver, on one hand; and Mexico, Canada, Peru, Australia, and the United States, as the principal silver producers, on the other hand.

The United States agreed to purchase annually about not less than 24.4 million ounces of American mine production and Mexico 7.2 million ounces, Canada 1.7 million ounces, Peru 1.1 million ounces, and Australia 0.6 million ounces, of their respective domestic production. This made a grand total of 35,000,000 ounces to be taken off the market annually. It will be noted that Mexico, the largest silver-producing country in the world, was to purchase only 20.5 percent of the 35,000,000 ounces agreed upon in the pact, while the United States, despite its smaller production, was to purchase 69.7 percent.

It is assumed that these countries lived up to their agreement as the United States did. What benefit, if any, the United States derived from this self-inspired agreement is difficult to estimate. It is significant, however, that when it expired on December 31, 1937, not one of the eight countries which signed the agreement suggested a renewal of it. And there is reason to believe that most of the silver purchased by the other four producing countries finally was dumped on the United States, much to the relief of its holders.

The United States began its purchases of silver under the agreement in December 1933 at 64.64 cents an ounce, the Government exacting 50 percent of the coinage rate of $1.29+ as seigniorage. At that time the market price of silver was about 43 cents. This was the initial step, leading to the accumulation of our present stupendous hoard of silver.

In June 1934, following the Gold Standard Act, the present Silver Purchase Act became a law. This measure, which was acclaimed by the mining interests and speculators, directed the Secretary of the Treasury to purchase silver at a reasonable price up to the statutory value of $1.29+ an ounce until the Treasury held silver equal to one-quarter of the monetary value of its combined gold and silver holdings.

In August of that year silver was nationalized by Presidential proclamation and existing commercial stocks taken over by the Government at a fixed price, the Treasury claiming the difference between that price and $1.29+ as seigniorage. The Treasury began buying silver in the London market and speculation became increasingly active with prices rising.

CHINA BECOMES VICTIM OF UNITED STATES ALTRUISM

In September China protested that any further increases in the price of silver would cause her serious injury and possibly severe panics. The following month the Chinese Government placed an embargo on exports of silver, and smuggling of silver from China for sale to the United States Government developed on a large scale.

What had happened was that China had become a victim instead of a beneficiary of the American silver policy. The immediate effect of the American silver policy on China was ably summed up in the bulletin of the National City Bank previously referred to, which said in part:

"During the depression silver had been falling in price, like other commodities. It had fallen from an average of 58 cents an ounce in 1928 to 27.8 cents in 1932. But in 1933, with the dollar off gold, and silver lifted by the eight-power agreement, silver averaged 34.7 cents. In 1934, with the aid of the United States Government, it averaged 47.9 cents. In the latter part of 1934, with the Treasury buying aggressively and the goal of $1.29+ in view, speculation became very active.

"However, instead of benefiting China and our trade with China, the rising price of silver had the opposite effect. Silver being the money, the rising price for the silver coins meant lower prices for the products of the country. Even in 1932 and 1933 the low prices for Chinese products had caused an adverse trade balance, with an outflow of both silver and gold. Now, Chinese traders were shipping silver direct to New York, to be sold to the United States Government."

In 1935 the price of foreign silver delivered at New York declined to 43 cents an ounce from a high of 81 cents, the Treasury still continuing to pay 77.57 cents to American producers. In November of that year China completed its nationalizing of silver and adopted a managed paper currency. In May 1936 China made an agreement with the United States to sell an unnamed quantity of silver for dollar credits or gold. This agreement was renewed several times. The United States Treasury has received around 300,000,000 ounces of silver from China since the Silver Purchase Act went into effect in 1934, it is estimated.

UNITED STATES SILVER POLICY HAS CREATED A FRANKENSTEIN

The 2,373,000,000 ounces of silver the United States held on June 30, 1938, had a statutory value of more than $3,061,000,000, but a value at open-market prices of only $1,020,000,000. Both valuations are fictitious in the sense that they never could be realized, for at no time since the Silver Purchase Act went into effect in 1934 could the Treasury have offered silver for sale without demoralizing the silver markets and causing a price collapse and panic of world-wide proportions.

In other words, the silver-buying policy of the United States Government has created a Frankenstein of incalculable potentialities for economic catastrophe not only nationally but internationally. It is fortunate—in the sense only that it prevents such disaster—that the Silver Purchase Act is still in effect. In every other sense it seems a tragedy that the United States Government ever allowed itself to be misled into becoming the world's dumping ground for unwanted silver. For even the mining interests in the seven principal silver-producing States—Nevada, Idaho, Montana, New Mexico, Arizona, Utah, and Colorado—which temporarily are profiting from the bonus prices the Treasury pays for American-mined silver, must view with grave concern the time when the United States, which today controls world silver prices, will cease buying.

It is true that purchases by the United States Government have removed a large part of the world's floating supply of silver from the market, but the concentration of so huge a quantity of silver in the hands of a single nation is and will continue to be a depressing influence on silver prices. Silver, unlike many other commodities, is not perishable. It diminishes very little in actual use.

When the United States ceases to purchase silver, as it eventually must and permits its free flow through normal channels of trade, how many years must elapse before it safely can begin to dispose of part of its accumulations? There is little inclination on the part of any nation today to increase the use of silver for its coinage. Neither India nor China now use silver as a hoarding medium as extensively as they did in the past. The quantity which can be consumed by the arts and industries will continue to be limited unless invention produces some new large-scale demand for the metal.

What is going to happen when, as Congress has decreed it should, the amount of silver held by the Treasury reaches the total required to make its statute-fixed value equal to one-quarter of the monetary value of the combined holdings of gold and silver?

What will happen should Congress, pausing to listen to the protests of the taxpayers who are footing the bill, count the cost of the Nation's futile silver philanthropy and suddenly decide, as it did in the great emergency of 1893, to put an end to such unsound expenditure of public funds and repeal the Silver Purchase Act?

THE LATEST PROPOSAL ON SILVER

Congress has shown indifference to the Government's present silver policy since its inception in 1933-34. At the last session Senator JOSIAH W. BAILEY of North Carolina, did offer a resolution directing that silver purchases by the Treasury should cease, but nothing came of it.

The latest proposal for further Government action on silver emanated from Senator PITTMAN on September 28 last and is truly philanthropic. He advocated that in order to dispose of the large cotton carry-over the Government should trade 10 pounds of cotton for 1 ounce of silver in the foreign markets. In this way, he estimated, 13,400,000 bales of 500 pounds each could be disposed of in the foreign markets. With the 670,000,000 ounces of silver thus acquired he proposed that the farmer should be paid for his cotton at the rate of 12.9 cents a pound by the issuance of certificates (paper money) against the silver.

Under the caption "It's All Done With Silver!" the New York Herald Tribune on September 30 commented editorially on Senator PITTMAN's scheme, saying in part:

"Here is the perfect solution of a (the cotton surplus) problem—a solution under which everybody wins and nobody loses. The farmer who, if he had to sell his cotton in the open market, would be lucky to get 8 cents a pound would receive 12.9 cents. The foreign importer would receive a discount as handsome as the farmer's premium. All he would have to do would be to buy an ounce of silver, which would cost him 43 cents, and exchange it for 10 pounds of cotton worth, at present market quotations, 80 cents. Nor would the Treasury be holding the bag, because the Treasury—thanks to some admirable spade work on the part of Senator PITTMAN 5 years ago—can take in 43 cents worth of silver, and presto! issue silver certificates against it at the rate of $1.29 in paper money for every ounce of metal.

"Of course, this little operation would dilute our currency to the extent of about $900,000,000 and thereby place a tax on each and every one of our citizens of about 16 percent in the form of higher prices. But, after all, think of what a fine thing it would be for the cotton farmer. And the foreign importer. Oh, yes—and the silver boys."

GOVERNMENT "PHILANTHROPY" AT THE TAXPAYERS' EXPENSE

The American silver-buying policy was pointedly referred to by the New York Times on October 14 last in an editorial commenting on Mexican Government purchases of wheat from our Government at less than the market price. The editorial, headed "Buy Dear, Sell Cheap," illustrates how unsound economic theories of government—financed by the taxpayer's dollar—work out in practice:

"The Mexican Government is buying from our Government 3,000,000 bushels of wheat at less than the market price. Our Government—I. e., our taxpayers—will take the loss. We continue to buy from our own producers silver at a price much higher than the market, and we continue to buy from Mexico and other countries silver that we do not need at a price made artificially high by our buying. Thus we lose money both ways. If an individual thought that he was benefiting himself by selling his own goods much below the market price and buying other people's goods that he did not need at prices higher than there was any good reason to pay, the authorities would begin to look into his sanity. The same policies, when we follow them as a nation, are hailed as masterly economic maneuvers."

CHAMBER FOUGHT UNITED STATES SILVER BUYING 60 YEARS AGO

It is interesting to note that since as far back as 1878 when the Bland bill was pending in Congress, the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York opposed purchases of silver by the Government and the compulsory coinage of silver dollars. In that year the chamber warned that the proposed legislation "had wrought most unfavorably upon the commercial interests of our city, retarding recovery from the effects of the revulsion of 1873 by extending the distrust which was before limited to individuals, corporations, and States to the United States Government itself." In 1879, the year following its passage, the chamber declared that the act would subject the currency to "violent perturbations, breeding speculation, and ending in widespread ruin."

In 1883 it urged repeal of the Bland Act and in 1884, in resolutions sent to Congress, pleaded for suspension of the act for at least 2 years. In 1885 the chamber memorialized Congress, stating that the compulsory coinage of silver dollars had reached "such an extent that its further continuance perils the credit of the Government and the prosperity of the people."

The chamber protested to Congress when in 1890 the silver interests succeeded in having a clause put into the Sherman bill compelling the Government to purchase  $4\frac{1}{4}$  million ounces of silver a month. In 1891 it named a special committee to prepare a memorial to Congress urging repeal of the silver clause in the Sherman Act.

Presented to Congress in March 1892, when depression was laying hold of the country, the memorial contained much that is food for serious thought today in any consideration of where the present silver policy of the Government may lead the Nation. A great deal of what the chamber said nearly half a century ago might be applied with equal force to the situation today—for example:

"The attempt thus made to advance the price of silver by legislation has, therefore, not only utterly failed, but has had a most disastrous effect upon the general business of the country. Confidence has been impaired, and the investment of capital in new enterprises has been arrested at a time when our bountiful harvests and the foreign demand for our food products ought to have produced an era of progress and prosperity. . . . and it is the deliberate opinion of the chamber that [if the silver law were repealed] new life would be infused into business, and the close of the century would witness a development of wealth and prosperity unequalled in any previous age or country."

In 1893 the Nation was in the midst of panic, for which the silver policy of the Government was held chiefly responsible. There was grave apprehension both at home and abroad as to the ability of the Government to maintain at par nearly six hundred millions of silver with a gold reserve of less than one hundred millions. The chamber, after having repeatedly urged Congress to stop silver buying, finally besought President Cleveland to call a special session of Congress. This was done and the silver-purchase law repealed, with the result that confidence in the credit of the Nation was restored and the panic checked.

In 1896 and again in 1900 the chamber appealed to "the commercial bodies and businessmen of the United States" to unite in a vigorous effort to urge the selection of delegates to the political conventions of both great parties who were in favor of the maintenance of the gold standard of value. The appeals said the continued agitation for free coinage of silver blocked a revival of confidence and national business prosperity.

When the present Silver Purchase Act was pending in Congress in 1934, the chamber unanimously opposed its passage, warning that Government buying of silver bullion could not possibly promote sound recovery, but, on the other hand, would increase the liabilities of the Federal Government and reduce confidence in the Nation's currency.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, I have before me an article entitled "What Devaluation Means," by Walter E. Spahr, professor of economics in New York University, in which he discusses the question rather briefly. I ask that this article be included in the RECORD as a part of my remarks.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

WHAT DEVALUATION MEANS

(By Walter E. Spahr, professor of economics, New York University, and secretary-treasurer of the Economists' National Committee on Monetary Policy)

Discussions of further devaluation of the dollar have recently been rather widespread. Although the denial of the Secretary of the Treasury of any intent on the part of the President to devalue the currency further may temporarily minimize such discussions, it seems highly probable that the question will continue to plague us from time to time. The Thomas Inflation Act of May 12, 1933, as amended, gives the President the authority to reduce the weight of the standard gold dollar unit to 50 percent of its previous weight. Until this act is repealed the question will continue to arise as to whether or not he will exercise this power despite Secretary Morgenthau's encouraging antidevaluation statement. Just prior to the Secretary's statement, various farm bureaus, encouraged and coached by devaluationists and inflationists, were passing resolutions in favor of further devaluation and trying to stimulate sufficient sentiment in its behalf to put effective pressure upon the President and Secretary of the Treasury.

Entirely apart from the misconceptions and fallacies which characterize a large proportion of the statements of the advocates of further devaluation of the dollar, it is clear that the general public has a very inadequate understanding of the nature and implications of devaluation. Considering these times, and the unsatisfactory status of the monetary issues in this country, it is important that the American people have a proper appreciation of what is involved in currency devaluation.

HOW TO CALCULATE DEVALUATION

Devaluation of a currency involves the reduction in the weight of the standard monetary unit by government act. For example, our Government reduced the weight of the gold dollar unit on January 31, 1934, from 23.22 grains (fine) to 13.714 (fine), or from 25.8 grains (nine-tenths fine) to 15 5/21 grains (nine-tenths fine). This meant that an ounce of fine gold, weighing 480 grains, would now coin up into $35, instead of $20.67. In other words, our Government agreed to pay $35, instead of $20.67, for each ounce of fine gold. This reduction in the weight of the gold dollar unit by approximately 41 percent gave us a gold dollar unit only 59.06 percent as heavy as formerly. Our total gold supply, when divided into these "59-percent" dollars, yielded two and eight-tenths billion dollars of profit, all taken over by the Federal Government.

The relationships between the gold dollar and all foreign monetary gold units were legally altered. It now required 69 percent more of these "59-percent" dollars to equal in gold what the former "100-percent" dollars would equal in foreign gold. Foreign-exchange parities were thus marked up 69 percent. This is equivalent to raising the tariffs by 69 percent against all imports. It also meant that it would cost the foreigner 41 percent less in his gold units to purchase the same number of dollars formerly purchased. Foreign debt obligations to us were written down 41 percent. Our debt obligations to foreigners in terms of their gold unit were increased 69 percent.

PRICES OF GOODS IN FOREIGN TRADE

The prices of goods entering foreign trade could be affected in several ways. Our exporters might leave their dollar prices unchanged, and thus reduce the prices to foreign buyers in terms of foreign currencies by 41 percent. Or, the prices in foreign currencies could be left unchanged and the prices in dollars could theoretically be increased by 69 percent. But this could not happen unless foreigners were charged more than our own people at the point of origin for the goods; and a mark-up of 69 percent for all buyers, domestic and foreign, could not take place because demand would decline. It is quite probable, therefore, that prices would fall somewhere between these extremes, thus giving both the American exporter and the foreign importer some benefit from the change in the weight and purchasing power of the dollar.

The same general readjustments, of a converse order, would affect the prices of our imports.

But, in addition, the prices of both exports and imports would be affected by changes in demand and supply, following the initial changes in price, and by tariffs erected to offset currency devaluation.

As a consequence of the operation of these various factors, the usual offhand generalizations regarding the effects of devaluation upon prices of goods entering foreign trade are often unreliable.

EFFECT ON DOMESTIC DEBTS AND PRICES

Domestically, devaluation would have no effect whatever upon internal debts. These are expressed in domestic dollars, and can be paid only in these dollars which at present are inconvertible paper or silver certificates or silver. Domestic debtor and creditor relations could be affected by devaluation only if domestic debtors could hold or obtain the gold units with which to pay. Consequently, the frequent assertion that devaluation lessened the burden of domestic debts is fallacious.

The effects of devaluation upon domestic prices are extremely uncertain and difficult to trace. These effects are reflected back on domestic prices from the changed prices or profits of commodities entering foreign trade. The net effects of devaluation on domestic prices are, therefore, unpredictable and beyond any accurate ascertainment.

NOT THE SAME AS CURRENCY INFLATION

Nor is devaluation the same as currency inflation. Inflation exists when purchasing power, either in the form of money or credit, has been extended to such a degree that it cannot be liquidated without loss when the debt becomes payable. Any transaction which makes possible such losses is an inflationary procedure.

Devaluation changes the size of the gold unit; inflation takes place on the unit in existence. Devaluation produces more gold units; inflation does not. Devaluation changes legal foreign exchange parities; inflation does not. Devaluation operates on prices through its effects on the prices of goods entering foreign trade and, consequently, only indirectly on domestic prices; inflation operates directly on domestic prices.

SOME FUNDAMENTALS TO BE CONSIDERED

Devaluation is a device which we, like other nations, used to make our currency purchase less. But abroad, the countries devaluated because they had previously inflated their currencies to such an extent that their gold reserves were inadequate to support their outstanding notes and deposits. The United States, however, devaluated the dollar not because her gold reserves were inadequate but as a device to encourage exports and to raise domestic prices. Such a procedure was unprecedented. The theory underlying it was unsound, and the consequences flowing from this act have in general refuted the contentions of its advocates.

Our devaluation of the dollar involved an attempt to exchange more of our goods for less currency in terms of gold. Carried to extremes it would involve giving away our goods for nothing but pieces of paper. Competitive devaluation throughout the world is a struggle of nations to exchange their goods for less and less of the importers' gold. This ridiculous struggle to see who can give away the most goods for the least gold in return rests upon a confusion between real wealth and money. Devaluation also has the foolish effect of increasing the cost of our debts to foreigners, and of reducing the cost of their debts to us.

A careful presentation of evidence regarding the consequences of currency devaluation involves the examination of a tremendous mass of statistical data. Apparently there is no simple way to summarize such detailed factual data for the public so that the issues involved can be removed from serious debate. It must suffice here to say that it cannot be demonstrated that our devaluation of the dollar had the effect upon our domestic price level that the principal advocates for devaluation claimed that it would have. There is no predictable relationship between a given percentage of devaluation of our currency unit and the ultimate effect upon the price level. Factors to be considered are: The importance of foreign trade; the changes in supply of and demand for commodities and services; inflation; tariffs; governmental policies; prosperity and depression; the political situation nationally and internationally; and psychological factors.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, I have before me an editorial from the New York Sun of Friday, June 30, entitled "Roosevelt, Hull, and Mexico," in which the silver situation is dealt with. I ask that the editorial be incorporated in the RECORD as a part of my remarks.

There being no objection, the editorial was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the New York Sun of June 30, 1939]

ROOSEVELT, HULL, AND MEXICO

It is odd to see some tears over the "wrong" which the Senate did Mexico in its action on dollar valuation and silver purchase. A correspondent as experienced as David Lawrence sees the "whole foreign policy of America" put in hazard because the Senate "projected itself" into the relations between the United States and Mexico.

The Senate constitutionally and traditionally has a right to take a hand in foreign affairs. But, aside from that, what are the relations between the United States and Mexico? Two points stick out. The Mexican Government confiscated farm lands owned by Americans and oil lands owned or leased by Americans. It promised to settle for the farms after formal negotiation. But it refused to make even that doubtful promise with regard to the oil lands. In spite of this violation of international law and of common honesty the Roosevelt administration continued to play the Mexican game by buying Mexican silver, thus providing the means by which the Mexican politicians could continue their impudence in the confiscation of the oil lands. The only reasons that have been given for this performance are based on the passion of Secretary Hull and his chief for fattening other nations or governments at the expense of Americans and for turning the other cheek when a swiftly administered kick would be the right gesture. In principle, all the silver purchases were wrong, but to continue them in the case of Mexico was to submit ourselves to robbery and humiliation.

Fond as it is of President Roosevelt and attached as it has been to the international policies of Secretary Hull, the New York Times cannot stomach the murmurs of the State Department about the "serious crisis caused in Mexico." "Are our purchases of Mexican silver," the Times asks, "to be thought of as a form of political blackmail that we must pay to keep more American property in Mexico from being seized?"

The incident is typical of the Roosevelt administration. The President shakes his finger at distant dictators but not as vigorously as he shakes his fist at American business. And when he is confronted by common larceny, thinly veiled as "sovereign right," he and Mr. Hull moan over the plight of the perpetrator of the larceny.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, I have about concluded my remarks on this measure. However, in closing, I wish to say that the individuals who comprise this body must some day answer to the people of the country and to their God for their actions. When the vote is taken this afternoon, it will be a good time to show one's colors and whether or not one is for America first.

Mr. MALONEY. Mr. President, I wish to take just enough time to keep the record clear on the conference report, insofar as I am concerned. I try not to take the time of the Senate, and I do so only on occasions when I feel that I may make at least a slight contribution to the matter under consideration and on occasions when I desire that my own record shall be entirely clear.

Mr. President, I shall vote against the conference report. I shall do so with some reluctance. I am very strongly in favor of continuing to delegate to the President the power to devalue the dollar, and I am sorry there is so much opposition to that delegation of authority. I likewise favor a continuation of the stabilization fund.

Like some other Members of the Senate, my knowledge of this particular subject is limited. I feel that we must place our faith in the experts who are charged with the responsibility of our Treasury affairs, and that we should delegate this power to the President because it is sought at an unusual and an uncertain time in the world's history.

The proposal to delegate authority to the President of the United States is not new in the history of our country or in governmental practice. We do it in time of war. It is traditionally a fact that we do it in time of emergency. The powers under consideration were originally delegated at a time of emergency, and I do not believe a single Member of the Congress will dispute the fact that this is an hour of emergency in the world's history. It is a time when dictatorial governments, and other governments not so dictatorial, have placed in the hands of those in charge of monetary affairs the right to regulate the value of money.

It has been said during the debate that there is no need to do this particular thing; that it is not a matter of importance that this power rest with the President of the United States, because if a sudden emergency should arise, Congress could be called into session, or, if it were in session, could act upon this particular proposal.

Mr. President, it seems to me that those expressing that viewpoint entirely lose sight of the true situation, and do not clearly understand the purpose of giving this power to the President. I have understood that it was desired to have this proposed power in the hands of the President as a sort of defensive threat to those who may endeavor to juggle the finances of other countries and thereby affect our money. If the power is to be used as a defensive threat, if it is to be kept as a weapon of defense, it is fallacious to suggest that the Congress could act, because in my opinion the time when Congress would act according to the proposals of those who have so contended in the debate would probably be entirely too late.

Mr. President, I am in accord with the opinion of the President and the Treasury concerning fixing the price of domestically mined silver. I desire to support the administration in that particular respect; but because in the conference report we are taken outside the field of the administration's desire, and because in the conference report we are asked to set aside the opinion of the Senate in the matter of purchasing foreign silver, I find myself in the unpleasant position of being unable to support the conference report. I believe it would be disastrous to American business to continue the purchase of foreign silver. Earlier in the debate I stated some of the reasons why I thought it would be dangerous to business, and detrimental to the industrial silver interests of the country, and why I thought it was a fallacy, to purchase silver to be buried in the ground up in the State of New York.

Mr. President, I earlier advocated, and I again take the liberty of advocating, that we handle this legislation in a different way—I think the lawyers call it ab initio. That does not mean that we should have to send it back to the committee for hearings and study. There is not a Member of the Senate who does not thoroughly understand the situation and the proposal, and who has not made up his mind how he would vote. This legislation, divided into separate parts, could be reported out of the committee within a very few days. It seems to me—and I am anxious to support the attitude and desire of the administration—that in that way we could come nearer to what the administration desires, and could bring about a continuing authority on the part of the President of the United States to devalue the dollar. The legislation should be submitted in separate parts.

I am very anxious that the power to devalue the dollar be continued in the hands of the President. I am very easily able to set aside the eloquent opinions expressed in the debates a few days ago to the effect that taking the authority away from the President of the United States would remove fear. I think it might intensify fear in some places. I think it might do irreparable harm to our own industry and to what foreign trade and friendly relations we still have.

Mr. President, yesterday afternoon I experienced a daytime train ride through five States. One does not see very many pretentious homes alongside the railroad tracks. Those are likely to be among the shabby homes of the country. In large part the poor people live in such homes. I do not say that I was surprised to see it, but I did rejoice to see the flag of our country in front of or over ever so many of those humble homes in celebration of the Fourth of July. That fact indicated to me that there is a continuing confidence and hope. It indicated to me that there is a continuing great satisfaction in our form of government and the way in which it is being conducted. There is no fear in that quarter, and I do not believe there is much fear in other places. I would rather believe that an ultraconservative press, exercised about a problem which it does not clearly understand, has to some extent whipped up a frenzy in some places over the country in an endeavor to make the people believe that the President has asked for power to which he is not entitled. Let me point out, Mr. President, that no charge has been made that the President of the United States wanted this particular authority or power for a selfish reason. No one can point out how it would in the least bring a profit or any special power to him.

So, Mr. President, having had this chance to have made my own position clear and to have pointed out that there is a way by which we may enact this legislation, in my opinion, as the Treasury officials desire it, I am hopeful that the conferees will have a further chance to consider the conference report, and that, if necessary, the bill will be sent back to the committee to be brought again to the Senate in separate form in order that we may clearly vote on these individual proposals as our consciences dictate and as we feel needs of the country and of the world require.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Connecticut yield to the Senator from Nevada?

Mr. MALONEY. I yield.

Mr. McCARRAN. The Senator very eloquently made mention of his trip through some five States and observing the flag in front of humble homes. Then he made mention of the fact that he did not believe the President of the United States had used or intended to use this power for selfish motives. Did the Senator as he passed through the five States, observing the flag in front of humble homes, not reflect that their occupants might be celebrating the fact that this is a constitutional democracy, that they rely on the Constitution for their individual liberty; that one of the provisions of the Constitution is that the Congress of the United States shall coin money and regulate the value thereof; and that if the framers of the Constitution had intended that that power should be vested in the Chief Executive they would have so ordained? I wonder if the Senator might have dwelt on those thoughts?

Mr. MALONEY. Yes, Mr. President; I have dwelt on those thoughts. I think that the Senator from Nevada, for whom I have so much respect, knows as well as any other Member of the Congress can know at what length I have dwelt on that particular theme.

Mr. McCARRAN. I wish to testify to that at length, because I know the thoughts of the Senator and have been very close to the Senator in those thoughts. We have proceeded together very much along the very same line. It was not with the idea at all of reflecting on the Senator, but rather of expressing my approbation of the Senator's turn of mind and his general view of the subject that I rose to interrupt him.

Mr. MALONEY. I thank the Senator from Nevada. I think the founders clearly pointed out, Mr. President, that they had a feeling that, come an hour of emergency, there was a need for delegating special and unusual power and authority to the President of the United States. We have recognized that sentiment of the founders, and have exercised it in periods of emergency. We are now in such a period of emergency; we are living in a mad world, which, apparently, is more bewildered than at any other time in all its history. The fears of the world have been intensified to a very great degree in the last few weeks, and it is within the realm of possibility that we are at this hour in the shadow of war. Because of the turmoil abroad, and because of existing uncertainty here, it seems to me that we should place our trust in those who have a special knowledge of monetary affairs—those to whom we charge the responsibility of directing our monetary affairs. I do not think that we go outside the Constitution one step or that we go outside the opinions or the aims or the vision of the founders 1 yard in continuing to give the President the authority that is asked for by this particular proposal.

I feel badly when I am not in accord with the views of the Senator from Nevada, because I admire him and his courage and his experience and his judgment so greatly, but I cannot see any violation of any law or any tradition of our country in granting this particular authority. I feel badly, too, for my sake, that I am denied the opportunity to vote for the conference report, simply because I think it is all important that the President should have that continuing authority.

Mr. McKELLAR, Mr. McCARRAN, and Mr. DANAHER addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The junior Senator from Connecticut [Mr. DANAHER] is on the list of speakers at this time. The Chair does not know whether or not he desires to speak.

Mr. DANAHER. I do; but I shall be glad to yield to the Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. McKELLAR. I will take only a few moments. I am perfectly willing to yield, of course, to the Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. DANAHER. I yield to the Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, will the Senator from Tennessee yield to me in order that I may have my remarks follow as closely as possible the remarks of the able senior Senator from Connecticut [Mr. MALONEY]?

Mr. McKELLAR. I yield.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I desire the RECORD to show that I testify in my individual right to the ability and the courage and the determination of the Senator from Connecticut. Everything he has said here today reflects his general attitude and a studiousness, a courage, and an Americanism that is beyond all criticism. Whatever course he may pursue here, everyone who views that course will know it is that of an outstanding, upright, splendid American.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I shall support the conference report and the purpose of my rising is to say a word in answer to the very able argument of the Senator from Vermont [Mr. AUSTIN] this morning. The Senator is a most excellent lawyer, and I have the greatest respect for his views on all legislative subjects; he is a fine legislator; but I think he has made a mistake in the interpretation of this proposed law. In order to show that I am going to refer to opinions, but, first, I desire to read from the bill itself as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That subsection (a) of section 10 of the Gold Reserve Act of 1934, approved January 30, 1934, as amended, is further amended by striking out the period at the end of such subsection and adding thereto the words "and to the Congress."

SEC. 2. Subsection (c) of section 10 of the Gold Reserve Act of 1934, approved January 30, 1934, as amended, is further amended to read as follows:

"(c) All the powers conferred by this section shall expire June 30, 1941, unless the President shall sooner declare the existing emergency ended and the operation of the stabilization fund terminated."

The Senator from Vermont argues that that was a separate provision in the Gold Reserve Act of 1934, that it has been completely eliminated, and is just the same as if the Supreme Court had declared it to be unconstitutional.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a correction?

Mr. McKELLAR. Yes.

Mr. AUSTIN. I think the Senator is laboring under a misapprehension as to the section to which I referred. I call the Senator's attention to it. The conference report refers to title III of the act approved May 12, 1933, which relates to the exercise of the power under section 8 of article I of the Constitution to coin money and regulate the value thereof, and not to the Gold Reserve Act of 1934.

If the Senator is construing my debate regarding the separate and distinct powers as referring to the Gold Reserve Act of 1934 he is in error, because I was following the report of the conferees which points to paragraph (b) (2) of section 43, title III, of the Emergency Farm Mortgage Act of 1933.

Mr. McKELLAR. Then, as I understand, the Senator does not argue as to subsection (c) of the Gold Reserve Act, which reads as follows:

(c) All the powers conferred by this section shall expire 2 years after the date of enactment of this act, unless the President shall sooner declare the existing emergency ended and the operation of the stabilization fund terminated, but the President may extend such period for not more than 1 additional year after such date by proclamation recognizing the continuance of such emergency.

That it has been repealed or otherwise interfered with except as to the time limit?

Mr. AUSTIN. I make the claim that that is dead because of its own limitation.

Mr. McKELLAR. That is what I understood the Senator to say this morning, and I merely wanted to call his attention to it.

Mr. AUSTIN. If the Senator will yield, my interruption—to which the Senator so graciously yielded—had reference to paragraph (2), which was referred to by me as being picked out and separated from all the other parts of section 43.

Mr. McKELLAR. The Senator may have done that; but he also said, as I understood him, that subsection (c) was dead, that it was separate and apart from the rest of the act and was no longer a part of it, and that we could not revive it after the date of expiration. That is the way I understood the Senator's argument.

Mr. AUSTIN. That we could not revive it by language which merely fixed a new expiration date, it being already dead.

Mr. McKELLAR. Yes. In that I disagree with the Senator; and I am going to offer at this point, not a direct decision on the subject, because there are none, as I understood the statement of the Senator this morning. There are no decisions upon the part of our Supreme Court on the direct question whether in this situation a statute can be revived after the date of expiration of the particular powers; but I desire to read what our Supreme Court has said.

In the case of Blair v. Chicago (201 U. S. 400), the Court said, on page 475, in referring to a similar situation, the opinion being by Mr. Justice Day:

The rule is correctly stated in Endlich on Statutes, section 294, as follows: "A statute which is amended is thereafter, and as to all acts subsequently done, to be construed as if the amendment had always been there, and the amendment itself so thoroughly becomes a part of the original statute that it must be construed, in view of the original statute, as it stands after the amendments are introduced and the matters superseded by the amendments eliminated."

Of course the Senator would not argue for a moment that this statute could not have been amended. As I understand, he admits that it could have been amended up until last Friday night at 12 o'clock of June 30, or 1 o'clock of July 1. If it could be amended then, it can be amended now. This statute is not dead, as the Senator argues, but is a part of the act. The only thing that has been interfered with—the only thing that has been put out of commission, so to speak—is the date on which it will end. Now, the Congress, unquestionably having the right to amend this act, does amend it by adding certain words.

In justification of what I have already said, I want to read the only case I have been able to find directly on the point; and this case is directly on the point. It is the case of Crocker v. Crane (21 Wendell 211, 34 Am. Dec. 228). I read first from the statement of the case:

It further appeared that the construction of the road was not commenced until July 1836, after the expiration of the time limited in the original act of incorporation of April 14, 1832. The plaintiffs contended, however, that the provisions of that act were revived and continued by the act of May 7, 1836, by which the time for commencing the work was extended, and the judge so charged the jury against the request of the defendant.

In delivering the opinion of the court, Judge Cowen said:

The second point of the defendant is not well taken. The act of 1836 does not say in terms that the first act shall be revived—

Let me read that again:

The act of 1836—

Just like the act in question here—

does not say in terms that the first act shall be revived; but it does the same thing by implication. The first act had expired by its own provision—

Just as this act expired. This part of the act had expired by its own provisions last Friday night—because the road had not been commenced within 4 years. The last act declares that the time shall be extended, and then professes to amend the former act and repeal parts of it. The meaning of the legislature is perfectly plain; and apt words are not essential.

That is the identical case here. It is directly in point, and in the limited time at my disposal I have found nothing to the contrary.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield at this point?

Mr. McKELLAR. I yield.

Mr. AUSTIN. I do not want to interrupt the Senator at the wrong place.

Mr. McKELLAR. I am glad to yield.

Mr. AUSTIN. I ask the Senator if he does not observe the difference between the statute he is discussing and the statute now under consideration. In that statute there was affirmative language with reference to extension. In this statute there is negative language with reference to termination. That is a great difference.

Mr. McKELLAR. The Court holds that that is not a difference. The Court holds that the language in that case was imperfect, but that the purpose was to extend the prior act, and that is the purpose here. What we want to do is to extend this act; and, believe me, I think we will do it.

Mr. AUSTIN. Another question. I want to give the Senator full opportunity to meet these claims.

Mr. McKELLAR. I shall be glad to do so if I can.

Mr. AUSTIN. The section to which the Senator is addressing his very able discussion is a section of the Gold Reserve Act relating to the emergency fund, the stabilization fund; is it not?

Mr. McKELLAR. Yes.

Mr. AUSTIN. It is all-comprehensive. It says:

All the powers conferred by this section shall expire 2 years after the date of enactment of this act unless the President shall sooner declare the existing emergency ended and the operation of the stabilization fund terminated.

Does not the Senator recognize the difference between a statute which has no attachment to anything else that will keep it alive and the one we are considering, which is all-comprehensive, which there is not anything to help out, and which says that all the powers terminate?

Mr. McKELLAR. The Senator has asked me a question which I shall be very happy to answer if I can; and I think I can.

I see a difference, of course; and the difference is tremendously in favor of the act now before the Congress. The reason is this: In the Wendell case, a New York case, there was a provision that a certain railroad company should commence to build a road within 4 years. The railroad company did not take a step toward building the road within that time. It completely ignored the statute. Not a step was taken; and naturally it could have been argued by my distinguished friend, along the lines that he argued this morning, that that ended the matter, and that the original act was at an end. But the subsequent act of a year or two later was passed, which by implication revived the right to build this road; and the road was built, and the action of the railroad company was upheld.

I say that that is a very much weaker case than the case we have. We are dealing with an act which the Senator will not deny is in full force and effect; every particle of it is in effect except one thing, only one, and that one thing is the time of expiration of the powers of the President over two important features of the act. A bill has been introduced which, in my judgment, amply revives the act. It does not use the word "revived"—no—but what does it say? It provides as follows:

Subsection (c) of section 10 of the Gold Reserve Act of 1934—

There cannot be any doubt about that act. There cannot be any doubt about subsection (c). The bill is just as good as if subsection (c) had been enumerated in the words of this bill, because it states:

Approved January 30, 1934—

And here is the act approved January 30, 1934—

as amended, is further amended to read as follows:

"Is further amended to read as follows:"

(c) All the powers conferred by this section shall expire June 30, 1941, unless the President shall sooner declare the existing emergency ended and the operation of the stabilization fund terminated.

Therefore, Mr. President, taking the statement of what this amendment will do, as given by our own Supreme Court in the case referred to, Blair against Chicago, decided in 1905, when it states that when an act is amended it is "to be construed as if the amendment had always been there," it seems to me that there cannot be the slightest question about the matter. I thought so last week and I think so now a thousand times stronger since I have examined the cases. I am quite sure there cannot be a particle of doubt about the power and authority of the Congress to pass this measure, and that it will date back as if it had been in the act originally, and it would make the time July 1941.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield once more?

Mr. McKELLAR. I am glad to yield.

Mr. AUSTIN. Suppose we should adjourn this session of Congress, and that the Seventy-seventh Congress should pass a measure reading:

All the powers conferred by this section shall expire June 30, 1941, unless the President shall sooner declare the existing emergency ended and the operation of the stabilization fund terminated.

Does the Senator think that would extend the power?

Mr. McKELLAR. I do not know whether the particular words the Senator has mentioned would be the proper ones to use, but offhand I think it would extend the power. I think that the Congress had before the 30th of June 1939 full and complete power to amend the act and extend the time, and I am sure the Senator would not disagree with that statement. If it had the full power then, it has it now. The only verbiage which really refers to the act in any way is in the title, "to extend the time"; but that is immaterial. The act itself is what controls the decisions of the courts, and, in my judgment, our act will be upheld by the courts, if it is ever attacked, and I doubt whether it ever will be attacked.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for another question?

Mr. McKELLAR. I yield.

Mr. AUSTIN. Does the Senator think it makes any difference, so far as the effect of the language to which we have been referring is concerned, whether it is adopted in a conference report today, or in a special, independent statute in another session?

Mr. McKELLAR. It could be done either way. The measure we have acted on is now before us, it has been passed by both Houses, the House has adopted the conference report, and we will probably adopt the conference report this afternoon. If we do, it will be just as good an act of Congress as we could possibly make it at any session.

Mr. AUSTIN. Let me call to the Senator's attention, with his kind permission, a case right in point on that question:

The legislature cannot give life to a dead act by amending certain of its provisions at a later session, so that, if the original act is unconstitutional and void, the amending act is likewise void.

Citing Cobbs v. Home Insurance Company of New York (91 Southern 627; 18 Ala. App. 206), certiorari denied; Ex parte Home Insurance Company of New York (91 Southern 922; 207 Ala. 712).

Mr. McKELLAR. From what is the Senator reading?

Mr. AUSTIN. That is from the Third Decennial Digest, volume 25, under the topic "Statutes."

Mr. McKELLAR. It is not a decision of a court?

Mr. AUSTIN. It refers to a decision of the Alabama Court of Appeals. It is not a court decision itself.

Mr. McKELLAR. It does not report the decision?

Mr. AUSTIN. No.

Mr. McKELLAR. It probably refers only to the general principle referred to by our own Supreme Court in the statement I have just read:

A statute which is amended is thereafter, and as to all acts subsequently done, is to be construed as if the amendment has always been there.

If the act had been declared unconstitutional and a revival of the act was undertaken by an amendment, I imagine the author of the book felt that the revival also would be unconstitutional. But there is no question of the constitutionality of the act here in question. That question has not been raised, and it cannot be raised. The act is on the books in full force and effect, and we are seeking to amend, not a dead act, not an unconstitutional act, but to amend a live act, which is known as the Gold Act of 1934.

Mr. AUSTIN. Does the Senator conceive that an act which is dead for one cause can be more dead for another cause?

Mr. McKELLAR. I do not. There is one portion of the act which the Senator says is dead. The act is not dead. We have a right to refer to an act by name. We need not set out in so many words the entire act in order to amend it. That is rarely done. It is not done in this case. It is not proposed to be done in this case, and if a new bill on the subject were reported by a committee, I doubt whether the entire Gold Act of 1934 would be reported in so many words in the new measure.

Mr. AUSTIN. I have not claimed that the whole act was affected by this, but section 9 is what is affected, and all the powers conferred by that section expired. That is the point in this matter.

Mr. McKELLAR. The general act itself is still in effect and in my judgment is perfectly good.

Mr. TAFT. In the Senator's opinion, where is the $2,000,-000,000 fund now?

Mr. McKELLAR. It is in the hands of the Secretary of the Treasury. It was last Saturday night; I suppose it still is.

Mr. TAFT. Has it not reverted to the general fund of the Treasury? Is not that where it is?

Mr. McKELLAR. Does the Senator mean what has become of the physical money? If so, I could not tell him.

Mr. TAFT. I suppose the gold is just where it was, in the State of Kentucky, between the Senator's State and my State.

Mr. McKELLAR. As to its figurative location, I imagine the Secretary is patiently waiting to see whether the conference report shall be agreed to, and if it is agreed to, the fund will be just where it has been since it was put in the Treasury.

Mr. TAFT. Where would it be if the conference report should be rejected, in the opinion of the Senator?

Mr. McKELLAR. If no bill amending the act should be passed, it would expire, and the fund would go back into the Treasury.

Mr. TAFT. Into the general fund. If it would go back into the general fund, it went back at midnight on June 30. On what other possible date could it go back?

Mr. McKELLAR. I think the Senator is ignoring the fact that whenever an amendment is adopted, as our Supreme Court has held, in the case from which I read a few moments ago, it is just the same as if the amendment had always been in the act; and the fund will be in the same situation.

Mr. TAFT. It seems clear to me that if the fund has reverted, the power might be restored, but there would not be any money in the fund, because it would be necessary to reappropriate the $2,000,000,000, as it was originally appropriated. This was an appropriation out of the general fund to the stabilization fund.

Mr. McKELLAR. That would be a question which might arise. I doubt whether it will arise. I do not think the money will have to be reappropriated. I think the act itself, when it is amended, reappropriates.

Mr. TAFT. It cannot be an appropriation without being an appropriation.

Mr. McKELLAR. If it is necessary to appropriate it, I feel that it will be appropriated.

Mr. TAFT. I take it, then, the Senator is very doubtful about where the money is today.

Mr. McKELLAR. No; I am not doubtful at all. It is in the Treasury of the United States, where it has been all the time.

Mr. TAFT. And if we rejected the conference report today, the Senator would say that it would be restored to the general fund?

Mr. McKELLAR. It would still be in the same place, and would be restored to the general fund, where it was before the bill was passed.

Mr. TAFT. Suppose we should reject the report; would the money go right back, or would the Senator favor sending the matter to conference again? Just when would the Senator have the money revert?

Mr. McKELLAR. I would not do it at all. I would leave it to the Secretary of the Treasury, and it would be honestly done. I have every confidence that it would be fairly and honestly done. The actual physical location of the gold will probably not change at all.

Mr. President, that is all I care to say about the matter.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

Messages in writing from the President of the United States submitting nominations were communicated to the Senate by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Caloway, one of its reading clerks, informed the Senate that Hon. SAM RAYBURN, a Representative from the State of Texas, had been elected Speaker pro tempore during the absence of the Speaker.

The message also announced that the House had passed a joint resolution (H. J. Res. 306), Neutrality Act of 1939, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message further announced that the House had agreed to the concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 22), as follows:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That the manuscript submitted to the Senate by Senator MORRIS SHEPPARD on June 7, 1939, and referred to the Committee on Printing, containing a general description of the Army of the United States, its components, its arms, services, and bureaus, its military and nonmilitary activities, be printed, with illustrations, as a public document; and that 10,700 additional copies shall be printed, with illustrations, and bound, as may be directed by the Joint Committee on Printing, of which 2,500 copies shall be for the use of the Senate and 8,000 copies for the use of the House of Representatives, and 100 copies to each of the Committees on Military Affairs of the two Houses of Congress.

HOUSE JOINT RESOLUTION REFERRED

The joint resolution, House Joint Resolution 306, Neutrality Act of 1939, was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

STABILIZATION FUND AND WEIGHT OF THE DOLLAR

The Senate resumed the consideration of the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 3325) to extend the time within which the powers relating to the stabilization and alteration of the weight of the dollar may be exercised.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SCHWELLENBACH in the chair). The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, with reference to the last observation of the Senator from Tennessee it might be of interest to recall that when this matter was before the Committee on Banking and Currency there was one Member who was cynical enough to remark that we ought to continue the stabilization fund as it has been for the reason that if we do, the administration cannot spend it. I do not offer that as a reason why the stabilization fund should have been continued, but I do wish to point out to the Senator from Tennessee that there was before the Committee on Banking and Currency a very definite effort to separate the two provisions contained in sections 2 and 3 of House bill 3325 when the bill was first before us. There was a very general opinion that the stabilization fund should be continued. The reason why most of us felt that it should be continued doubtless could be predicated upon the testimony of Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau. Mr. Morgenthau appeared before the committee and told us what I now read from his testimony:

The purpose of the fund is to stabilize the exchange value of the dollar. In carrying out this purpose the fund undertakes a variety of operations.

Sometimes it is called upon to prevent violent fluctuations in exchange rates induced by acute political developments which cause flights of capital from one country to another. Such, for example, was the situation created in the fall of last year when as a consequence of the Czechoslovakian crisis a large volume of funds sought to leave Europe for the United States. The outflow of funds was so large that the amount of gold which it was necessary to ship from Europe to provide dollar balances was far greater than could be taken care of through normal commercial channels. If there had been no stabilization fund to cooperate with the other funds, the dollar exchange would have fluctuated so violently as to disrupt our trade. International monetary chaos might have ensued.

The occasions which call for operations of the magnitude undertaken by our fund last fall are, however, sporadic. Normally the stabilization fund is concerned with hour-to-hour and day-to-day fluctuations in the dollar-exchange rate. When the exchange markets are quiet and there are no unusual disturbances, it is not necessary for the fund to take an active part in the market. At such times it operates in relatively small amounts and participates in a relatively small number of transactions each day, and may even not enter the market at all.

When, however, for one reason or another the operations in the various exchange markets become speculative or panicky in character, with abnormal fluctuations, then the stabilization fund steps into the market and becomes active in buying and selling gold and foreign exchange for the purpose of minimizing fluctuations.

Yet, just as the Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG] pointed out in his address the other night, were that stabilization-fund proposal to come before us in the form of a joint resolution, if you like, Mr. President, calling for a new appropriation of the sum of $2,000,000,000, or whatever other sum reasonably and properly might be required for the continuance and maintenance of the fund, I have not the slightest doubt that such a measure would meet with uniform approval in both branches of Congress, and that thereupon we could reappropriate the sum, and having reappropriated it, all the advantages heretofore claimed by reason of the existence of the stabilization fund would continue.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Connecticut yield to the Senator from Tennessee?

Mr. DANAHER. I do.

Mr. McKELLAR. As I understand, the Senator from Connecticut approves what Mr. Morgenthau said before the Committee on Banking and Currency?

Mr. DANAHER. I do.

Mr. McKELLAR. And the only reason the Senator has for voting against the conference report is that he fears we are not going to pass a law which would provide for the very thing the conference report covers?

Mr. DANAHER. The Senator from Tennessee makes one of the most violent assumptions he ever made in thinking that is the only reason I would have for being against it.

Mr. McKELLAR. I thought the Senator said he approved the part of the report dealing with the stabilization fund.

Mr. DANAHER. Precisely.

Mr. McKELLAR. There are other points which the Senator does not approve?

Mr. DANAHER. Yes; there are other points which I do not approve.

Mr. McKELLAR. I merely wanted to get it straight.

Mr. DANAHER. Well, the Senator has it straight.

Mr. McKELLAR. Yes.

Mr. DANAHER. There are other instances. Let us turn to the provision involving the purchase of foreign silver. Let us not forget that when we are considering the conference report, one of the phases involved is the purchase of foreign silver. We had Mr. Eccles before us. Mr. Eccles is well and favorably known in many circles. Certainly he is a witness who is entitled to expect some credit. Mr. Eccles testified—and I read now at page 83 of the hearings:

There may be far more justification in the purchase of such silver—than there is in the purchase of foreign silver, and for this reason, that whatever domestic silver is purchased contributes directly to domestic income. It goes, it is true, first to the silver-mining people, but, secondarily, that money is disbursed by them in the payment of taxes, the purchase of supplies, the payment of wages, etc., so that the money does stay within the country, and it does tend to give employment. And whether you call it a subsidy or whatever you may call it—and our tariff is a subsidy, and we have other devices and programs, for instance, such as to assist the cotton people, and to assist other industries—we may argue in favor of a domestic program with some merit.

Only 30,000,000 ounces of silver produced in the United States remain in what may be called the free market in this country. Only one-sixth of all the silver comprising the hundreds of millions of ounces for which American taxpayers have caused their money to be paid through the program of the Secretary of the Treasury has gone actually to domestic producers. More than five-sixths of it has gone to finance American imports into Mexico, into Peru, into India, into other countries. There is no justification for the continuance of that program. That is another reason why the conference report should be rejected.

But with reference to the devaluation feature we have an interesting question of law. The Senator from Tennessee in his previous observation could have taken into account, for example, the matter of a fire-insurance policy. Let us assume that a fire-insurance policy expires on June 30 at midnight. The Senator from Tennessee would certainly be the last person to say that had a fire occurred on the morning of July 1 the insurance company would have been liable on that account. Certainly if a note were due at the bank at midnight on June 30, and the note had then and there matured without payment having been made, the Senator could not possibly and would not stand before this body and say that it did not take a brand new contract to extend or to revive the note in order to permit the erasure of a default which then and there had been created.

If a policy of accident insurance, which runs from year to year, shall have reached its date line, the Senator from Tennessee certainly would never take the position that such a policy of accident insurance can be revived after it has once lapsed by any other means than by entering into a brand new contract. While the existing contract was in force the parties to that contract obviously had the power to extend it in its terms, in its implications, in its powers. So also did we under the terms of the existing law have the power to amend and extend the time within which the power to devalue the dollar could have been exercised. But that proposal never was before us on an out-and-out, right-on-its-face, right-on-its-merits basis. Not at any time. But it has always been coupled with the stabilization fund.

Even before the Committee on Banking and Currency on the question being put, the result was a 9-to-9 vote. We never had a chance fairly and squarely to consider the implications of continuing the power to devalue the dollar. At the present time there are over 460,000,000 ounces of gold in the possession of the United States Treasury. Suppose that the value of gold in terms of dollars were depreciated only $1 an ounce, there would be a loss immediately of $460,000,000, right on the face of the transaction. That is the sort of thing that ought to be considered.

In addition, there is the factor that, after all, there has been reserved to the Congress by the Constitution the power to coin money and to regulate the value thereof.

Mr. President, when we are considering now the question of powers which lapsed on June 30, 1939, at midnight, it seems to me we ought clearly to have submitted to the Congress, and through the Congress, to the people of the country, a discussion of the issues involved, a discussion of whether or not the President of the United States shall have delegated to him the power to take 15 percent out of your stabilized dollar and give it to foreign debtors. That is exactly what he did when he previously devalued the dollar and took $41 out of every $100 that were owing to an American creditor. He took it out of the savings, out of the life insurance policies, out of the vested earnings of millions of people. And to retain or to create again in him the power to devalue or fix the dollar another 15 percent in terms of its present fixed ratio is a matter which should properly be made the subject of debate on its merits.

Hence there should be presented before us a bill which in fact would purport to revive this power and assign it to the President, so we could then and there consider its constitutional implications, and then and there consider the situation on its merits.

So, as we contemplate the conference report before us, involving, as it does, at least four different and separate features, we find an issue so complicated that it was not until after hours of debate, well into the morning of July 1, 1939, that the majority leader caused to be read to us an undated opinion purporting to have come from the Attorney General—and I do not doubt it did—purporting to sustain the validity of the pending legislation in its present form and maintaining that, if enacted this week or at any time after midnight on June 30, 1939, it would re-create or revive expired powers.

Mr. President, I submit that if there be even the slightest doubt with reference to the validity of this measure it should properly go through its regular channels; we should consider it on its merits; we should debate its implications; we should hear the testimony with reference to it, so that the claims with reference to the chaos which would result from our action of last week may be thoroughly considered in the light of the facts and as we now know the situation to have been in the last 5 days.

It is perfectly apparent, Mr. President, that there is no justification in law, constitutional or otherwise, for the delegation of the claimed power to the President. There is no authority, in the statutes or otherwise, for the extension at this time of such power by way of a purported revival of a law which has already lapsed by virtue of its express terms. The power having expired on June 30—as Webster himself says, the breath having gone out of it, life having left it, the power itself having died—there is nothing within our power by way of amendment which will re-create or revive that expired power.

Mr. President, it may be worth taking the time in passing to observe that when the Thomas amendment was first adopted in May of 1933 the power to devalue the dollar was not subject to any time limitation. However, the Thomas amendment provided that the gold content of the dollar should not be reduced at any time by more than 50 percent. In January 1934, when the President recommended the enactment of the gold reserve bill, he also recommended that the authority to change the gold content of the dollar be limited to fixing the dollar at a gold content of between 50 and 60 percent of its former weight. In that act for the first time we provided a limitation or expiration date for those powers. In 1937, when the dollar-devaluation power was renewed by the Congress, we again continued a limitation date. That limitation date definitely meant something. It meant that when June 30, 1939, had come and gone, unless the power had been extended while the act was in being, while the power was alive, the power lapsed.

I submit that the power to devalue the dollar lapsed on June 30, 1939, at midnight, by the terms of the law, and that it cannot be revived by the bill now before us.

I therefore submit that the conference report should be rejected.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll. The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Davis	King	Radcliffe
Ashurst	Donahey	La Follette	Reed
Austin	Ellender	Lee	Russell
Bailey	George	Lodge	Schwartz
Bankhead	Gerry	Logan	Schwellenbach
Barbour	Gibson	Lucas	Sheppard
Barkley	Gillette	Lundeen	Shipstead
Bilbo	Glass	McCarran	Slattery
Bone	Green	McKellar	Smathers
Borah	Guffey	Maloney	Stewart
Bridges	Gurney	Mead	Taft
Bulow	Hale	Miller	Thomas, Okla.
Burke	Harrison	Minton	Townsend
Byrd	Hatch	Murray	Tydings
Byrnes	Hayden	Neely	Vandenberg
Capper	Herring	Norris	Van Nuys
Chavez	Holman	Nye	Wagner
Clark, Idaho	Holt	O'Mahoney	Walsh
Clark, Mo.	Hughes	Overton	White
Connally	Johnson, Calif.	Pepper	Wiley
Danaher	Johnson, Colo.	Pittman

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eighty-three Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I shall vote "nay" on the adoption of this conference report, as it is almost certain, if this report should be rejected, that our conferees will have no difficulty in securing an agreement fixing the price of domestically mined silver at 77.57 cents per ounce.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I inquire what makes my good friend from Arizona think that the conferees would do any such thing?

Mr. ASHURST. The conferees, in my judgment, are in favor of that being done; the administration is in favor of it; and the Senate is in favor of it.

Mr. BARKLEY. I do not think the Senator has any authority for saying that.

Mr. ASHURST. If I have no authority, I withdraw it.

Mr. BARKLEY. I am in good faith with the Senator.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, the Senator from Kentucky need never assert his good faith. During a long public career he has always acted in good faith in connection with everything he has advocated or suggested.

Mr. BARKLEY. I appreciate that statement of the Senator, but I desire to be frank with my friend from Arizona. If this conference report shall be defeated, I think I can say to the Senator that no such result will occur as that which he has indicated and hopes will occur.

Mr. ASHURST. Is that a threat?

Mr. BARKLEY. No, sir; it is not.

Mr. ASHURST. Very well.

Mr. BARKLEY. It is absolutely not a threat.

Mr. ASHURST. It is the Senator's conclusion and not a threat?

Mr. BARKLEY. Absolutely. I have never threatened anybody. I have no power to enforce threats, and no desire to make them; but I do want to be frank with the Senator, and I do not think he ought to draw a conclusion of that kind, which, it seems to me, is without foundation.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, the Senate has been functioning for 150 years and this is the first time any Senator has objected to a conclusion that another Senator saw fit to draw.

Mr. BARKLEY. I am not objecting to it, but I think the Senator is mistaken in his conclusion. The Senator can draw the conclusion, of course, and has done so.

Mr. ASHURST. There are men who are never mistaken; I happen to be one who is frequently mistaken, and I may now be mistaken in my conclusion, but—

Mr. BARKLEY. I think it would be a mistake for any Senator to vote on the question of agreeing to the conference report on a conclusion of that sort.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President—

Mr. ASHURST. Let me answer my very dear friend, my devoted leader, who has led his party with an ability and a judgment that I commend. I tell him now, if I may be permitted to do so, that the able Senator must not grow testy and irritated because, forsooth, one of his most devoted followers sees fit, as he rarely sees fit, to depart from the conclusions of the distinguished majority leader. I am just as much of a psychiatrist as is the Senator from Kentucky; I am just as much of a mind reader as is he; and I declare again, sir, that if this conference report, this miserable compromise, be rejected, the conferees will bring in a report fixing the price of domestically mined silver at 77.57 an ounce, or higher. Now, is the Senator satisfied with my conclusion?

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President—

Mr. ASHURST. I yield to the Senator from Colorado, who knows something about silver.

Mr. ADAMS. I take it the Senator's statement is merely the expression of confidence that the Senate conferees will obey the orders of the Senate.

Mr. ASHURST. I thank the Senator.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President—

Mr. ASHURST. Just a moment. So anxious was I to yield to my leader that before I had an opportunity to state the reason for my conclusion, the able Senator questioned me. I do not feel any resentment about that; but the conferees on the part of the Senate are composed of men of the highest character; they are the servants and the creatures of the Senate; not its masters. The conferees know that the Senate wants domestically mined silver fixed at a higher price than 70 cents an ounce, and if this report be rejected within a day the conferees will bring back a conference report fixing the price of silver at 77.57 an ounce or even higher.

Never again in this Congress will those Senators who favor a fair price for silver have such a classic case. Chance and fate have here combined to give you an occasion that will come no more.

Never again in the lifetime of many of the Senators will such a splendid opportunity be presented to secure a fair price for domestically mined silver. The conferees are reasonable and are men of good faith.

There is no remorse so poignant and so lasting as that which comes from the consciousness that we have omitted to avail ourselves of an opportunity to render a great public service to our country; likewise, there is no happiness more sustaining or more enduring than the knowledge that we have, in a worthy manner, met the responsibilities upon us.

Opportunity always soars aloft on high and rapid wing and must be seized as it approaches. All success, whether of a nation, a political party, a business firm, or an individual, comes and comes only from incessant labor and toil, coupled with the sagacity to recognize an opportunity, howsoever vagrant and disguised it may present itself.

This is the day and the hour when destiny, the mighty magician, presents a shining opportunity to do that which we have been trying for so many years to do, namely, secure a fair price for domestically mined silver.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. President, to me the supremely important issue now before the Senate is not whether it is a wise fiscal or financial policy to devalue the gold dollar, nor is it of supreme importance in this issue whether or not a stabilization fund is continued. To me, transcending these questions of mere policy is the supremely important issue of protecting and defending the American Constitution.

My confidence is shaken in the integrity of the responsible officers of government who take one position on this issue prior to midnight of June 30, 1939, and then, without any change in conditions precedent to their expressed position on this issue, take just the reverse position as a matter of political expediency.

Out on the Pacific coast in Oregon the American stock still predominates, and American ideals are still cherished in the minds and hearts of the people. As a Senator from Oregon, and in compliance with the oath which I solemnly subscribed to in this Chamber and in the presence of the Senators here assembled, I am convinced that it is my duty to uphold, defend, and protect the Federal Constitution. I am convinced that I cannot be faithful to my oath of office and to the people of Oregon and of the Nation by being a party to transferring to the Executive the powers which the Constitution places in the Congress, and in the Congress alone; nor can I be a party to the irregular procedure, as I see it, of attempting to revive a dead act by amending it after its expiration by the time limit set in the act itself.

In this conviction of duty and obligation to the American people I am firm and positive, and I am willing to stand alone, if need be, to make a record of my opposition to a proposal which, if successful, will take a long step toward undermining the Constitution and establishing a dictatorship in our country.

The policy of expediency is always of doubtful wisdom. Yet it seems that in 1933 a majority of Congress so far forgot its constitutional obligations and limitations that it granted to the President extraordinary powers for temporary use in what was considered a financial emergency. Those temporary powers would have expired automatically at midnight on June 30, 1937; but prior to that day and hour the Congress continued these extraordinary temporary powers, which I contend they had no right to confer on the Executive in the first instance, until midnight on June 30, 1939. The day and hour of that extended date have expired; and now, 5 days later, it is attempted legally to extend these extraordinary and, in my opinion, unconstitutional powers until midnight on June 30, 1941.

Practicing irregularities and permitting laxities in the exercise of constitutional authority is an insidious but effective way of overthrowing the Constitution and establishing a dictatorship. Many persons think that cannot be done in America; but I contend that if the Senate accepts and adopts the conference report now under consideration it will take a long step toward that end.

I am alarmed and, I believe, justly so, by the fact that our Chief Executive continually seeks and obtains extraordinary and, in my opinion, unconstitutional grants of authority, and never surrenders them when once in fact he possesses them. He and his advisers now are attempting by what, in my opinion, is an irregular procedure to retain authority which a few days ago he and they publicly stated would automatically expire by time limitation by midnight on June 30, 1939, if prior to that date the act was not amended to extend the pretended authority beyond that day and hour.

Oh, that those in the majority of our Government today would heed the example of Cincinnatus, that noble Roman who in the early period of the Roman Republic was called from his plow to be dictator and save Rome in a military emergency, when the enemy had succeeded in surrounding the Roman Army under the consul Minucius! The Roman messenger found Cincinnatus at his plow, and unfolded to him the dreadful plight of the Roman Army and the unprecedented emergency which confronted the safety of the Roman people and the continuance of the Roman Government through the peril in which the Roman Army then was. Reluctantly, Cincinnatus accepted the office of dictator, and in a brief campaign he succeeded in rescuing the army from its perilous position. He then immediately resigned the dictatorship and returned to his farm to finish plowing his field; and the Roman Government continued along the even tenor of its way, observing all the manners and customs of the Roman Senate and people. Cincinnatus was a patriot, and he truly loved his people and had respect for its Government; but 500 years later, in the days of Julius Caesar, Mark Antony, and Augustus, we find another type of leadership in the Roman Republic—a leadership that grasped for power, and were more interested in the aggrandizement of their political fortunes than in the liberty and freedom of the Roman people. The Roman Republic was then succeeded by dictatorships and the Empire. Personal liberty and freedom were things of the past.

I realize that my colleagues of the Senate are just as familiar with the downfall of the Roman Republic as I am; but I believe it very wholesome at the present moment to review this bit of history, which I fear has parallels all too real for our own good in the situation with which we are confronted in the consideration of the conference report before us.

I have recently read a very informative book entitled "The New Deal in Old Rome." I recommend it to the attention of every Senator.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I question no Senator's sincerity in the vote he is about to cast. I do not quarrel with the conclusions which have been drawn by the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY] and the Senator from Arizona [Mr. ASHURST] as to what will follow if the pending conference report fails. We started out with it last week with a filibuster, an easy filibuster, in fact, so easy that more opponents of the conference report desired to speak than could possibly speak before 12 o'clock midnight on Friday.

If the theory be right of those who say we cannot constitutionally or legally extend the authority of the President, then they have no ground for fear now. They were satisfied at 12 o'clock on Friday night that they had accomplished their purpose. If their theory be right, the approval of the conference report after that hour will have no legal effect. The powers granted the President will be dead beyond resurrection.

But when they continued the filibuster beyond the time fixed for a vote, it seemed to me I had a right to wonder whether they were sincere in their theory that the power of the President, which the bill seeks to extend, was necessarily dead if the conference report were not approved before midnight June 30, 1939.

Mr. President, the able senior Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS] was making a very eloquent address when June passed out and July came in at 12 o'clock midnight last Friday. He was proceeding on the theory, as were his supporters, that if they should talk until 12 o'clock, if the filibuster could go on that long, they would accomplish their purpose. He continued to talk after 12 o'clock, and in glowing terms proceeded to describe what had already been accomplished according to his theory.

Senators will recall that in eloquent tones the Senator from Maryland said, looking at the clock, "It is now 17 minutes past 12, July 1, 1939." He went so far as to ask unanimous consent that there be placed in the Journal a statement that 12 o'clock had passed; that it was 17 minutes past 12 o'clock July 1, 1939; and he called attention to the fact that the conference report was still not approved. No one objected to that, and I suppose the entry is in the Journal.

Mr. President, I did not object for two reasons. First, looking at the clock, it was obvious to me that the Senator had told the truth, it was 17 minutes after 12 o'clock July 1, 1939. I would not have objected even if that had not been true because, considering the eloquence and the force of the Senator from Maryland, I lacked the courage to question what he said.

One minute afterward the able Senator said:

It is now 18 minutes past 12 o'clock, July 1, 1939. That fact is established. The bill is not passed; 12 o'clock has gone, never to return.

Why were Senators so anxious to have that record noted? It was already of record. Was it in the mind of anyone that Senators who did not agree with them would manipulate the Record, and show something to the contrary? I do not believe any Senator entertained such a thought. Honor still remains, and it was in possession of all of us, and those who favored the conference report would have been just as diligent not to make a false record.

While the Senator from Maryland was speaking, the patient died, and, to be sure that he was dead, the Senator called attention, at 17 minutes after 12 o'clock, to the fact that the patient was still dead; and at 18 minutes past 12 he again put into the Record the statement that the patient was still dead; and the filibuster still went on.

Mr. President, it made me think of the Irishman who had a fight. He knocked his opponent down, he gouged out his eyes, he knocked out his teeth, and was tearing his breast. His opponent was screaming in agony and begging for mercy, asking that the Irishman cease. At that juncture a friend came along and said, "Pat, why are you abusing this man, lacerating him so terribly? Don't you hear him crying for mercy? Don't you hear him begging that you stop, and saying that he is sorry?" Pat said, "Yes; I hear him, but he is such a damned liar I don't believe him." [Laughter.]

So we went on with this dead patient. The great Senator from Vermont [Mr. AUSTIN], the Brutus of the incident, draws forth his mighty dagger of wisdom and he cuts the dead patient into pieces for fear he will lose some right he might otherwise have forgotten.

Then comes the Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT], with all his eloquence and all his ability, with a whole swarm of bees buzzing around his head [laughter], and he takes the pieces, and instead of burning them into ashes and casting them to the four winds, he eats them, he chews them up, and he spits them all over the Chamber, so that there will be no doubt of the patient not only being dead but having passed the day of resurrection. [Laughter.]

The Senator from Ohio no doubt got a wonderful thrill out of that episode. He was talking not because he wanted to but because he thought he owed it as a duty to his country, because he said when he started, along about 2 o'clock in the morning, "The patient is already dead. I want to go home, I want to go home, I want to go home." Yet he talked on. [Laughter.] Like Tennyson's brook, he went on and on and on, with the patient still dead, the filibuster still going on.

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. NORRIS. No; I do not care to yield.

Mr. WILEY. For a question?

Mr. NORRIS. No; not for anything, unless I get through what I have to say before my time expires, then I shall be glad to yield.

The Senator from Ohio got a great thrill out of that. It was almost as great a thrill as he will get out of the next National Republican Convention. [Laughter.] And still we are going on. If the theories of the enemies are correct all of this talk today and all of the talk after 12 o'clock midnight Friday night has been "buncombe", useless, of no account. I am wondering whether our enemies are whistling to keep up their courage.

Mr. President, I myself do not think there can be any doubt about the power of Congress effectively to approve the conference report, which will approve the bill extending the powers given the President by a law which has already expired. But it is a question of law, after all. We are wasting time in discussing that question of law. If the conference report shall be approved and the bill enacted, this question will be raised in the courts. It will eventually reach the Supreme Court of the United States, and they will pass on it, and whether we agree with them or not, we are going to abide by their decision without any question whatever. It is in the Supreme Court that the question finally will be determined.

I listened with pleasure and a great deal of interest to both the Senators from Connecticut, impressed as I always am with their arguments. I heard the senior Senator from Connecticut [Mr. MALONEY] oppose the conference report because of a provision in the bill in relation to the purchase of foreign silver. Evidently the Senator is very much in favor of the other features of the bill. There are four important provisions in the bill—the provision for the purchase of foreign silver, the provision for the purchase of domestic silver, the provision for the devaluation of the gold dollar, and the provision for the continuance of the stabilization fund. But because the bill contained a provision for the purchase of foreign silver the Senator from Connecticut felt he could not support it. He entertained the theory, as do other Senators, that if the conference report could be rejected, they might get out of the bill something they wanted.

Mr. President, I have never seen the day when one could say with any certainty whether he should support a bill because it contained something he liked and something which he did not like. If the Senator likes the three powers provided for in the bill and is opposed to the fourth, he is willing to kill the conference report, if he can, by having it rejected.

Action on almost every conference report is by way of compromise. No one can get everything he wants in a bill, and especially when final action on the bill is the result of a conference and the adoption of a conference report. We must defer on some matters to the opinions of others. Personally, I should support the conference report just as enthusiastically if it did not contain the provision with respect to the purchase of foreign silver; but I am unwilling to take away from the President the power he has in regard to devaluation and the stabilization fund, even if I believed that there was a possibility eventually of getting a bill which was more agreeable to me in other respects than the measure now before us.

The junior Senator from Connecticut very forcefully argued that these powers were dead at midnight Friday night. Let us assume for the present that they are dead. Then whatever we do here can never resurrect that power; and it seems to me the junior Senator from Connecticut has but little argument in his favor for killing all the other provisions in the measure in order that he may kill a provision which in his estimation is now deadlier than a doornail.

Mr. President, with respect to the question whether the President of the United States should still have the power to devalue the gold dollar, which I believe he should, I wish to say that the only objection I have is that he has not heretofore gone the limit and devalued the gold dollar to 50 percent. I think much good has come to the country from the devaluation he has made. Much further good would have resulted and the prosperity of the country would have increased had the President devalued the dollar the additional 9 percent.

I believe it is generally admitted by all that the stabilization fund has been not only necessary but that it has accomplished a great deal of good for our country. I think it has done much good. I want it to be continued. I wish to see the gold dollar devalued down to 50 percent of its original worth. When we passed the law I thought, and I still think, that the gold dollar was too valuable. I wanted to cheapen it. Particularly for the sake of our farmers I think we ought to cheapen the dollar. We ought to have the same priced dollar for agriculture that manufacturing industries have. The dollar, as the result of the President's act in devaluing it, has had a tendency to travel in that direction, and I would like to see it continue in that direction.

The junior Senator from Connecticut cited the example of an insurance policy in connection with his argument. He said when an insurance policy expires at 12 o'clock midnight it cannot be revived by a contract made afterward. No one here, Mr. President, claims that between 12 o'clock midnight on Friday night and the day or hour when the pending bill shall become a law, if it shall become a law, the President has any of the powers which were given him by the original act. I think it is freely conceded that he has not. But if the law shall be amended as the bill provides, those powers will begin from the time the bill goes into legal effect. So, as I see it, the illustration of the insurance policy used by the Senator from Connecticut is in no way whatever parallel to the question before us. It has no application, for those who favor the conference report are not seeking to give the President any power between 12 o'clock Friday night and the time the law shall go into effect.

Returning again to the illustration used by the Senator from Connecticut of the insurance policy. If after the expiration of the policy a contract is made between the insurance company and the insured to extend the policy from the time that contract is made, such a contract is not illegal. I do not see any reason why a court should set aside such a contract. Such a situation is parallel with the case now before us.

Mr. President, as I look at the situation, we are confronted with the performance of a very important duty. If we refuse to give the President this additional power, I believe our action will result in injury to our country and will cause much misery.

The power to use the stabilization fund and the power still further to devalue the dollar have an effect similar to that of a policeman being on the corner. Even though the power shall not be exercised, it will result in a great deal of good. If a policeman is placed on the corner, the store on the corner is safe. If the policeman is removed, the store may be robbed the next night. The important thing is the existence of the law as it stood before June 30. If we again put that policeman on guard, we shall have a continuation of the good results which came about under the administration of the stabilization fund and the power to devalue the dollar contained in the original act.

It seems to me, therefore, Mr. President, that there is no reason why the power should not be extended.

The measure provides for a higher price for domestic silver than is now being paid for it. It may be possible that the measure will be returned to conference again and come back containing a provision for the purchase of nothing but American silver, and at too high a figure. Such action is possible. I do not expect it to happen. As a friend of silver, I would rather take the cut in the price of silver than to run the chance of getting nothing.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, I wish to speak only for a moment. In the first place, it seems to me we have abolished the powers in question, and we find that the country is entirely reconciled to our action. I have heard no protest of any kind against the action of the Senate, except from the administration. I have read no newspaper protest. I have heard no protest on the part of anyone. It seems to me that public opinion has fully approved the action of the Senate in declining to continue the power to devalue the dollar.

In my opinion, the act has expired. But particularly it seems to me the argument cannot be controverted that the stabilization fund has expired and cannot be restored without another appropriation.

The stabilization fund was created by appropriation. It reverted to the general fund on the 30th day of June. The able Senator from Tennessee [Mr. McKELLAR] a short time ago said that if we did not take action the stabilization fund would revert to the general fund. Well, when will it revert to the general fund? It seems to me obvious that the only time it could revert to the general fund was when it came to an end and the powers with relation to it came to an end. The law authorizing the stabilization fund came to an end on the 1st day of July of this year, and if that money had returned to the general fund then, it cannot, in my opinion, be restored without further appropriation by the Congress of the United States.

I do not see that any of the cases which have been cited by the Attorney General or any of the cases which have been cited by the able Senator from Tennessee in any way bear on that question or dispute the conclusion that the stabilization fund has come to any end. By unanimous agreement, that is the most important thing in the entire act.

In order to continue the stabilization fund, which was all that was in the bill when the Senate got through with it, our conferees proceeded to concede every other point that the Senate had insisted upon. Yet by the proposed action the stabilization fund will not be restored.

Furthermore, even if there were a doubt about the situation, how perfectly idiotic it is for the Senate to set up a stabilization fund, of the legality of which no one will be certain until the Court passes on the question 2 years from now.

The able Senator from Tennessee says it is not our affair. Leave it to the Court. Certainly we are not performing our duty if we leave a doubt existing for a year from this date as to whether that $2,000,000,000 is subject to the check of the Secretary of the Treasury or whether it is not. Certainly there is a serious doubt on the question, and it is a doubt which it is perfectly easy to resolve. We can abandon the bill and pass a joint resolution creating the stabilization fund, and every Senator is willing to vote for it, and the House is willing to vote for it. It seems to me that the position of the majority of the conferees is inconsistent. It is not our position. They came here and said, "In 10 minutes we gave up everything the Senate passed, because the bill, if it was to become law, had to be passed by midnight on Friday." That was their position until midnight Friday. They said, "We must pass this measure because otherwise the whole thing will lapse and we will have no law at all."

The logical conclusion to be drawn from that is that even if their change of mind were sincere and the lapse absolutely occurred at midnight, certainly they ought to admit that we should have another chance to have the matter considered by a conference committee. At present I understand we must vote either yea or nay on the conference committee report; but if we should vote the conference report down we would not kill the bill. We could then refer the bill back to conference. We could let our conferees have plenty of time. It is admitted that there is now no hurry. We could let the conferees have plenty of time to obtain what they can. Certainly the compromise which they made with the House, as between the House and the Senate, is overwhelmingly in favor of the House.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. LEE in the chair). Does the Senator from Ohio yield to the Senator from Texas?

Mr. TAFT. I yield.

Mr. CONNALLY. I understand that one of the Senator's chief complaints against the conference report is that it does not extend the stabilization fund. Is that correct?

Mr. TAFT. I am in favor of continuing the stabilization fund.

Mr. CONNALLY. However, the Senator would not be in favor of the conference report, even if it did continue the stabilization fund, would he?

Mr. TAFT. Does the Senator mean if it should go back to conference and the conferees should bring back something else?

Mr. CONNALLY. No; I mean if it were clear that the conference report continued the stabilization fund, the Senator still would not vote for it, would he?

Mr. TAFT. No.

Mr. CONNALLY. I did not think so.

Mr. TAFT. It is perfectly clear that the conference committee has given up three things in which I am interested. I am willing to vote for the stabilization fund by itself. As I understand the conferees, they say it is impossible to obtain more for silver. I do not know whether or not they say it is also impossible to eliminate the power further to devalue the dollar or to eliminate the power to purchase foreign silver. However, it seems to me that they are now presuming on a parliamentary situation to try to carry through all the concessions they made; and it seems to me obvious that what ought to be done is to deal with the question from the beginning and consider a joint resolution to re-create the stabilization fund, with such powers and reports as we think are necessary, and then consider the silver question, both foreign and domestic, in another joint resolution, which I believe would meet with the approval of the Senate.

So I urge the Senate to reject the conference report, with the distinct understanding that such action would not bring about a final killing of the bill. It would permit us to send the bill back to conference, where our conferees may have more time to make some of the points upon which the great majority of the Senate have previously insisted.

Mr. GURNEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that there be printed in the RECORD as a part of my remarks excerpts from an article entitled "The Effect of Easy Money Policies on Savings, Savings Institutions, Insurance Companies, Endowed Institutions, and Commercial Banks," by Winthrop W. Aldrich, chairman of the board of directors of the Chase National Bank of the city of New York. The excerpts to which I refer are on pages 16, 17, and 18 of the booklet.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BANKHEAD in the chair). Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

The excerpts are as follows:

The present is a particularly opportune time to make a stand for sound money inasmuch as several of the powers of the Executive over the currency, unless extended by congressional action, shortly terminate. Those to expire include the power to alter the metallic content of the dollar. The House of Representatives has voted to extend this power to June 30, 1941 (on April 24, 1939, H. R. 3325, 76th Cong., 1st sess.); the Senate has not as yet taken action.

It seems to me that a first step in the restoration of a sound financial policy would be to allow the power to further devalue the gold dollar to expire. In fact, I would go beyond this and would urge the reintroduction of the gold-coin standard and of gold-coin redemption, on the basis of the present gold dollar. This step would logically be followed by a repeal of all silver enactments.

Convinced as I am that the old gold dollar should never have been devalued, I am enough of a realist to conclude that its reestablishment is not now within the realm of the practical. Only if England, France, and the sterling bloc of nations were to take simultaneous and proportionate action could we consider restoring the old gold dollar, which would involve lowering the price of gold from $35 to $20.67 an ounce. Of necessity we are compelled to reconcile ourselves to the devaluation that has occurred. This does not mean that we should countenance further devaluation. It is for this, among other reasons, that I suggest that the devaluation powers of the President be allowed to expire and that specie redemption in gold coin be reintroduced.

To continue these powers would imply that there are good reasons for further devaluation, or that this country is willing to engage in currency warfare, or that some sort of monetary emergency still exists. In my opinion none of the reasons cited for a continuation of the President's powers has validity.

The reintroduction of the gold-coin standard not only would carry assurance against further devaluation but would do more than any other single measure to restore business confidence. Confidence would be given to the business structure of the entire world in the same manner as that in which the undeviating adherence by England to the gold standard from 1821 to 1914 inspired world-wide confidence.

The reestablishment of the gold-coin standard should be accompanied by other measures designed to prevent member-bank reserves from rising further and to reduce excess reserves. Only in this way can the extreme easy-money policy be brought to an end. To prevent member-bank reserves from rising further, the Treasury, in my opinion, should once again begin sterilizing gold imports. Furthermore, those profits of gold devaluation that are still unutilized should remain impounded. Otherwise they will very likely be employed in a manner to increase member-bank reserves.

In order to bring about a reduction in member-bank reserves the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System should again raise member-bank reserve requirements to the maximum permitted by law. This would bring about a reduction in member-bank reserve balances of about $800,000,000. Even if this action were taken, excess reserves of $3,500,000,000 would still remain. It should be noted that even this reduced total is so large that it remains outside the scope of complete control on the part of the Federal Reserve banks whose open-market portfolio comes but to $2,500,000,000.

In concluding, I want to give emphasis to the fact that the easy-money policies followed by this country have left us with a heritage of monetary problems that much time and patience will be required to solve. Six years of unsound policy cannot be swept aside in a day. Even though the ultimate goal may be somewhat far removed, there are certain first steps which should be taken immediately. These I have already referred to. One of them is to terminate the President's powers to devalue the gold dollar further. This is an immediately pressing problem and one on which those of us who are apprehensive over easy-money developments can at once unite and make common issue.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll. The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Davis	King	Radcliffe
Ashurst	Donahay	La Follette	Reed
Austin	Ellender	Lee	Russell
Bailey	George	Lodge	Schwartz
Bankhead	Gerry	Logan	Schwellenbach
Barbour	Gibson	Lucas	Sheppard
Barkley	Gillette	Lundeen	Shipstead
Bilbo	Glass	McCarran	Slatery
Bone	Green	McKellar	Smathers
Borah	Guffey	Maloney	Stewart
Bridges	Gurney	Mead	Taft
Bulow	Hale	Miller	Thomas, Okla.
Burke	Harrison	Minton	Townsend
Byrd	Hatch	Murray	Tydings
Byrnes	Hayden	Neely	Vandenberg
Capper	Herring	Norris	Van Nuys
Chavez	Holman	Nye	Wagner
Clark, Idaho	Holt	O'Mahoney	Walsh
Clark, Mo.	Hughes	Overton	White
Connally	Johnson, Calif.	Pepper	Wiley
Danaher	Johnson, Colo.	Pittman

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eighty-three Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

Mr. VANDERBERG. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I desire to submit a few remarks in reference to the pending motion.

Some years ago, at the instance of the Senate of the United States, a manual for conference reports was prepared and submitted. It was prepared by Mr. Cleaves, the then clerk of the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate, and was reported to the Senate by Senator Allison, of Iowa. In this compilation is contained what I understand to be the customary, the correct, and the just rule as to the appointment of conferees. It says:

In the selection of the managers the two large political parties are usually represented, and, also, care is taken that there shall be a representation of the two opinions which almost always exist on subjects of importance.

Then this follows:

Of course, the majority party and the prevailing opinion have the majority of the managers.

A conference is held in order to adjust and compromise, if necessary, differing opinions between the two Houses of Congress. Each body selects its committee of conference as its attorneys to present its case to the conference. The two Houses having differed, necessarily, if the conference is properly constituted, the representatives of each House at the commencement of the conference are in disagreement; otherwise, there is no occasion for a conference.

An individual Senator, Mr. President, is free to vote upon the basis of any reason which interests him. He is free to accept any advice; he is free to accept direction; he is free to accept orders, if he sees fit, regardless of their source. He is an individual Senator in his votes upon the floor, responsible only to himself and to his constituents.

That is not so in the case of a member of a conference committee. A member of the conference committee becomes the attorney, the trusted representative, of the body which appointed him, and he has no right to take advice, contrary to that of the Senate if the Senate appoints him. He is sent to the conference having a specific purpose to endeavor to carry forward, so far as possible, the wishes, the will, and the votes of the Senate. He occupies a fiduciary relationship.

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Colorado yield to the Senator from Wisconsin?

Mr. ADAMS. Certainly.

Mr. WILEY. Is there any definite rule or statement defining the power and the duty of a conference committee-man, as the Senator has defined them?

Mr. ADAMS. I have merely read from a compilation of parliamentary law as to conferences—I do not know whether the Senator heard it—to the effect that the conferees, of course, should represent the prevailing opinion of the body by which they are appointed.

Mr. President, what is the situation which confronts us? The Senate was considering a measure which had passed the other House, a measure consisting of two parts. The Senate adopted three amendments to that bill. The amendment in reference to the devaluation power of the President was carried upon a yeas-and-nays vote of the Senate by 47 to 31. The provision as to the domestic purchase of silver was carried upon a yeas-and-nays vote by 48 to 30. The third amendment was adopted by a viva-voce vote.

There was no separate vote in the House of Representatives. That body, when the Senate amendments were submitted to it, adopted the formal and customary motion disagreeing to the Senate amendments and asking for a conference with the Senate thereon. There was no vote in the House upon any one of the amendments of the Senate. There was sufficient support in the House for the approval of all the Senate amendments, for when the motion to request a conference and to appoint conferees was submitted, while I do not have the exact figures, roughly, the vote was 160 against having a conference to 214 for a conference. In other words, a very large vote in the House was in favor of accepting all three of the Senate amendments.

I discussed the other night—and I do not mean to go back to it now—the situation which existed. The chairman of the committee of conference on the part of the Senate, the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] stated upon the floor the pressure under which he felt the conferees were acting. He said:

Of course, the conferees recognized that the powers with which we were dealing would expire as they exist in the law today at midnight tonight, and undoubtedly in attempting to reach a decision and report by the end of the day, were influenced largely by that consideration of time.

In other words, there entered into the decision of the conferees the element of time. There was pressure because of the belief that the conference report must be agreed upon or the legislation would fail.

Again the Senator from New York said—

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ADAMS. Certainly.

Mr. WAGNER. If I said that the legislation would fail, it was not an accurate expression. What I felt was that the powers which the President had a right to exercise would expire, and if there was delay there would be a period of time when the powers could not be exercised. I personally thought a very serious situation would ensue if that should occur.

Mr. ADAMS. I understood that to be the Senator's view.

Then the Senator from New York said:

Having in mind that an agreement had to be reached considering the expiration of the powers which were involved, it was finally decided by the majority of the conferees on the part of the Senate that rather than have no report and postpone, perhaps for a number of days, any consideration of this legislation, and have the legislation reintroduced and reconsidered they should recede. I finally decided I would recede and two other Members of the Senate conferees decided likewise.

I have assumed that it was this pressure upon the Senate conferees which led them to surrender the position of the Senate rather than to jeopardize the proposed legislation. At this time no such situation exists. There is no reason why the conferees should not meet free from the pressure of time, and give the subject adequate and careful consideration, and reach their conclusions upon the merits of the measure, rather than because of apprehension that something might happen if they did not reach an agreement. That is, the midnight emergency no longer confronts us. Whatever has legally happened to devaluation and to the stabilization fund has happened. That is not a matter which I care to discuss. I am interested in what should now be done.

I wish to call attention to one or two things. I am reluctant to do so, but I feel compelled to do so.

I ask Senators to note these figures:

Two amendments subject to a roll call were submitted to a roll call at the insistence and upon the request of Senators opposed to the amendments. Seventy-eight Senators voted on each roll call. Of the 78 Senators, 60 voted for one or the other or both of the amendments. Only 18 Senators voted against both of them. When the conferees were appointed, however, 3 of the 5 were appointed from the 18. Mind you, Mr. President, 18 Senators voted against both of the amendments. Sixty Senators were recorded as for one or both of them. The rule of parliamentary procedure requires, in all fairness and justice, that the majority and the prevailing opinion shall be the majority upon the conference committee; and yet 3 of the 5 conferees came from the 18 who voted against both amendments, and they were sent to a conference to sustain amendments against which they had voted.

I have not the slightest criticism of the individual Members. They are my friends. I admire them. I recognize their virtues and their capacities. I know as a lawyer, however, that had I a case to try involving these issues I should not have wanted these gentlemen on the jury. Had they constituted the membership of the court, I should have politely asked that they disqualify themselves and substitute someone whose opinion was not so positive and who had not so definitely committed himself. No man is entirely free from his opinions and his prejudices.

The answer is made that the members of the conference committee were appointed in accordance with the rule of seniority. Granted; but the rule of seniority should apply only as between those selected who are on the prevailing side. It should not prevail so as to make of the conference something other than the rules and the purposes of conferences intend.

I have no challenge as to the good faith exercised in the appointment of the conferees. I think the Senators followed what they believed to be the rule; but I think the rule is unsound. I think it is in conflict with sound principles. I think it tends to defeat the very purpose of a conference.

The chairman of the committee did not exactly appoint, but he nominated the members of the conference committee in accordance with customs that we all see observed, and submitted to the Chair his recommendations; and, as I say, in accordance with custom, his own name headed the list. Of the five conferees, however, I was the only one who voted for all three of the amendments which were under consideration and which the conferees were charged with upholding. I am talking at this time in reference to just one thing, not as to the merits of these questions, but as to the situation of the Senate in upholding its conference processes. Conference committees have tremendous power. The Senate is inclined to accept the reports of conference committees. We sit here day after day, and when conference committees report we accept without question their reports; and yet they deal with the very heart of legislation, with the controversial matters. We have a right to feel that our views—the majority, the prevailing views—are being represented and presented by our conferees.

The distinguished Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] is an able lawyer, a judge of marked ability. I wonder what he would do were he on the bench and lawyers came before him representing certain interests, when he knew that in the same litigation they had appeared and controverted and opposed the view which they were employed to represent before him.

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ADAMS. Certainly.

Mr. MINTON. There has been some criticism, at least in some of the newspapers in the silver States, about the way in which the conference committee was appointed. I happened to be in the chair at the time, and followed the usual rule which I have observed to be followed in the Senate. The Senator from Colorado was on the floor, I believe, at the time the conference committee was appointed; was he not?

Mr. ADAMS. I think not.

Mr. MINTON. I thought he was.

Mr. ADAMS. We will assume that he was. I think not, but I am willing to make that assumption.

Mr. MINTON. Very well. If he was not, then, of course, he would not have had a chance to object to the membership of the conference committee if it did not meet with his approval; but when the conference committee was appointed it was appointed in the usual manner as I have observed it in the short time I have been in the Senate. I did not know that there was anything wrong about it.

Mr. ADAMS. I am not complaining of the Senator from Indiana. I did not even know that the Senator from Indiana was in the chair.

Mr. MINTON. I happened to be; and the fact has been called to my attention that the Salt Lake City Tribune, I believe, published an article to the effect that this was a dark and devious scheme on the part of somebody.

Mr. ADAMS. I hope the Senator will not derive the impression that I take that view. I am saying that the method which was followed—a customary method—violated another principle which I think is of greater importance. I think the rule of seniority should not prevail against the rule which requires the majority or prevailing opinion to have the majority representation on a conference committee.

Mr. MINTON. I am sure the Senator from Colorado would have received all possible consideration if he had made an objection.

Mr. ADAMS. The Senator from Colorado is not complaining at this time about himself. He is complaining that the 60 Senators who voted in favor of the amendments did not receive consideration, and that the 18 Senators who voted against them were the ones who received majority representation on the conference committee. The procedure simply does not assure a just result in conference committees; and I have difficulty in understanding why Senators would be willing or wish to serve under such conditions. Necessarily, they are embarrassed by the conditions. At the conference table the Senator from New York said, "Now, of course, you understand that I am here as a conferee representing the Senate to sustain its opinions, but you all know what my views are." It is very difficult for a man who has made a battle upon the floor of the Senate to go before a conference committee and repudiate the very things he has said on the floor. We ought not to ask him to do it.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ADAMS. Certainly.

Mr. BARKLEY. I think it ought to be said in regard to the conference committee, not only so far as the customary rule in regard to appointments is concerned but also within the sphere of the committee itself, that whenever a subcommittee has worked on a measure and has reported to the full committee, and the committee reports the measure to the Senate and it is acted upon, it is almost universally customary to appoint conferees from the members of the subcommittee which considered the bill in committee.

Mr. ADAMS. The Senator is absolutely correct; but let me call his attention to the fact that the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] was not on the subcommittee.

Mr. BARKLEY. Well, he is chairman of the committee.

Mr. ADAMS. Yes; but he was not on the subcommittee. The rule stated by the Senator is absolutely right. It is invariably followed on the Appropriations Committee. The Members who are appointed on conference committees are those who are on the subcommittee.

Mr. BARKLEY. I will say to the Senator that I did not seek membership on the conference committee.

Mr. ADAMS. I know that the Senator now has more duties than he has time for.

Mr. BARKLEY. Everybody here understood the position I had taken with respect to controversial matters that would come before the conference committee, just as everybody understood the position of the Senator from Colorado with respect to the relief joint resolution, in the case of which many amendments went before the conferees with which the Senator from Colorado was not in sympathy. No one, however, doubted his good faith in the matter.

No one accused the Senator of having betrayed the Senate on the amendments we adopted and which were thrown out of the window by the conference committee. No one has raised any question about that at all. If the Senator's argument should now prevail, the result would be that no one ought ever to go on a conference committee when amendments are added which the conferees themselves oppose.

Mr. ADAMS. No; let us make the necessary distinction. No one should serve on a conference committee who is opposed to every single amendment the Senate puts on a bill.

The Senator has been speaking of the relief bills. On the last relief bill there were 132 amendments, and the Senate receded as to only 4 of the amendments. There was no Senator who agreed upon every one of the 132 amendments, but in this case there were 3 definite amendments adopted by the Senate, and where there is a clear-cut issue, I say to the Senator that the Senate majority ought to control the majority of the conferees.

Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator is mistaken in assuming that the conferees opposed all amendments that were adopted by the Senate, even on the floor. While there was a formal vote on one of the amendments, so far as I was concerned as a conferee, I did everything I could to induce the conferees to accept one of the amendments that was adopted by the Senate. We had to make a compromise on it. Even in that regard we could not get all we wanted.

Mr. ADAMS. Let me ask the Senator, if it would not be asking him to violate a confidence, which amendment it is to which he refers.

Mr. BARKLEY. It was the amendment with respect to the price of silver.

Mr. ADAMS. The price of domestic silver?

Mr. BARKLEY. The price of domestic silver; yes.

Mr. ADAMS. But the Senator was not in favor of retaining the other two amendments?

Mr. BARKLEY. I was not, after the conference had discussed them for 2 or 3 hours.

There is no secrecy about the position I have maintained. I do not have to reiterate what I thought about the other two amendments, with respect to the Senate. But it is not true, as has been stated here, and as an effort has been made to create the impression, that in 10 minutes the conferees went out and were in a hurry to yield to the House. The Senator himself knows that is not an accurate statement.

Mr. ADAMS. No; and I will state the facts.

Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator has not made that statement, but other Senators have.

Mr. ADAMS. I will state the facts. We went into conference at 2:30 o'clock, and we remained in conference until 4 o'clock, when three Members of the Senate conferees had to participate in the conference dealing with the relief bill. At that time nothing had been accomplished except discussion, participated in largely by myself and the chairman of the House delegation. At that time the Senator from New York said that we had accomplished nothing. That was the situation of the conference.

Following that, and while we were not in official conference, an agreement was reached between the majority of the Senate conferees and apparently a majority of the House conferees. I did not have an opportunity to participate in those deliberations, which were outside the conference chamber. My first information about the agreement was when the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES] came to me shortly before the conference was to be re-assembled and said, "I think you ought to know what has been done, that the Senate conferees have agreed to do this, and that you ought to know so that you can protect yourself."

Then, when the reassembling came, all the conferees were there. We were not asked what we wanted to do—we were told what the conferees had decided to do. In other words, the decision of the conference was not made in the official conference, though the official action was taken there by signing up the conference report.

Mr. WAGNER rose.

Mr. ADAMS. I am merely stating that as a fact; I am not stating it as challenging anyone's good faith.

Let me ask, how much time have I left, Mr. President?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator has 4 minutes.

Mr. ADAMS. Will not the Senator from New York pardon me? If he will ask me in his own time I will be glad to answer if I can.

Mr. WAGNER. I will not interrupt the Senator.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, in view of the fact that the time is running, permit me to say that I have expressed my views as to how I think conferences should be run. This conference was not so constituted, was not so operated, as to conduce to confidence in conference committees and their action.

Now, as to the silver question, I drew and offered the amendment providing for the purchase of domestic silver at 77.5 cents. That amendment was not mentioned in the portion of the conference sessions which I attended. When the informal conference reported they had decided to abandon the Senate's position on devaluation, they had decided to abandon the Senate's position on foreign silver, and they had decided to cut down the price to be paid domestic producers of silver.

As between two classes of silver producers, what was the situation? They saw fit to continue the purchase of world silver, which involves as much in 1 year as $250,000,000, and to cut down by 7 cents the price of $58,000,000 worth of American silver. They were willing to pay Mexico, to pay Peru, to pay China, to pay Japan, to pay Great Britain in the purchase of foreign silver, but they were willing to cut down from 77 cents to 70 cents the price to be paid the American producer of silver; and that difference may mean the closing or the opening of mines and smelters and the employment of thousands of miners.

I am saying to my colleagues at this time that the real issue about which some of us are concerned is whether we will take the Senate price for domestic silver or whether we will take the cut that was inserted by those who did not vote for the Senate price.

Mr. President, I think there is only one thing for the Senate to do in fairness to itself to vindicate the integrity of conference proceedings—namely, to reject it, to send the conference report back, and ask for a new conference, and then let those who are interested in these problems have a chance to defend their own amendment. I am unwilling that those who were part of a minority should be the majority in determining this question. Nothing will be lost if we follow that course. Conference reports have been disagreed to thousands of times. It merely means the reopening of the consultative operations no longer under the pressure of imaginary legal necessity.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The time of the Senator has expired.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I doubt very seriously whether anything I can say on this subject will affect a single vote when the roll is called. Nevertheless, I feel it my duty to submit a few observations with reference to the conference report, and, in view of the statements which have been made with respect to the conferees, about the conferees themselves.

There is nothing new or unusual in finding conferees on the part of the Senate appointed by the Chair who have on the floor, in a senatorial controversy, taken a position opposite to that which was finally adopted by the Senate itself. Nearly every day, in the appointment of conferees, where there is controversy over legislation, Members of the Senate are appointed who did not vote for the amendments adopted by the Senate, and I recall that last Thursday we consumed about 2 hours' time on an amendment offered by the Senator from Alabama to the relief bill, because the Senator from Colorado [Mr. ADAMS], who, it appeared, would undoubtedly be one of the conferees, perhaps, inadvertently said he would accept the amendment and take it to conference, although he was opposed to it. That did not satisfy the Senator from Alabama or other Senators, and we engaged in debate of considerable length, in which I took the side of the Senator from Colorado in the assertion that conferees ought not be expected and could not be expected to hold out indefinitely in order to secure the adoption of Senate amendments by the conferees.

The conferees on this measure were laboring under an unusual situation on Friday and Friday night. The Senator from Colorado [Mr. ADAMS], the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES], the Senator from Delaware [Mr. TOWNSEND], who had offered one of the amendments adopted by the Senate, were all conferees on the relief measure, and they were in session almost simultaneously. The conferees on the monetary bill met from 2:30 until 4 o'clock and adjourned in order that the same conferees might go to another conference on the relief measure. I think it is fair to say that when those conferees adjourned they were under the impression—both House and Senate conferees—that if the conference report should be filed the next day the House might vote upon it, but later we were told by the House conferees, that unless they got their report in late Thursday night they could not vote on Friday according to their rules, unless they could suspend them by two-thirds vote, which was not likely.

The conferees on the relief measure, with 154 amendments, were in conference. When that situation was brought to the attention of the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER], the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES], and me, as three of the conferees, the other two being engaged in the conference on the relief measure, we did not call in the House conferees. There was no conference between us and the House conferees until the House conferees met in the Appropriations Committee room, when the Senator from Colorado himself was present, but we did hold an informal conference among ourselves, that is the three of us who were not engaged in the other conference, to discuss the new situation which had been brought to our attention by House Members in an effort to get together, and the Senator knows the attitude of the House conferees on one of the amendments, that is pertaining to devaluation, from which they would not yield. It was then that the Senator from South Carolina went out in search for the Senator from Colorado [Mr. ADAMS] and found him in the Appropriations Committee, and then we went into conference with the result which has been stated here.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I was going to say that when the Senator said that he did not have any meeting with the House conferees—I was wondering how the Senate conferees happened to recede from the amendment without the opposition of the House conferees, and how the conference committee reached the agreement on the silver-purchase amendment.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, we were on two horns of a dilemma. One was the price of silver, at 64.5, which would expire last Friday night unless it was renewed either by law or by proclamation of the President. We had the 77.5 rate put in by the Senate and it has been my understanding all the time in discussing the silver situation that one of the objections to the existing situation of those coming from the States interested in silver was that they did not feel that they could go ahead under a 6 months' lease of life under a proclamation by the President, and that they wanted the price fixed in the law, and not by presidential proclamation.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President—

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Kentucky yield to the Senator from Nevada?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. McCARRAN. The Senator says that the price of 77.5 cents was put in by the conferees.

Mr. BARKLEY. No; I said by the Senate.

Mr. McCARRAN. No; I beg the Senator's pardon. He may have intended to say "by the Senate," but I wish to correct the able Senator from Kentucky by saying that it was put in by a record vote of 30 to 48 by the Senate of the United States.

Mr. BARKLEY. I understand that. If I said that a 77.5-percent rate was put in by the conferees it was a slip of the tongue; I, of course, knew better than that. It was put in by the Senate, and that is what I thought I said, and that is what I intended to say, but if I did not say that I thank the Senator for his correction.

Mr. McCARRAN. Why would the Senator yield in face of the fact that it was put in by a record vote of the Chamber which he represented?

Mr. BARKLEY. I do not think that a record vote binds a conferee any more than a viva voce vote. What we were trying to do was to come to an agreement, and it occurred to us and to others who were interested in silver—and I want to say to my friends from the silver States that I have done everything I could as a Senator and as a conferee to increase the price of silver. The Senator from Colorado knows that. The senior Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN] knows it, and I believe the junior Senator from Nevada realizes that during our informal conferences last week I was doing all I could to try to maintain the price of silver or even to increase it.

Mr. McCARRAN. Did the Senator vote for the price of 77.5 cents?

Mr. BARKLEY. No.

Mr. McCARRAN. I did not think so.

Mr. BARKLEY. No; the Senator is not going to get me to falsify the record. The record speaks for itself. I voted against it. But when it came to determining under the circumstances—

Mr. McCARRAN. What were the circumstances?

Mr. BARKLEY. Well, if the Senator will give me time I will detail the circumstances. The circumstances were that at midnight, on Friday night, the 64½-cents price for silver expired, and that if nothing happened then the Secretary of the Treasury was not compelled to buy silver at all the next day, or to pay any more than the market price for it, and the market price would have been 38½ cents, and the circumstances being that the Senate had fixed 77½ cents, the proclamation fixing 64½ cents having expired, and the market price being 38 cents, we felt that 70½ cents, or 71 cents as it figures out under the conference report, was a fair compromise between these figures.

Mr. McCARRAN. If the Senator contends that the price of 64½ cents for silver had expired at midnight, then the whole measure expired at midnight; is that not right?

Mr. BARKLEY. No; the President's proclamation, under which silver was bought, expired at midnight.

Mr. McCARRAN. The proclamation was under the Silver Purchase Act and not under the Thomas amendment.

Mr. BARKLEY. I understand that.

Mr. McCARRAN. But did the Silver Purchase Act expire?

Mr. BARKLEY. No; the proclamation expired.

Mr. McCARRAN. The proclamation was under the Silver Purchase Act.

Mr. BARKLEY. No matter what act it was issued under, it expired at midnight Friday, and if the Secretary of the Treasury had bought silver the next day he might not have been able to offer more than 38 cents an ounce for it. That is the point I am trying to make.

Mr. McCARRAN. I know the Senator is trying to make that point, but the trouble is the Senator has lost his point, because the Silver Purchase Act is the act under which Presidential proclamation was permitted.

Mr. BARKLEY. But the proclamation issued expired at midnight, and nobody knew, and nobody now knows, whether it will be renewed for 6 months or any other length of time at 64½ cents or at 50 cents or at 38 cents, which was the market price for silver all over the world, if this conference report is rejected.

Mr. President, I did not intend to take up so much time talking about the conduct of the conferees. There is nothing unusual about it, and if the rule laid down here that men who vote against an amendment on the floor of the Senate ought not to be put on conference committees because they are not in a position to represent the Senate, then it will be difficult ever to find conferees on a committee who have fought out in committee and in subcommittee and on the floor the details and controversies of legislation.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, will the Senator permit me to state the view a little more accurately?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. ADAMS. I think the minority views should be represented on the conference committee, but the rule is and should be that the prevailing views should be represented by a majority of the conferees. In other words a conference committee should be set up so that it fairly represents the body itself which appoints the conferees.

Mr. BARKLEY. In spite of that, as one of the conferees I think the conferees under the circumstances to which I have alluded did not only the best they could, but that they brought back here a fair compromise between the controversial attitude of the two Houses.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, will the Senator again yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I have only 30 minutes, and I do not wish to take it all up on this point. However, I will yield just once more. And then I will decline to yield further.

Mr. McCARRAN. Will the Senator advise the Senate from where he received the price—from what advice he received the price of 71 cents for silver?

Mr. BARKLEY. That worked out because the price that was being paid by the arrangement under the proclamation was a 50-50 proposition.

Mr. McCARRAN. What was that arrangement?

Mr. BARKLEY. When the silver is brought to the mint and is coined, the Government kept 50 percent of it and the owner of it took back 50 percent, and that resulted in a 64.5-cent price for silver.

Mr. McCARRAN. Right.

Mr. BARKLEY. The Senate amendment provided a 40-60 division.

Mr. McCARRAN. Right.

Mr. BARKLEY. That is when they took the silver to the mint the Government would keep 40 percent of it and give back to the owner 60 percent.

Mr. McCARRAN. Why did the conferees give us 5 cents more?

Mr. BARKLEY. Because it was a fair compromise between a 50-50 proposition and a 40-60 proposition. We brought back a measure providing that the Government should keep 45 percent and give back to the owner 55 percent, which figures up in money about 71 cents per ounce.

Mr. McCARRAN. One more question. Did the Senator or his coconferees in company with the Senator consult anyone of the so-called silver group before he arrived at 70 cents for silver?

Mr. BARKLEY. Yes. It was late in the afternoon. The fact of the matter is that most Senators had gone to their homes for dinner. It was impossible to get in touch with very many of them, but we did confer with the senior Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN].

Mr. President, how much time have I left?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Fifteen minutes.

Mr. BARKLEY. So far as the stabilization provisions in the measure are concerned, there seems to be no opposition. I took the position on the floor in discussing devaluation that the two propositions were linked together. I do not think that is an illegitimate or unsound argument. The stabilization fund and the devaluation power go hand in hand.

I trust that if this power to devalue is given to the President for another period of 2 years, it will never be exercised, or that the need for its exercise will never occur. However, in the chaotic condition in which the world finds itself, with wars and rumors of wars imminent, and a crisis arising with every change of the moon, no one can predict what will be the relative condition of international currencies more than a month or 6 weeks or 2 months in advance. We do know that in the latter part of last December Great Britain was on the verge of devaluing the pound, and for 2 weeks seriously considered a further devaluation of the pound sterling. I think it is fair to assume that if it had not been for the power in the President further to devalue the American dollar, Great Britain might have devalued the pound sterling still further. So much for that. The power in the President is a reserve power, frankly not intended to be used unless it is necessary to use it in order to protect American business from the devaluation of foreign currencies.

With respect to the purchase of foreign silver, on the merits of it, per se, I am not concerned one way or the other. If it involved only the question of whether or not we should buy silver and store it away somewhere, at West Point or any other point in this country, I should not have any particular interest in whether or not we bought it.

The other night the Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT] stated that the purchase of foreign silver was a political matter, to be used for political purposes. I do not know whether he meant domestic political purposes or international political purposes. The argument has been used against the purchase of foreign silver that Mexico, for instance, who has been selling us silver, has dealt unfairly with American property by taking over oil wells in Mexico. I do not condone that treatment of American ownership of oil lands, leases, and properties in Mexico. I do not know what would be the attitude of our own people if foreign interests had been able to purchase and exploit all the oil and mineral resources of the United States. I do not know, and therefore I make no statement as to what would be our attitude if the situation was reversed. However, I think I may say that for some time negotiations have been in progress between the Government of the United States and the Government of Mexico with a view to settling the oil controversies in the interest of American owners; and if those negotiations are successful, the value to the American people will be infinitely more than anything we are paying Mexico for silver at the market price, which we are paying.

Is it wise to serve notice on a friendly neighboring republic, in whose order and stability we are interested as a matter of self-defense, that in the midst of negotiations which are calculated to bring about an amicable and advantageous settlement of that controversy we will suddenly cease to purchase silver, upon which Mexico depends so largely, not only in the matter of purchasing American exportable commodities, but in her dealings economically and financially with the peoples of other countries? It is because of that phase of the situation that I feel it would be most unfortunate for the Congress now to pursue the course indicated by the amendment, which was adopted by the Senate. After the amendment was adopted it was discovered that it would be impossible even to make future deliveries of silver already purchased and contracted for by the United States or by the people of the United States.

If the conference report were rejected, such action would have no effect upon the purchase of silver from Mexico or any other country. The Government of the United States could still go on buying silver, because the adoption or the rejection of the report has nothing whatever to do with that question. If the conference report should be rejected the Secretary of the Treasury, under the law which prevails, would not be bound tomorrow to buy an ounce of silver from anybody, either in the United States or anywhere else. He might do it if he decided it was in the public interest to do it, at such price as he might see fit to pay.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for one statement?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. ADAMS. The President pro tempore [Mr. PITTMAN] who now presides over the Senate well remembers the language that was put in the Silver Purchase Act at the time it was passed. The Secretary of the Treasury was authorized and directed to purchase silver until the price reached $1.29 or until silver became a certain proportion of the monetary stock. The Secretary of the Treasury then said, "I will in good faith carry out the intent of the act." So I think there is a very decided compulsion.

Mr. BARKLEY. I think the conditions stipulated in that law have been more than met. The Secretary would not be compelled to buy silver, and if it were held that he was compelled to buy it, he would not be compelled to pay more than the market price for silver, which is now 38 cents. The price went down from forty-one and a fraction cents to 38 cents after the adoption of the Senate amendment. I do not believe the price can be maintained even at 38 cents unless the Government of the United States is in the market to buy it at a price higher than that.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. McCARRAN. May I, with all due respect, correct the Senator? When we passed the Silver Purchase Act the world price for silver was 47 cents. Last week it was 41 cents.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I understand that the price of silver fluctuated. When the Roosevelt administration came in it was about 25 cents. It went up to 30, and then to 35; and when we passed the Silver Purchase Act it went up still further. At one time it reached a price of 81 cents. I am referring to the world market price. It is now down to 38 cents.

Mr. McCARRAN. Of course, it could be pressed down to nothing if it were desired.

Mr. BARKLEY. I do not want to do that or see it done, and I have been doing everything in my power to prevent the bringing about of a situation in which the price might be depressed to 1 cent, or 38 cents, or any other amount below what we have been paying for it. I think I may with becoming modesty claim that I am at least partly responsible for the provision in the conference report which raises the price from 64½ cents to 71 cents, which is 7 cents an ounce more than is now being paid, or was paid during the past 6 months.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. ADAMS. With all due respect to the conference report, I suggest that the conference report reduce the figure rather than raise it.

Mr. BARKLEY. We reduced the figure from that contained in the amendment of the Senate; but we raised it 7 cents above what has been paid by the Government of the United States.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. McCARRAN. Why did not the Senator take the advice of the body of which he is the leader, and place the figure at 77 cents?

Mr. BARKLEY. I have already answered that question. We had to deal with a situation in which no one could obtain all, or any great proportion, of what he wanted. We entered into the conference report because we felt that that was the best we could do. It is now up to the Senate to say whether it will accept or reject the conference report.

Mr. McCARRAN. Why did not the Senator—

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I have only a few more minutes. I should like to have the Senate understand that no matter what we shall do with the conference report, the purchase of foreign silver will not be affected but the domestic purchase of silver may be very materially affected. If the conference report shall be adopted the price for silver paid by the United States during the life of the law will be approximately 71 cents an ounce.

The Senator from Arizona [Mr. ASHURST], my very good friend, stated awhile ago that if the conference report should be rejected we should have before us within 2 hours a conference report providing for 77 cents an ounce for silver. I questioned the authority of the Senator to draw any such conclusion as that. If the conference report is rejected we still must go into a conference; and if the House agrees to another conference and the conferees are appointed, we still must negotiate with the House conferees, not only on the question of devaluation, but on the question of the price of silver. One of the considerations which induced the House Members to agree to raise the price of silver practically 7 cents above what we were paying for it during the past 6 months, and almost double the world price, was that it was necessary to make a compromise and enter into an agreement in order that this legislation might be promptly enacted. It was desirable that the conference report should have been voted upon last Friday in order that there might be no hiatus between the expiration of the President's proclamation with respect to silver and the adoption of the conference report itself.

Mr. CLARK of Idaho. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. Just a moment. After investigating the matter, which I had done on my own initiative, when the President sent to the Senate the opinion of the Attorney General which had been rendered to the President at his request, I had no doubt, and I now have no doubt, that the adoption of the conference report would extend all the powers conferred in the original law with respect to devaluation and the stabilization fund.

I now yield to the Senator from Idaho.

Mr. CLARK of Idaho. Will the Senator from Kentucky tell us why the Senate conferees did not insist that the House conferees go back for a roll call vote on each of the three amendments which were voted on, two of them by roll call, and one by an overwhelming voice vote in the Senate? I asked the distinguished Senator from New York last Friday if the Senate conferees had requested that this be done. In answer to my question, he stated that they had requested it, but that the House conferees did not seem to want to do it. Will the Senator tell us why the Senate conferees did not insist upon this being done in order that the House conferees might at least have a mandate to sustain the very strong and arbitrary position which they took?

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I will say to the Senator there was no more reason to insist upon a separate House vote upon these amendments than upon any other amendments the Senate adopts to House bills; and, of course, the time element, I will state frankly to the Senator, entered into the consideration, because there was evidently and undoubtedly already a filibuster—it developed there was one in the House as well as in the Senate—and a vote on the conference report was not obtained in the House until late in the afternoon of Friday. As carrying these amendments back to the House would have involved three roll calls, with the element of time, as the conferees thought and as we thought, being an important consideration, it did not seem wise to insist to the last degree that the House conferees should do so and have the House vote on them separately under the circumstances when they had, by a very large vote, declined to agree to them when they were laid before the House.

Mr. CLARK of Idaho. That was when they were laid before the House en bloc.

Mr. BARKLEY. Yes, that was a vote on the amendments en bloc; they were not voted on separately in the House. But there is nothing unusual about that. The Senator, as a former Member of the House and as a present Member of the Senate knows that there is nothing unusual about such a procedure—in fact it is the usual procedure. As a rule, even in the case of the most controversial amendments the House does not take a separate vote upon them. The House did not do so in regard to the relief joint resolution. Some of the amendments on the relief measure were as controversial as are some of the matters involved in the pending measure. The same procedure was followed in the House and the Senate with respect to the conference report on the relief joint resolution, and, as I said the other night, I think the conferees on the monetary bill, considering its importance and the importance of the relief joint resolution, gave it as much consideration as the conferees gave to the relief measure and the conference report thereon. There was no such demand made in that instance, and I do not think it is or would have been quite in order to insist that we should have sent these amendments back to the House to be voted on separately on this particular bill, when, on other equally important amendments on other bills, it was not done.

I hope that the conference report will be agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The time of the Senator from Kentucky has expired.

Mr. AUSTIN. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Davis	King	Radeliffe
Ashurst	Donahey	La Follette	Reed
Austin	Ellender	Lee	Russell
Bailey	George	Lodge	Schwartz
Bankhead	Gerry	Logan	Schwellenbach

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Eighty-three Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I suppose that no one realizes the importance of this occasion more keenly than does the junior Senator from the silver State of Nevada. I suppose no one from the standpoint of his personal equation realizes more profoundly the importance of the vote that is to take place at 5 o'clock this afternoon than does the junior Senator from Nevada.

I regret that I learned for the first time from the able leader of the majority that I am not in accord with my honorable colleague [Mr. PITTMAN], whose life in this body has been devoted to the great cause of silver. But, Mr. President, I think that a principle is greater than anything that comes within a compromise, and I do not think that anyone was or is authorized to trade the ancient principle or the cause of silver for anything less than its monetary value. If the Senate of the United States by a vote of 48 to 30 was right when it voted for a price of 77.57 cents an ounce for silver, if the Senate of the United States at that time under the individual oaths of its Members believed that it was right, then there is no compromising with right.

If I may, I will go back a little into the history of silver. There are those in America, there are those in the Senate of the United States, and there are those in the other House of the Congress of the United States who fervently believe that by paying 77.57 cents an ounce to those who present silver to the mint they are buying something as a commodity; the Government of the United States, as they believe, is buying something as a commodity.

Mr. President, the Constitution of the United States, the organic law, provided that gold and silver only should be recognized by the States as money, and from 1792 until 1873 gold and silver were recognized as the money of this country.

When in 1873 Congress enacted the Sherman law, for the first time, by legislation, we declared that silver was not a part of the basic money of the country.

Then, Mr. President, for the first time we said to the silver miners of America, "When you bring your silver to the mints of the country you will not receive the monetary value established by law of $1.29 plus." That was the first time we so declared. That was in 1873. Until that time, following constitutional provisions, following American law, we had declared that gold and silver were the money of the country, and we had declared that silver should be taken at $1.29 at the mints of the country.

What are we doing today? Why have we abandoned that great cause? Why did we abandon silver? Why did we say we would go on a gold standard? And then, after we went on a gold standard, why did we say that from 1933 on we would bury the standard on which America was resting?

Mr. President, let us come down now to the present day and present history.

Last week we voted, by a vote of 48 to 30 in the Senate, that silver should be taken at the mints of the country at the ratio of 40 percent to the Government and 60 percent to the producers of silver. Who are the producers of silver? What is the Government of the United States? The Government of the United States is the sovereign. The people are the sovereign. The producers of silver within the United States are those who delve into the bowels of the earth and produce, not a commodity as one would produce corn or wheat or barley, but that which the organic law declared to be a part of the basic money of the country, and which neither the organic law nor the legislative body has ever changed from that day until now. The organic law declared that the States of this Government should recognize gold and silver as the money of the country, and then we declared by the organic law that the Congress of the United States should coin money and regulate the value thereof. So we coined gold and silver, and we regulated the value thereof, and we provided that 371¼ grains of silver nine-tenths fine should constitute the American silver dollar.

Mr. President, the conference committee now have set aside everything that was sacred in money. They have set aside, first of all, the vote of the Senate of the United States, a vote which ordinarily would be considered overwhelming, 48 to 30. They have entirely set at naught that vote. That vote no longer counts for anything. In other words, the able leader of the majority, and a very predominant member of the conference committee, told the Senate this afternoon that there was no such thing as a compromise. But why did not the able leader, in his ability, come back to his body and work to have his body guide him or advise him so that he might know whether or not there was such a thing as a compromise? And why did not the conference committee tell the House conferees to go back to their body and see whether or not that body might take a different view as to silver?

Mr. President, this which is offered to the so-called silver bloc today is purely and simply a sop. They want us to compromise right for wrong. The able chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency, the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER], has come time after time to those who constitute the so-called silver bloc and has asked that we vote for appropriation after appropriation to take care of the needy on the East Side of New York; and I doubt if there is a member of the so-called silver bloc who has not gladly yielded to the humanitarian views of the Senator from New York. But, Mr. President, I think that a man or a woman out on the side hills of the West who has only his toil and labor to sustain him, and who has boys and girls out there looking to him for sustenance, is just as worth while as is the citizen on the East Side of New York or in any part of the world.

Mr. President, if we vote to sustain this conference report, it means that the miners of the West, the men who delve into the bowels of the earth to bring forth not a commodity but the money of the country—that which you use every day, if you please, the money of the poor, the money of the masses—will have been deserted by their champions. They will have been forgotten, because 70-cent silver means that many mines in the West may close, and many miners in the West may go out of employment, and with their closing there will go on the relief rolls thousands of men with their other thousands of dependents; but, worse than that, there will go a principle. If we were right when we voted for 77.57 cents for silver, then we are wrong if we relinquish that and vote for 70-cent silver.

Mr. President, there is only one appeal I have, and that is the appeal that comes out of the hearts of the toilers of the mining States of America. There is only one appeal I have, and that is from the masses of the country, because from time immemorial silver has been the money of the masses. From time immemorial silver has been the money of the poor. From time immemorial silver has been the thing which has kept business going.

Let me use a homely illustration. Does anyone in the Senate remember the day when he had in his pocket a $5 gold piece? It is a long time in the past; but when you had in your pocket that $5 gold piece, do you remember the thought that you had? If you were among the poor where I have always been, you will remember my thoughts as I will repeat them to you. I thought, "I will not break that $5 gold piece. I am going to sink it way down deep, because if I break it I am going to spend it, and if I spend it, it will be gone." But if you had in your pocket five silver dollars, you would say, "Come on, boys! Let's go."

It is the silver dollar that pays the bills. It is the silver dollar that rolls between the butcher and the baker and the candlestick maker. It is the silver dollar that made America.

If we are to relinquish the great cause of silver at this hour, if there are those who would surrender because of a momentary expediency, if momentary success means more than national consequences; if we are to forget the cause of the toiler in metalliferous mining sections for personal achievement in the next or succeeding elections, if faith in the Constitution of the United States is a mere fallacy, if personal fortune is more than national fortitude—then we will yield principle by the vote at 5 o'clock this afternoon and adopt policy. If we are to say to the silver miners of America, "You may stand on a basic line between what you can go on with and what you cannot go on with; namely, you could go on with 77-cent silver, but you cannot go on with 70-cent silver, but we will take you on the relief roll between the two," then vote for the conference report. Otherwise, vote it down, because principle is greater than anything else in all the world.

Mr. President, from telegrams which I have received from my home—I have them here in my pocket—I realize that my silver miners are saying to me, "Take the compromise. Do the best you can with it." Mr. President, if this were to mean my last vote in the Senate, I would go down with principle. If this is my last term in the Senate, then may God grant that my last term in the Senate will be spent in furtherance of what I believe to be right, and in furtherance of what I believe to be for the best interests of the people of the State in which I was born and reared. I would rather go down with principle than compromise with something that I know to be wrong.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President, I ask leave to have printed in the RECORD an editorial from this morning's New York Times on the legislation now before the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HATCH in the chair). Without objection, it is so ordered.

The editorial is as follows:

[From the New York Times of Wednesday, July 5, 1939]

THE MONETARY BILL

There is disagreement in Washington regarding the situation that has been created by the defeat of the administration's monetary bill. The immediate question at issue is whether passage by the Senate of the measure which failed of enactment in the midnight session Friday evening will in itself be sufficient to reestablish the powers which the President desires, or whether—these powers having expired automatically on June 30 under existing legislation—entirely new legislation must now be initiated in both Houses in order to re-create an authority which has ceased to exist. The point of law is one for legal minds to decide, and perhaps it will not be decided finally to the satisfaction of all parties until the question is carried to the courts. Meanwhile, so far as the common sense and the morals of the matter are concerned, the layman cannot fail to note that some of the administration's spokesmen have taken a curious position: First, in attempting to bring great pressure to bear to get the pending measure passed by midnight on Friday, on the ground that new legislation would be needed in case it failed to pass by that critical hour, and then, after the bill had failed to pass, in arguing that the precise hour of its passage does not matter anyway.

So far as the larger questions of policy are concerned, three points are at stake in the present controversy: (1) The President's power to devalue the dollar; (2) the maintenance of the $2,000,000,000 exchange-stabilization fund; and (3) the provision for the purchase by the Treasury of domestically mined silver at a premium above the market. Of these three points it can be said:

1. Discontinuance of the President's power to devalue the dollar is greatly to be desired, on the ground that this will remove from the present economic situation a major source of continued uncertainty. So long as the President had such power—an arbitrary and personal power never before given to a Chief Executive in the whole history of the United States—there were bound to be intermittent rumors and guesses regarding what use he would make of it, with a consequent invitation to speculation and an accompanying uncertainty regarding the future value of the dollar in any plans involving long-term investment. It will be a step in the direction of greater monetary stability if all efforts to revive this power, now or later in the present session, are defeated.

2. There are sound reasons for desiring reestablishment of the stabilization fund. Moreover, there is every reason to believe that both Houses of Congress will readily approve such action, provided the question is presented in an independent measure, wholly separate from the question of power to devalue the dollar. Operation of the stabilization fund is a steadying influence in preventing unnecessary fluctuations in foreign exchange, standing in sharp contrast to the proposed arbitrary power to devalue.

3. As for purchases of silver: None of the proposals put forward during the present debate goes far enough, or in the right direction, to meet the real needs of the present situation. The whole silver-purchase program has been an egregious and unmitigated failure, the only visible results of which have been an unwarranted sop to the silver interests and the acquisition by the Treasury of some 2,000,000,000 ounces of a metal for which no earthly use is now in prospect. The time is long overdue for repeal of the entire Silver Purchase Act, lock, stock, and barrel.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, I offered an amendment to the amendment of the Senator from Colorado for the coinage of silver at $1.29 an ounce, the monetary price, less 2 cents for seigniorage; there were 26 votes in this body for that amendment. I then modified the amendment so that it provided 77.5 cents an ounce, that is, on a 40-percent basis for seigniorage, and the amendment as so modified was adopted. However, about 8 votes would have defeated it.

There were some on this side who were very much interested in the domestic silver question who did not vote for the Adams amendment, and there were certain Senators on the other side who did vote for the Adams amendment and who did not vote for the silver amendment. I noticed that the distinguished Senator from Delaware did not vote for the domestic silver amendment.

Mr. President, I should like to take a chance, if there were reasonable hope of getting the miners of the West 77.5 cents for silver. I would take a chance on getting them the monetary price of $1.29, as I have tried to do for 20 years. I think possibly I know the conditions of the miners as well as does anyone else in this country.

Our miners are now in a desperate situation. We do not know the price we are getting for silver. We know that the Government is not buying any domestic silver. I know that the President has no right to make a proclamation today with regard to domestic silver. He can, if he desires, direct the Secretary of the Treasury to pay more for domestic silver than the world market price of 38 cents an ounce in the Silver Purchase Act, and I know he is not going to do it. I know that the Secretary of the Treasury is not only prejudiced against domestic silver, but he is vindictive, and possibly some others are vindictive. There is no shadow of hope if any discretion is left in these bureaus.

We have begged those who had the authority to issue a proclamation, if and when they issued it, to issue it for 2 years, so that a person could adjust his business during that period of time, and possibly proceed to build a mill. But not until the last day, when the prior proclamation was expiring, did they say or do anything. Then they made the price 64 cents an ounce, which price during the last year resulted in throwing 318,000 persons out of employment.

What information have we now as to whether they will provide any remedy in this matter? Friday night the right to issue the proclamation expired. The Department was urged to issue it before the authority expired, even if they issued it at the same old 64 cents an ounce, so that there would not be confusion in the entire industry. What is the condition now? There is not a man in the country who produces silver who knows where the market is or what the price will be. The foreign price is fixed by the Secretary of the Treasury, and the Secretary of the Treasury will not tell anyone in this country whether he is going to buy any more or at what price he will buy.

Mr. President, there are thousands of miners being thrown out of employment this very day. I venture to say that if the junior Senator from Idaho [Mr. CLARK] were on the floor of the Senate he would state that 7,000 miners have been thrown out of work in Idaho in the last week or 10 days. That is a condition which is intolerable. That is a condition bringing about suffering which we should not be required to face.

I should like to have the price of $1.29 and I have fought for that for over 20 years. I had it fixed at a dollar an ounce under the Pittman Silver Act of 1918, when we were furnishing India with silver at $1 an ounce, and put the silver back in the Treasury at a dollar an ounce from domestic production.

I went to London and negotiated the London agreement, through which we received 77½ cents an ounce for our silver for 3 years. But we have no longer any control over it. The treaty is dead; it is gone. We are at the mercy of a department now, and I know that that Department would like to put the price of silver down to the world price of silver, and that that Department would like to crowd the price of world silver down until those who depend on mining for a living, all kinds of mining, would all be dying of starvation.

In view of these facts I am faced with a serious question. I am faced with the question of whether I will take part in permitting this chaos in mining to go on for weeks and weeks, or whether I will accept without filibuster the price of 71 cents an ounce.

Mr. President, I was told by the senior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY] that there was great opposition to the domestic silver amendment; that two of the Democrats on the conference committee of the House were absolutely opposed to it; that he doubted whether they could possibly get over 64 cents an ounce. I said, "If you come back to the Senate with a provision for 64 cents an ounce, I will fight it as long as I can stand on the floor. I want you to fight for the 77½ cents an ounce." He wanted to know whether I would support the conference report if they could get a price half way between the 77 and the 64. I said, "Yes; if you try seriously to keep the price up, and if, mind you, you do not change the language of the amendment." I wrote out a clause that the silver would not be subject to the 50-percent tax, and insisted that it should go into the conference report.

The Senator from Kentucky told me that the House conferees wanted to extend the law for 2 years under the proclamation extending these other acts. I stated to him then that the silver provision is not connected with any other act on earth. Every act can die; this act stands alone. It is not an amendment; it is a law. It is not a silver purchase act. A man takes his silver to the mint and it is coined. It does not depend on the discretion of any bureau. He is away from all that, through with it, not for 6 months or 2 years, but forever. That price stands as the coinage figure forever, unless the law is repealed by Congress, and I venture to say that before Congress repeals the act it will pass another act, as soon as the Members of Congress become educated, recognizing that silver is money, and that the miners should have the privilege of coinage at the same rate the Government applies to everyone else, at $1.29 an ounce.

Of course, we could defeat this conference report and ask for another conference on the bill, and then have the House conferees take the matter to the House and have a separate vote in the House on each of the four amendments. What would happen to the domestic silver amendment? There are not one-fifth of the Members of the House who are interested in domestic silver. We would be "murdered." Should we take the matter to the House for a separate vote, or should we do what the distinguished Senator from Connecticut suggests, go back into the committee with it, and let them report four separate propositions? God knows what chance the domestic silver producers would have in this country, when most of the silver is produced in 5 States, and none of it is produced in any but 11 States. This is the only way on earth we could have gotten onto the statute books of this country a bill providing for the coinage of silver.

If we should kill the conference report, through what process would we then have to go? We would ask for another conference; and suppose that were granted us? Then we would ask for the appointment of other conferees. And who would they be? In what would they be interested? Would they be interested in domestic silver? Never. The House conferees would ask for a separate vote in the House, and domestic silver would be killed.

I would not want to give up the hope we have, with 15 or 20 Senators in this body voting for the coinage of silver, although they hated silver. I doubt whether we will ever have their love and affection again. I do not want to take a chance on it. We have had their support, and anyone who takes a chance by giving up this opportunity is dilly-dallying with idleness in the West, with the prosperity of metal mining, with the prosperity of the States of the West.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report, on which the yeas and nays have been ordered.

MR. WAGNER. Mr. President, I intend to take but very little time of the Senate. I was one of the members of the conference. I have already stated my attitude and my participation in that conference, and I have no apologies to make for it. I acted in what I conscientiously think was a proper performance of my duties.

I can understand the position of the Senator from Colorado. He is my friend and we agree on many things. But no one, least of all I, could raise any question that he was not a proper conferee on the relief measure, although upon the floor of the Senate he expressed opposition to several amendments which we adopted to the relief measure. Having such great confidence in him, I knew very well that going into that conference he would do his utmost to preserve the Senate amendments.

I myself was particularly interested in one amendment with reference to the theater project. I think an unfortunate thing was done in conference in that regard. But I know that the Senator did his best to preserve the amendment adopted by the Senate. The situation was similar with respect to other amendments.

Mr. President, I should be the last person to challenge the right of the Senator to participate in that conference because he opposed some of the amendments which were adopted. I have not the slightest feeling about it. I have been a judge. I know what it means to be disappointed in a result, and sometimes one gives expression to one's grievances. However, everyone must be generous in that regard.

But I will say that if anyone here had challenged the propriety of my sitting on the conference when I was appointed, I would, of course, have refused to serve. But no such suggestion was made, and I myself felt that it was entirely proper for me to serve on that committee.

As to the merits of the whole proposition, I took 2 hours of the Senate's time when the bill was originally brought to the Senate for consideration—perhaps more time than I was justified in doing—in explaining the provisions of the bill.

While I have listened to many arguments in the course of this debate, none of them have really challenged the statements made in that speech, particularly with reference to the effect of the President's action upon the prices of commodities in the United States, upon employment, and toward stopping a terrific deflationary spiral which was bringing us to the brink of economic ruin. That spiral was arrested, and conditions thereafter improved.

I should now like to read briefly into the RECORD some views which I have on the legal question which has arisen, and then I shall conclude:

In view of some of the statements which have been made both on the floor of the Senate and elsewhere as to the effect of the adoption of the conference report (No. 1006, accompanying H. R. 3325), now before the Senate for consideration, I feel that as chairman of the Senate committee that has handled this legislation, and on behalf of the Senate conferees who approved the conference report, it would be appropriate to indicate very briefly what is intended to be accomplished by the conference report.

By paragraph (b) (2) of section 43 of the act of May 12, 1933, the President was given certain powers with respect to the fixing of the metallic content of the dollar and the coinage of silver. Section 10 of the Gold Reserve Act of 1934 set up a stabilization fund of $2,000,000,000 and granted certain powers to the Secretary of the Treasury and the President to deal with the stabilization fund for certain specified purposes. The Gold Reserve Act of 1934 provided that both the stabilization-fund powers and the aforementioned powers in the act of May 12, 1933, were to expire on January 30, 1936, unless the President extended the powers for an additional year. This the President did by proclamation on January 10, 1936. By the act of January 23, 1937, the Congress extended all these powers until June 30, 1939. The bill now before the Senate for consideration is in precisely the same form as the act of January 23, 1937, except that the date, June 30, 1941, is substituted for the date June 30, 1939.

It was the intention of the Congress by the act of January 23, 1937, to extend until June 30, 1939, all of the powers specified in paragraph (b) (2) of section 43 of the act of May 12, 1933, as amended, and all of the powers of section 10 of the Gold Reserve Act relating to the stabilization fund. It is the unquestioned intention to accomplish by the conference report and the bill now up for consideration an identical extension of powers until June 30, 1941. And insofar as it is a question of congressional intention, it is completely immaterial whether the act of January 23, 1937, was, and the bill now before the Senate for consideration is, adopted before or after the expiration of the existing powers. If the conference report and the bill are adopted, the Congress, knowing of the expiration of the powers on June 30, 1939, will have intended thereby to continue the aforementioned powers unimpaired and to continue to make the stabilization fund available for the purposes specified in section 10 of the Gold Reserve Act, as amended, precisely as such powers and stabilization fund existed up to midnight of June 30, 1939.

It is my view that the language employed in the conference report, which is identical with the language employed by the Congress in 1937, except for the change in the expiration date, adequately and properly expresses the aforementioned intention to continue the stabilization fund and these monetary powers. I take this opportunity to state for the record that, in my opinion, such would be the intention of the Congress in adopting this conference report. If this report is adopted it would seem that there can be no question as to the intention of the Congress to continue the existence of the stabilization fund and aforementioned powers of the Secretary of the Treasury and of the President with respect to the stabilization fund, the fixing of the content of the dollar, and the coinage of silver, just as they had existed up to last Friday.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to insert at this point in the RECORD two memoranda on the legal phases of the pending matter, to which I had intended to refer, but did not have time to do so, because I yielded so much of my time to my colleague.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The matter referred to is as follows:

It appears that a question has arisen whether the moneys in the stabilization fund established pursuant to section 10 (b) of the act of January 30, 1934 (48 Stat. 341; U. S. C., title 31, sec. 822a (b)), must be now covered into the Treasury of the United States. The question, it is understood, arises because of the failure of the Congress, prior to midnight, June 30, 1939, to amend section 10 (c) of the afore-mentioned act, as amended by section 1 of the act of January 23, 1937 (50 Stat. 4; U. S. C., Supp. IV, title 31, sec. 822a (c)), by substituting the date of June 30, 1941, in lieu of the expiration date of June 30, 1939. If the moneys in the stabilization fund must now be covered into the Treasury, it is clear that they cannot, after such coverage, be withdrawn from the Treasury save in consequence of an appropriation made by law (art. I, sec. 9, cl. 7, of the Constitution). However, it is submitted that the moneys in the stabilization fund need not at this time be covered into the Treasury of the United States.

Section 10 of the act of January 30, 1934 (48 Stat. 341), as amended by section 1 of the act of January 23, 1937 (50 Stat. 4), provides:

"(a) For the purpose of stabilizing the exchange value of the dollar, the Secretary of the Treasury, with the approval of the President, directly or through such agencies as he may designate, is authorized, for the account of the fund established in this section, to deal in gold and foreign exchange and such other instruments of credit and securities as he may deem necessary to carry out the purpose of this section. An annual audit of such fund shall be made and a report thereof submitted to the President.

"(b) To enable the Secretary of the Treasury to carry out the provisions of this section, there is hereby appropriated, out of the receipts which are directed to be covered into the Treasury under section 7 hereof, the sum of $2,000,000,000, which sum, when available, shall be deposited with the Treasurer of the United States in a stabilization fund (hereinafter called the 'fund') under the exclusive control of the Secretary of the Treasury, with the approval of the President, whose decisions shall be final and not be subject to review by any other officer of the United States. The fund shall be available for expenditure, under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury and in his discretion, for any purpose in connection with carrying out the provisions of this section, including the investment and reinvestment in direct obligations of the United States of any portions of the fund which the Secretary of the Treasury, with the approval of the President, may from time to time determine are not currently required for stabilizing the exchange value of the dollar. The proceeds of all sales and investments and all earnings and interest accruing under the operations of this section shall be paid into the fund and shall be available for the purposes of the fund.

"(c) All the powers conferred by this section shall expire June 30, 1939, unless the President shall sooner declare the existing emergency ended and the operation of the stabilization fund terminated."

Section 7 of the act of January 30, 1934 (48 Stat. 341), referred to in section 10, provides:

"In the event that the weight of the gold dollar shall at any time be reduced, the resulting increase in value of the gold held by the United States (including the gold held as security for gold certificates and as a reserve for any United States notes and for Treasury notes of 1890) shall be covered into the Treasury as a miscellaneous receipt; and, in the event that the weight of the gold dollar shall at any time be increased, the resulting decrease in value of the gold held as a reserve for any United States notes and for Treasury notes of 1890, and as security for gold certificates shall be compensated by transfers of gold bullion from the general fund, and there is hereby appropriated an amount sufficient to provide for such transfers and to cover the decrease in value of the gold in the general fund."

From the above-quoted provisions, it seems clear that the stabilization fund was established from moneys appropriated out of miscellaneous receipts in the Treasury and that the moneys in the fund are now held on deposit with the Treasurer of the United States, subject to the control of the Secretary of the Treasury, with the approval of the President. It is understood from the accounting officers of the Treasury Department that the $2,000,000,000, referred to in section 10 (b), were taken out of the Treasury pursuant to an appropriation warrant and were deposited by the Secretary of the Treasury with the Treasurer of the United States.

An examination of the Federal statutes reveals only two sections which seem relevant to the present inquiry. They are section 3690 of the Revised Statutes of 1873 (U. S. C. title 31, sec. 712), and section 5 of the act of June 20, 1874 (18 Stat. 110), as amended (U. S. C., title 31, sec. 713). (Sec. 3691 of the Revised Statutes of 1873 (U. S. C., title 31, sec. 715) relates, apparently, to accounts inactive for 2 years.) The former of those two statutes provides, as it appears in the code:

"Balances of appropriations, expenditure: Except as otherwise provided by law, all balances of appropriations contained in the annual appropriation bills and made specifically for the service of any fiscal year, and remaining unexpended at the expiration of such fiscal year, shall only be applied to the payment of expenses properly incurred during that year, or to the fulfillment of contracts properly made within that year; and balances not needed for such purposes shall be carried to the surplus fund. This section, however, shall not apply to appropriations known as permanent or indefinite appropriations."

The latter provides, as it appears in the code:

"Same; carried to surplus fund: After the 1st day of July in each year the Secretary of the Treasury shall cause all unexpended balances of appropriations which shall have remained upon the books of the Treasury for 2 fiscal years to be carried to the surplus fund and covered into the Treasury: Provided, That this provision shall not apply to permanent specific appropriations, appropriations for rivers and harbors, lighthouses, or public buildings, or the pay of the Navy and Marine Corps; but the appropriations named in this proviso shall continue available until otherwise ordered by Congress."

It seems clear that section 3690 of the Revised Statutes of 1873 is not here applicable. In 1870 (13 Op. Atty. Gen. 288, 290) Attorney General Akerman had occasion to consider the provisions of the statute which was subsequently incorporated into the Revised Statutes of 1873 as section 3690. He stated that to bring a balance within the provisions of that statute such balance must remain from an appropriation contained in one of the annual appropriation bills. The moneys in the stabilization fund, now held with the Treasurer of the United States, were not derived from an annual appropriation bill.

Turning now to section 5 of the act of June 20, 1874 (18 Stat. 110, as amended, U. S. C., title 31, sec. 713), it is apparent that such section, even if applicable, will not require the moneys in the stabilization fund to be carried to the surplus fund and covered into the Treasury prior to the end of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1941.

The money appropriated pursuant to section 10 (b) of the act of January 30, 1934, as stated above, was withdrawn from the Treasury pursuant to an appropriation warrant and placed on deposit with the Treasurer of the United States, under the control of the Secretary of the Treasury, with the approval of the President. It would seem, therefore, that the situation is analogous to that where money is withdrawn from the Treasury pursuant to an appropriation and placed under the control of a disbursing officer. That latter situation was considered in 1877 (15 Op. Atty. Gen. 357) by Attorney General Charles Devens in an opinion directed to the Honorable John Sherman, Secretary of the Treasury. In that opinion it was ruled that it became the duty of the disbursing officer to repay the funds under his control, in order that they might be carried to the surplus fund and thereafter covered into the Treasury, only after the appropriations under which the funds were withdrawn from the Treasury had lapsed under the provisions of section 5 of the act of June 20, 1874.

That section 5 of the 1874 act does not operate to require carrying unexpended balances of appropriations to surplus for 2 years following the last date upon which appropriated funds are available for obligation is fundamental. Among other authorities, see the decision by Secretary of the Treasury John Sherman, dated April 20, 1877; (1897) 3 Comp. Dec. 623, 627; (1901) 8 Comp. Dec. 369, 374; (1929) 9 Comp. Gen. 43, 45. See also (1920) 32 Op. Atty. Gen. 359, 360.

The decisions in 1901 (8 Comp. Dec. 369) and 1929 (9 Comp. Gen. 43) are particularly relevant to the instant inquiry. In the former case, Congress made an appropriation for national-defense purposes of $50,000,000 which expired on June 30, 1899. Comptroller of the Treasury Tracewell ruled that section 5 of the act of June 20, 1874, required the money to be finally carried to the surplus fund and covered into the Treasury at the end of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1901. In other words, he held that the 2-year period was applicable.

In the decision in 1929 (9 Comp. Gen. 43) Comptroller General McCarl had before him a case in which the appropriation act provided that the appropriation should be available during the fiscal years 1917 and 1918. He ruled that under section 5 of the act of June 20, 1874, the unexpended balance of that appropriation should have been carried to the surplus fund as of June 30, 1920, 2 years after the expiration of the appropriation.

In view of the foregoing, it is clear that the moneys now on deposit with the Treasurer of the United States in the stabilization fund are not required to be carried to the surplus fund and covered into the Treasury at any time prior to June 30, 1941.

There is, however, a matter which is collateral to the instant inquiry which may deserve some consideration. As was stated above, it is clear, under the Constitution, that once money is covered into the Treasury it can be withdrawn only in consequence of appropriations made by law. It must be remembered, however, that the constitutional provision operates only after the money has been covered into the Treasury. Money is not covered into the Treasury automatically. Section 305 of the Revised Statutes of 1873, as amended (U. S. C., title 31, sec. 147), defines the duties of the Treasurer of the United States. It is therein provided, as the section appears in the code:

"He shall take receipts for all moneys paid by him, and shall give receipts for all moneys received by him; and all receipts for moneys received by him shall be endorsed upon warrants signed by the Secretary of the Treasury, without which warrant, so signed, no acknowledgment for money received into the public Treasury shall be valid."

In 1907 (14 Comp. Dec. 20, 21-22) Comptroller of the Treasury Tracewell said, with regard to the matter of covering money into the Treasury and with regard to the last-quoted statutory provision:

"The process of receiving money into the Treasury of the United States is by first making a deposit of the money with the Treasurer, who issues a certificate of deposit therefor; and the Secretary of the Treasury thereupon issues a covering-in warrant, which authorizes the Treasurer to take up in his accounts the money deposited with him. The deposit of the money with the Treasurer in the first instance is in the nature of a tender, the acceptance of which is signified by the issuing of the covering-in warrant. It is assumed the warrant issues in the regular course of business, but whether it is done promptly or otherwise cannot in this case affect the question from what date interest is to be computed where interest is legally payable.

"Under section 305, Revised Statutes, as amended, * * * no acknowledgment for money received into the Public Treasury is valid without a warrant signed by the Secretary. The law makes the issuing of the warrant necessary to complete and give validity to the transaction, and until it issues it is apparently still in the power of the Secretary of the Treasury to decline to receive the deposit. In this respect the transaction differs from the usual banking practice, where the deposit is accepted by the bank's entry in the depositor's passbook immediately upon the tender of the deposit.

"I am of opinion the warrant is the evidence that the money has been received into the Treasury. * * *

It would seem to follow, therefore, that until there is a warrant signed by the Secretary of the Treasury (and under section 11 of the act of July 31, 1894, 28 Stat. 209, as amended by section 304 of the Budget and Accounting Act, 1921, 42 Stat. 24 (U. S. C., title 31, sec. 76), countersigned in the General Accounting Office) money has not been covered into the Treasury so that the constitutional prohibition against withdrawal becomes applicable.

Whether the enactment of H. R. 3325 will be sufficient to extend the powers relating to the devaluation of the dollar and the stabilization fund although these powers expired at midnight on June 30 is solely a question of the intent of Congress. This intent is to be ascertained from the language of H. R. 3325 as enacted and from the legislative history of the bill preceding its enactment.

The courts have reiterated time and time again that "the one fundamental and unalterable rule of statutory construction—a rule which at once defines the office of the judiciary and marks the boundary of their legitimate authority—is that the whole object of all interpretation is to seek out and enforce the actual meaning and intention of the law-making body." Black on Interpretation of Laws (second edition, p. 46, et seq.). As the Supreme Court of the United States said in Atkins v. The Disintegrating Co. (1873, 18 Wall. 272, 301), "The intention of the lawmaker constitutes the law," or as the Supreme Court said in a more recent case, U. S. v. Stone & Downer Co. (1927, 274 U. S. 225, 239), "In this case, as in every other involving the interpretation of a statute, the intention of Congress is an all-important factor." There are literally scores of cases supporting this proposition, most of them early, because the proposition is so firmly established that the courts no longer deem it necessary to cite authorities.

In the present situation since every Member of Congress is fully cognizant of the fact that the powers under consideration expired at midnight on June 30, it is obvious that if H. R. 3325 is enacted at any time after June 30, the clear intent of the majority of Congress was that such powers be continued.

In order for the statute to be removed from the statute books, it would be necessary for Congress expressly to repeal it. Obviously, this has not been done. On the contrary, H. R. 3325, whether passed before or after June 30, 1939, merely removes the limitation as to the period within which the powers under the statute may be exercised by the President and the Secretary of the Treasury and constitutes a new cut-off date.

Furthermore, this is not a case where a statute has been repealed and wiped off the statute books by Congress, but rather a case where powers conferred by a statute may no longer be exercised. That there is a distinction between statutes which have been repealed and statutes such as the one under consideration, is clear.

The moneys in the stabilization fund did not pass into the Treasury as a result of the failure of the Congress to enact H. R. 3325 prior to midnight, June 30, 1939.

The moneys in the fund were appropriated out of miscellaneous receipts in the Treasury, and are now held on deposit with the Treasurer of the United States, subject to the control of the Secretary of the Treasury with the approval of the President, having been taken out of the Treasury pursuant to an appropriation warrant and deposited by the Secretary of the Treasury.

Unexpended balances of appropriations do not pass into the Treasury automatically. Under section 305 of the Revised Statutes of 1873, as amended (U. S. C., title 31, sec. 147), it has been ruled that money is not covered into the Treasury until the Secretary of the Treasury signs a covering warrant (1907, 14 Comp. Dec. 20). No such covering warrant has been signed with regard to the balance in the fund. It follows, of course, that the fund is not now "in the Treasury," and is not, therefore, subject to the prohibition in article I, section 9, clause 7, of the Constitution, against drawing money from the Treasury except in consequence of an appropriation made by law.

The only Federal statute relevant to the present problem is section 5 of the act of June 20, 1874 (18 Stat. 110, as amended; U. S. C., title 31, sec. 713). Under this statute, even though H. R. 3325 were not enacted, the unexpended balance of the fund would not have to be covered into the Treasury until June 30, 1941 (1897, 3 Comp. Dec. 623, 627); (1901, 8 Comp. Dec. 369, 374); (1929, 9 Comp. Gen. 43, 45). During this period of 2 years this fund would remain available for the liquidation of commitments made out of the fund during the period when the President and the Secretary of the Treasury could exercise their powers under the act. Obviously, the Secretary of the Treasury could cover the money into the surplus fund of the Treasury at any time within the 2-year liquidation period, but he would not be obliged to do so until June 30, 1941.

Since the moneys in the fund are not "in the Treasury," they need not be appropriated, and an expression of the intent of Congress that they be made available until June 30, 1941, for the purposes for which originally appropriated is all that is necessary to make such moneys so available. If an appropriation is needed, this bill constitutes such an appropriation. If H. R. 3325 is enacted the fund will be available for the purposes therein specified until June 30, 1941.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have inserted in the RECORD at this point an editorial published in the New York Times of today, entitled "The Monetary Bill," which clearly and definitely expresses my view, particularly with respect to the purchase of silver.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The editorial is as follows:

[From the New York Times, July 5, 1939]

THE MONETARY BILL

There is disagreement in Washington regarding the situation that has been created by the defeat of the administration's monetary bill. The immediate question at issue is whether passage by the Senate of the measure which failed of enactment in the midnight session Friday evening will in itself be sufficient to reestablish the powers which the President desires, or whether—these powers having expired automatically on June 30 under existing legislation—entirely new legislation must now be initiated in both houses in order to recreate an authority which has ceased to exist. The point of law is one for legal minds to decide, and perhaps it will not be decided finally to the satisfaction of all parties until the question is carried to the courts. Meanwhile, so far as the common sense and the morals of the matter are concerned, the layman cannot fail to note that some of the administration's spokesmen have taken a curious position—first, in attempting to bring great pressure to bear to get the pending measure passed by midnight on Friday, on the ground that new legislation would be needed in case it failed to pass by that critical hour, and then, after the bill had failed to pass, in arguing that the precise hour of its passage does not matter anyway.

So far as the larger questions of policy are concerned, three points are at stake in the present controversy: (1) The President's power to devalue the dollar; (2) the maintenance of the $2,000,000,000 exchange stabilization fund; and (3) the provision for the purchase by the Treasury of domestically mined silver at a premium above the market. Of these three points it can be said:

1. Discontinuance of the President's power to devalue the dollar is greatly to be desired, on the ground that this will remove from the present economic situation a major source of continued uncertainty. So long as the President had such power—an arbitrary and personal power never before given to a Chief Executive in the whole history of the United States—there were bound to be intermittent rumors and guesses regarding what use he would make of it, with a consequent invitation to speculation and an accompanying uncertainty regarding the future value of the dollar in any plans involving long-term investment. It will be a step in the direction of greater monetary stability if all efforts to revive this power, now or later in the present session, are defeated.

2. There are sound reasons for desiring reestablishment of the stabilization fund. Moreover, there is every reason to believe that both houses of Congress will readily approve such action, provided the question is presented in an independent measure, wholly separate from the question of power to devalue the dollar. Operation of the stabilization fund is a steady influence in preventing unnecessary fluctuations in foreign exchange standing in sharp contrast to the proposed arbitrary power to devalue.

3. As for purchases of silver: none of the proposals put forward during the present debate goes far enough, or in the right direction, to meet the real needs of the present situation. The whole silver-purchase program has been an egregious and unmitigated failure, the only visible results of which have been an unwarranted sop to the silver interests and the acquisition by the Treasury of some 2,000,000,000 ounces of a metal for which no earthly use is now in prospect. The time is long overdue for repeal of the entire Silver Purchase Act, lock, stock, and barrel.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Mr. President, I ask to have printed in the Record at this point, as part of my remarks, a statement suggesting disposition of the stabilization fund of $2,000,000,000.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The statement is as follows:

A STATEMENT SUGGESTING DISPOSITION OF THE STABILIZATION FUND OF $2,000,000,000 IN GOLD NOW IN THE TREASURY, HAVING BEEN TRANSFERRED THERE BY LIMITATION OF LEGISLATION NOT RENEWED BY THE FAILURE OF THE PASSAGE OF THE CONFERENCE REPORT LAST WEEK

I suggest creating a stabilization fund of $500,000,000 for the purpose of maintaining the purchasing power of the dollar in foreign commodity markets, as measured by reputable wholesale prices indices of this and other countries, at levels reasonably stable and calculated to permit normal trade to be carried on, the fund to be administered by the Secretary of the Treasury; an annual report of the main direction and operation of the fund to be incorporated in the annual report of the Secretary of the Treasury, and the fund to be liquidated so as to terminate on July 31, 1949, the entire proceeds of liquidation to be paid over to the sinking fund of the public debt.

Take the remaining billion and a half now lying dormant in the Treasury, earmark it, and issue cash against it sufficient to retire the "I O U's" in the social-security fund. These should be retired not later than January 30, 1940. The 3-percent notes held by the old-age reserve account of the Treasury (in the amount of $1,094,300,000 on May 31, 1939), the 3-percent notes held by the railroad retirement account of the Treasury (in the amount of $67,200,000 on May 31, 1939), the 2½-percent certificates of indebtedness held by the unemployment trust fund of the Treasury (in the amount of $1,280,000,000 on May 31, 1939), totaling $2,441,500,000 as of May 31, 1939. Any increment in value from either gold or silver realized hereafter shall be applied to this purpose until the retirement shall have been completed. The cash so received by the several accounts shall be set up as an investment fund for the three accounts for the purpose of buying United States Government securities whenever available, regardless of yield. Future gold and silver increments shall be added to the investment fund, and so shall all old-age and unemployment contributions. Rates of increase in the percentage of such contributions heretofore enacted shall be repealed, and the rates now in effect shall remain the permanent contributions.

When the various funds, above mentioned, have been retired, use the fund to purchase bonds for the social-security fund. This will wipe out the present "I O U's" in the social-security fund and replace in that fund United States Government bonds bought in the open market at such times as the Treasury finds it necessary to support the Federal bond market, and, as already stated, the remaining $500,000,000 of the $2,000,000,000 former stabilization fund can be continued for the use of stabilization as heretofore.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Davis	King	Radcliffe
Ashurst	Donahey	La Follette	Reed
Austin	Ellender	Lee	Russell
Bailey	George	Lodge	Schwartz
Bankhead	Gerry	Logan	Schwollenbach

The VICE PRESIDENT. Eighty-four Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present. The question is on agreeing to the conference report. On that question the yeas and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk proceeded to call the roll.

The Chief Clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BRIDGES (when his name was called). On this question I have a pair with the Senator from Utah [Mr. THOMAS] and withhold my vote. If I were at liberty to vote I should vote "nay." I understand that if the Senator from Utah were present he would vote "yea."

Mr. HARRISON (when his name was called). I have a pair with the senior Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNARY]. I transfer the pair to the senior Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. CARAWAY], and will vote. I vote "yea." I am advised that the Senator from Arkansas would vote "yea."

Mr. REED (when his name was called). I have a pair with the Senator from Alabama [Mr. HILL]. I understand that if the Senator from Alabama were present he would vote "yea." If I were at liberty to vote I should vote "nay." I withhold my vote.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. NYE. On this question, my colleague [Mr. FRAZIER], has a pair with the junior Senator from Missouri [Mr. TRUMAN]. I am informed that if my colleague were present and voting he would vote "nay." I understand that if the Senator from Missouri were present he would vote "yea."

Mr. AUSTIN. The Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNARY] is absent because of illness. If present and voting, I am informed that he would vote "nay." He is paired, as announced by the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON].

Mr. MINTON. I announce that the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH] is detained from the Senate because of illness in his family.

The Senator from Florida [Mr. ANDREWS] the Senator from Michigan [Mr. BROWN], the Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. CARAWAY], the Senator from California [Mr. DOWNEY], the Senator from Alabama [Mr. HILL], the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. REYNOLDS], the Senator from Utah [Mr. THOMAS], and the Senator from Missouri [Mr. TRUMAN] are absent on important public business.

The Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER] is detained because of an important engagement made several weeks ago. I am advised that if present and voting, he would vote "yea."

The Senator from Missouri [Mr. TRUMAN] is paired with the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. FRAZIER]. I am advised that if present and voting, the Senator from Missouri would vote "yea," and the Senator from North Dakota would vote "nay."

The Senator from Florida [Mr. ANDREWS] is paired with the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH]. I am advised that if present and voting, the Senator from Florida would vote "yea," and the Senator from South Carolina would vote "nay."

The result was announced—yeas 43, nays 39, as follows:

SALE OF PHOTOGRAPHS, MOSAICS, AND MAPS, DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a letter from the Acting Secretary of Agriculture, transmitting a draft of proposed legislation to amend section 387 of the act entitled "An act to provide for the conservation of national soil resources and to provide an adequate and balanced flow of agricultural commodities in interstate and foreign commerce, and for other purposes," approved February 16, 1938, which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

DRAFTS OF PROPOSED LEGISLATION, DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE—SAFETY EQUIPMENT OF VESSELS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate two letters from the Under Secretary of Commerce, transmitting drafts of proposed legislation to amend section 4471 of the Revised Statutes of the United States as amended (U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 46, sec. 464), and to amend section 4488 of the Revised Statutes of the United States as amended (U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 46, sec. 481), which, with the accompanying papers, were referred to the Committee on Commerce.

CONTRACTS UNDER CIVIL AERONAUTICS AUTHORITY

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a letter from the chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report of contracts entered into under appropriations providing for the establishment of additional aids to air navigation, together with copy of all certificates made by the Administrator in the Civil Aeronautics Authority covering such contracts, which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

REPORT OF CONSUMERS' COUNSEL, NATIONAL BITUMINOUS COAL COMMISSION

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a letter from the Consumers' Counsel, National Bituminous Coal Commission, transmitting, pursuant to law, the annual report of the Office of the Consumers' Counsel of the Commission for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1939, which, with the accompanying report, was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a letter in the nature of a petition from B. F. Combs, of East Berkshire, Vt., praying for the repeal of Public Act No. 776, Seventy-fifth Congress (H. R. 8047) an act to amend the Meat Inspection Act of March 4, 1907, as amended and extended, with respect to its application to farmers, retail butchers, and retail dealers, which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

He also laid before the Senate a resolution adopted by the annual convention of the Delta Council assembled at Leroy Percy State Park, Miss., favoring the promotion and retirement, in appreciation and as a mark of recognition to his work in the control of the floodwaters of the Mississippi, of Brig. Gen. Harley B. Ferguson, president of the Mississippi River Commission, as a major general of the Army with the emoluments of that rank, which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

He also laid before the Senate a letter from the National Association of Western Electric Employees, G. R. Davis, treasurer, Arlington, Va., relative to amendment of the National Labor Relations Act, which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also laid before the Senate a resolution adopted by Local No. 209, Oil Workers International Union, of Seminole, Okla., protesting against the verdict rendered by the United States circuit court of appeals in the so-called Apex case and favoring further amendment and simplification of the Sherman antitrust law, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also laid before the Senate a resolution of the Sheffield (Ala.) Board of Trade, favoring location of the principal office of the T. V. A. in the immediate vicinity of Muscle Shoals, Ala., which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. WALSH presented resolutions of the Common Council of Everett and the Board of Aldermen of Chelsea, both in the State of Massachusetts, protesting against the action of the British Government relative to the Balfour declaration and the Jewish Home under the Palestine mandate, which were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. HOLT presented a resolution of Council No. 37, of Harrisville, W. Va., favoring the enactment of legislation to prohibit the immigration of aliens until the number of unemployed persons in the United States fall below the 5,000,000 mark, which was referred to the Committee on Immigration.

He also presented the petition of the Yeomen Club, of Keyser, W. Va., praying for the establishment of a National Guard Unit in Keyser, W. Va., which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I present for publication in the RECORD and appropriate reference House Concurrent Resolution No. 157 of the Texas Legislature relating to cotton.

The resolution was referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, and, under the rule, ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

House Concurrent Resolution 157

Whereas Texas has gone on record as favoring a wider use of cotton and research efforts to find new uses for cotton, and further has by resolution in the State senate undertaken to find new uses by offering a suitable reward or compensation to those making discoveries which would require the use of raw cotton in manufacturing and processing undertakings; and

Whereas each new found use for cotton tends to increase employment of labor and to reduce any surpluses which may exist; and

Whereas the United States now uses jute instead of cotton for its requirement for twines in the post offices and other departments of the Government; and

Whereas the policy of the Federal Government in importing twines made of jute when it could, by the purchase of cotton twine, help to use a part of the cotton surplus, increase employment here in the United States, and add somewhat to the increase of national wealth: Therefore be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives of the State of Texas (the senate concurring). That the Government of the United States be and is hereby urged to make use of cotton twine instead of jute twine; and be it further

Resolved. That a copy of this resolution be furnished the President, the Vice President, the Postmaster General, and members of the Texas delegation in the Congress of the United States.

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a resolution identical with the foregoing, which was referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

Mr. LOGAN, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (S. 805) for the relief of George S. Geer, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 720) thereon.

Mr. HUGHES, from the Committee on Claims, to which were referred the following bills, reported them each with an amendment and submitted reports thereon:

S. 1881. A bill for the relief of Banks Business College (Rept. No. 721); and

S. 2513. A bill for the relief of certain persons whose property was damaged or destroyed as a result of the crashes of two airplanes of the United States Navy at East Braintree, Mass., on April 4, 1939 (Rept. No. 722).

Mr. BAILEY, from the Committee on Commerce, to which was referred the bill (S. 1960) to amend certain provisions of the Merchant Marine and Shipping Acts, to further the development of the American merchant marine, and for other purposes, reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 724) thereon.

Mr. WALSH, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, to which was referred the bill (S. 2273) to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to accept on behalf of the United States certain land in the city of Seattle, King County, Wash., with improvements thereon, reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 725) thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill (S. 2599) to amend the Naval Reserve Act of 1938 (Public, No. 732, 52 Stat. 1175), reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 726) thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 6065) to authorize major overhauls for certain naval vessels, and for other purposes, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 727) thereon.

LANDS AT PORT OF CASCADE LOCKS, OREG.—NEW REPORT

Mr. SHEPPARD. I request unanimous consent to withdraw Senate Report No. 636 on the bill (S. 255) authorizing the Secretary of War to convey to the port of Cascade Locks, Oreg., certain lands for municipal purposes, in order that a new report may be submitted by the Committee on Military Affairs.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HOLMAN subsequently, from the Committee on Military Affairs, submitted a report (No. 723) to accompany Senate bill 255, heretofore reported from that committee with an amendment.

RECOMMITTAL OF A BILL

Mr. SHEPPARD. I move to recommit Calendar No. 602, being the bill (S. 506) to provide for a more efficient and economical mileage table of distances and routes to apply for the payments of travel performed for the United States Government by the military personnel, Coast Guard, Coast and Geodetic Survey, and the Public Health Service, to the Committee on Military Affairs for further consideration by the committee.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ENROLLED BILL PRESENTED

Mr. REED (for Mrs. CARAWAY), from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that on June 30, 1939, that committee presented to the President of the United States the enrolled bill (S. 2618) to extend the period during which direct obligations of the United States may be used as collateral security for Federal Reserve notes.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION INTRODUCED

Bills and a joint resolution were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. JOHNSON of California:

S. 2743 (by request). A bill amending section 6 of the act entitled "An act granting to the city and county of San Francisco certain rights-of-way in, over, and through certain public lands, the Yosemite National Park and Stanislaus National Forest, and certain lands in the Yosemite National Park, the Stanislaus National Forest, and the public lands in the State of California, and for other purposes," approved December 19, 1913 (38 Stat. 242); to the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys.

By Mr. KING:

S. 2744. A bill to amend an act of Congress entitled "An act to regulate the employment of minors within the District of Columbia," approved May 29, 1928; and

S. 2745. A bill to authorize the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to make regulations to prevent and control the spread of communicable and preventable diseases; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. BURKE:

S. 2746. A bill for the relief of Thomas J. Pryor; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. BAILEY:

S. 2747. A bill relating to the retirement of employees to whom the provisions of section 6 of the act approved June 20, 1918 (40 Stat. 608; U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 33, sec. 763), as amended, apply; to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. SHEPPARD:

S. 2748. A bill to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge over Lake Sabine at or near Port Arthur, Tex., to amend the act of June 18, 1934 (48 Stat. 1008), and for other purposes; to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. McCARRAN:

S. J. Res. 166. Joint resolution making an appropriation for the establishment and improvement of landing areas; to the Committee on Appropriations.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE

AMENDMENT OF RAILROAD RETIREMENT ACT—AMENDMENT

Mr. SHEPPARD submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (S. 1784) to amend the Railroad Retirement Act of 1937, which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce and ordered to be printed.

BLOCK BOOKING AND BLIND SELLING OF MOTION-PICTURE FILMS—AMENDMENTS

Mr. NEELY submitted three amendments intended to be proposed by him to the bill (S. 280) to prohibit and to prevent the trade practices known as compulsory block booking and blind selling in the leasing of motion-picture films in interstate and foreign commerce, which were ordered to lie on the table and to be printed.

AMENDMENT OF SOCIAL SECURITY ACT—AMENDMENTS

Mr. CONNALLY submitted an amendment and Mr. SCHWELLENBACH submitted amendments intended to be proposed by them, respectively, to the bill (H. R. 6635) to amend the Social Security Act, and for other purposes, which were referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, I submit amendments intended to be proposed by me to the bill (H. R. 6635) to amend the Social Security Act, and for other purposes. I also present a letter from Matthew Woll, vice president of the American Federation of Labor, relative to that act. I ask that the amendments and letter may be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Finance.

There being no objection, the amendments and letter were referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Amendments intended to be proposed by Mr. WAGNER to the bill (H. R. 6635) to amend the Social Security Act, and for other purposes, viz: On page 70, strike out lines 7 to 10, inclusive.

Beginning on page 72, line 10, strike out down to page 74, line 24, inclusive.

On page 80, strike out lines 1 to 16, inclusive, and renumber the subsections accordingly.

On page 94, after line 13, insert a new section, as follows:

"Sec. 616. (a) There is hereby authorized to be established by the Senate Committee on Finance and the House Committee on Ways and Means, in cooperation with the Social Security Board, an Advisory Council on Unemployment Insurance, representing employers, employees, and the general public, to study and report to the respective committees on the following matters concerning unemployment insurance:

- "1. Scope and coverage.
- "2. Amount, character, duration, and qualification for benefits.
- "3. Advisability and nature of individual employer and State unemployment experience ratings for tax purposes.
- "4. Size, character, adequacy, and disposition of reserves.
- "5. Source, character, and method of financing.
- "6. Coordination of unemployment insurance with relief, work relief, and other programs for alleviating economic distress among the unemployed.
- "7. Pertinent experience in the operation and administration of existing unemployment insurance laws.
- "8. Any other matters which either of the above-mentioned committees or the Social Security Board may deem relevant to the inquiry.

"(b) The Social Security Board shall furnish all necessary technical assistance in connection with the foregoing."

AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR,
Washington, D. C., June 22, 1939.

HON. ROBERT F. WAGNER,

Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR: The American Federation of Labor committee on social security feels that developments in unemployment compensation legislation have created a very serious situation. As you know, failure to write Federal standards into the Social Security Act has resulted in widely varying conditions being written into the laws of 51 jurisdictions concerned by the Social Security Act. The laws themselves are highly complicated and the administrative procedure and machinery even more complicated.

The legislatures of the various States are beset by propaganda from organizations determined to reduce the tax rate by any method, quite irrespective of whether the purposes of the act have been realized. It seems to our committee, therefore, that there should be created a public commission to review the legislative and administrative situations and to make recommendations that will enable us to accomplish the purposes of unemployment compensation more effectively.

Such a commission should consist of representatives of employers, workers, the general public, and technicians who are competent to evaluate developments. Such a commission should be able to employ its own experts for research purposes although it should also have access to the information and research services of the Social Security Board. A similar commission in the field of old-age insurance performed valuable services. At the present time we very much need study and evaluation that insures the necessary changes both in fundamentals of the law and administrative procedures.

It would be most fitting for you, whose name is associated with the Social Security Act as sponsor, to introduce a Senate resolution. Such a resolution is in accord with the conclusions of our committee.

Very respectfully yours,

MATTHEW WOLL,
Vice President, American Federation of Labor;
Chairman, Social Security Committee.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives by Mr. Chaffee, one of its reading clerks, communicated to the Senate the intelligence of the death of Hon. Harry Wilbur Griswold, late a Representative from the State of Wisconsin, and transmitted the resolution of the House thereon.

The message informed the Senate that, pursuant to the provisions of the foregoing resolutions, the Speaker pro tempore appointed Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin, Mr. MURRAY, Mr. JOHNS, and Mr. HULL members of a committee, to join with such members of the Senate as may be appointed, to attend the funeral of the deceased Representative.

ENROLLED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION SIGNED

The message also announced that the Speaker pro tempore had affixed his signature to the following enrolled bills and joint resolution, and they were signed by the Vice President:

H. R. 2310. An act to provide national flags for the burial of honorably discharged former service men and women;

H. R. 4674. An act to provide for the establishment of a Coast Guard station at or near the city of Monterey, Calif.;

H. R. 5722. An act for the relief of Evelyn Gurley-Kane; and

H. J. Res. 133. Joint resolution authorizing the President of the United States of America to proclaim October 11, 1939, General Pulaski's Memorial Day for the observance and commemoration of the death of Brig. Gen. Casimir Pulaski.

[Mr. LEE asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an editorial on the President's monetary bill, published in the Washington Daily News of Wednesday, July 5, 1939, which appears in the Appendix.]

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA TAXATION—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. OVERTON] desires a ye-and-nay vote on a report which he will make concerning the District of Columbia tax bill. I hope, therefore, Senators will remain in their seats until the roll call can be obtained.

Mr. OVERTON submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6577) to provide revenue for the District of Columbia, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have been unable to agree.

JOHN H. OVERTON,
WILLIAM H. KING,
M. E. TYDINGS,
PAT MCCARRAN,
ARTHUR CAPPER,

JENNINGS RANDOLPH,
JACK NICHOLS,
AMBROSE KENNEDY,
EVERETT M. DIRKSEN,
GEORGE J. BATES,

Managers on the part of the House.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the conference report is agreed to.

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President, the other day at some length I undertook to explain the disagreement between the House and the Senate with reference to the District of Columbia revenue measure. At this late hour I shall not undertake to go over the arguments which I made the other day, or to make additional arguments in favor of the bill as passed by the Senate. I desire to say, however, that the main disagreement between the House and the Senate is in reference to the Federal payment for the upkeep of the National Capital.

The House fixed the amount to be appropriated for that purpose at $5,000,000. The Senate adopted a formula which would call for an appropriation of approximately $8,000,000. In view of the disagreement between the two Houses, the Senate conferees have stated that they are willing to meet the House halfway. They take the position that they have great respect for the views of the House, but they also take the position that the House should have proper consideration for the views of the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator desire to have the resolution from the House laid before the Senate, so that he may make a motion regarding the matter?

Mr. OVERTON. I do.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate a resolution as to the action of the House of Representatives which will be read.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

June 30, 1939.

Resolved, That the House insist upon its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6577) to provide revenue for the District of Columbia, and for other purposes; and ask a further conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Ordered, That Mr. NICHOLS, Mr. RANDOLPH, Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland, Mr. DIRKSEN, and Mr. BATES of Massachusetts be the managers of the conference on the part of the House.

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President, I hope that on further conference the disagreement will be ended, and that a satisfactory tax bill will be agreed upon between the House and the Senate.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. OVERTON. I yield to the Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. BYRNES. Has the Senator discussed with the House the introduction of a continuing resolution in order to enable the District government to function while the conferees are attempting to settle the differences between the Houses?

Mr. OVERTON. I have done so. I took up that matter with the conferees on the District of Columbia appropriation bill. As the Senator from South Carolina knows, it is customary for continuing resolutions to be introduced in the House, because they deal with appropriations, and the House always initiates appropriation bills. The conferees on the part of the House have stated that they do not propose to introduce a continuing resolution.

Mr. BYRNES. Then, Mr. President, the Senate ought to understand the exact situation.

The Senator from Louisiana states that he has offered to split the difference between the two Houses, and that the House conferees refused to budge. The Senator from Louisiana then suggested that the House initiate a continuing resolution in order that the District government might function while the differences between the two Houses were being adjusted, and the House declined to do so.

Has the Senator from Louisiana considered what will be the effect if the conferees do not agree certainly by the 15th of this month?

Mr. OVERTON. Yes; I have considered that matter. I presume there will be an agreement. I assume that the House will not take the position that it is absolutely right, and that the Senate will have to "sign on the dotted line." I assume that the conferees of the House will go as far as we have gone, and will be willing to meet us halfway on this question.

Mr. BYRNES. If the Senator's statement is correct—and I know it to be—that he has offered to split the difference, and has expressed a willingness to negotiate with the House conferees, and they have refused to consider any proposal at all, then I want to say that, notwithstanding the custom, I think the Senate ought to pass a continuing resolution, because, as has been often said by the Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS], there is nothing to prevent the Senate from doing so. We have refrained from doing so as long as the House was willing to act; but if the House does not act we should pass a continuing resolution, and send it over to the House, and let the responsibility rest with the House for refusing to negotiate with the Senate conferees, and refusing to pass a continuing resolution.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, the question involved is whether the Senate of the United States is a part of the legislative branch of the Government.

Mr. MCCARRAN. Mr. President, will the Senator from Louisiana yield?

Mr. OVERTON. I shall be very glad to yield to the Senator from Nevada.

Mr. MCCARRAN. As a member of the conference committee of which the able Senator from Louisiana is chairman, I wish to say to the Senate that so far as I can discern there never was worked out a system more in keeping with propriety and law and equity than that which has been worked out by the able Senator from Louisiana. It undoubtedly has required weeks and months of study, to which he has given his entire devotion. I am amazed that one from a State aside and far remote from the District of Columbia should give so much time and study and ability to the District of Columbia.

I desire to say that, so far as I am concerned, from a careful study of the Senator's program, I am going along with it so long as I am a member of the conference committee from the Senate, not merely because I want to go with the Senator from Louisiana, but because his plan and scheme and program, as worked out after weeks and months of study, constitutes, in my judgment, the plan and scheme and program for the District of Columbia. In other words, it places the obligation of the Federal Government with regard to the upkeep of the District of Columbia, on a sound basis, namely, the reality; something that one may figure on; something that one may count as against other realities in the District of Columbia.

While I have the floor for a moment by the courtesy of the Senator from Louisiana, I wish to compliment the Senator from Louisiana, because I do not believe that in the last half century there has been given as much study to the District of Columbia and its needs, from the standpoint of the relative contributions between the Federal Government and the District of Columbia, as has been given during the past 6 or 8 months by the able Senator from Louisiana, and I shall support him as far as he can go in the principle, because the principle is entirely right.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Mr. President, what is the question before us?

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President, I intend to make a motion that the Senate insist upon its amendment and agree to a further conference with the House.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Louisiana what has become of that part of the bill adopted by the Senate which sets up a formula based on the ownership of land by the Federal Government in the District of Columbia. What has become of it?

Mr. OVERTON. It is incorporated in the Senate bill, and it is now in conference. In order that we might come to an agreement for the time being, I was willing to cast aside that formula, upon which the Senator and I worked for a long time, he being a member of the subcommittee which conducted the hearings in reference to it, and to meet the House half way, in order that this impasse might be broken.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, if I may interrupt, the Senator from Louisiana says he has been willing to cast aside the formula; but let us bear in mind that, while he has been willing to compromise, he has carried the principle of the formula down into the compromise, which to my mind should go a long way.

Mr. AUSTIN. Is there any part of the bill adopted by the Senate accepted in the conference report?

Mr. OVERTON. There has been a total disagreement on the amendment adopted by the Senate. The Senate struck out everything after the enacting clause of the House revenue bill and adopted a new bill in the form of an amendment.

Mr. AUSTIN. Does the conference report accept the bill as sent over to us by the House?

Mr. OVERTON. It does not. The conference report shows a disagreement on the entire tax bill as between the House and the Senate, as to the income tax, as to the business-privilege tax, and as to other taxes. After fixing the Federal payment, the Senate passed a bill carrying the existing taxes, including the business-privilege tax. The House adopted an income-tax provision.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield further, should the Senate agree to the report and cause thereby a tender of a new conference, would the formula proposed by the Senate be under further consideration in the conference?

Mr. OVERTON. It would be. I now move that the Senate further insist on its amendment, agree to the further conference requested by the House, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate at the further conference. On that I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HARRISON (when his name was called). On this vote I am paired with the senior Senator from Oregon [Mr.

McNARY]. I understand that if present he would vote as I intend to vote, so I am at liberty to vote. I vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. BRIDGES. On this vote I have a pair with the Senator from Utah [Mr. THOMAS]. I am informed that if he were present he would vote as I intend to vote, and, therefore, I am at liberty to vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. MINTON. I announce that the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH] is detained from the Senate because of illness in his family.

The Senator from Florida [Mr. ANDREWS], the Senator from Michigan [Mr. BROWN], the Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. CARAWAY], the Senator from California [Mr. DOWNEY], the Senator from Alabama [Mr. HILL], the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. REYNOLDS], the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMATHERS], the Senator from Utah [Mr. THOMAS], the Senator from Missouri [Mr. TRUMAN], the Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER], the Senator from Georgia [Mr. RUSSELL], the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. SCHWARTZ], the Senator from Indiana [Mr. VAN NUYS], the Senator from Iowa [Mr. HERRING], the Senator from Ohio [Mr. DONAHEY], the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY], and the Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY] are absent on important public business.

The result was announced—yeas 71—nays 1, as follows:

PROMOTION OF FARM OWNERSHIP BY TENANTS

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 1836, a bill offered by the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. LEE] and sponsored by about 50 Members of the Senate, to promote farm ownership by amending the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act, and so forth, so it may be made the unfinished business.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Alabama that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 1836.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I wish to say that it was my purpose tomorrow when we meet at 12 to finish the call of the calendar which was in order Friday. The Senator from Alabama would have no objection to his bill being taken up for consideration following the completion of the call of the calendar?

Mr. BANKHEAD. None whatever. The bill is sponsored by a majority of the Senate. I have no objection to the course suggested by the Senator from Kentucky.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD].

Mr. NEELY. Reserving the right to object, I invite the attention of the Senate to the fact that a special order was agreed upon for tomorrow, namely, that I should be permitted to move to proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 280, which has been before the Senate now since early in January, and which proposes to prohibit and prevent the trade practices known as "compulsory block booking" and "blind selling" in the leasing of motion-picture films.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I am not trying to interfere with a special order. We can make the bill I spoke of the regular business, which would not revoke any order heretofore made.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, it is hardly correct to say there was a special order in the sense that the Senate made an order to take up the bill referred to by the Senator from West Virginia. He gave notice—I suppose one might call it that—that he would make an effort on tomorrow to bring up the bill to which he has referred, and I had anticipated that following the call of the calendar he would make that motion. I do not care which one of the bills comes first. Both of them I think will be given consideration. I do not know how long the consideration of either bill will take.

Mr. BANKHEAD. If there is a special order, of course, I do not wish to interfere with it. The bill I referred to is not controversial. It has been sponsored by a majority of the Members of the Senate. It can be gotten out of the way in an hour, I believe. I do not think it will interfere with the bill of the Senator from West Virginia at all.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Let the Chair state the parliamentary situation. The Senator from Alabama has moved that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 1836. The question is on that motion.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1836) to promote farm ownership by amending the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act to provide for Government-insured loans to farmers; to encourage sale of farms held by absentee owners to farm tenants; and to enable tenant farmers to become owners of farm homes through long-term low-interest-rate loans on farms, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry with an amendment.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, the Senator from Alabama does not desire to discuss the bill this afternoon, does he?

Mr. BANKHEAD. No, Mr. President. I think it is too late to do so.

RESTRICTION OF EXPORTATION OF FIR AND CEDAR LOGS

Mr. BILBO. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that immediately following the disposition of the bill which the Senator from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD] has moved to be made the unfinished business, and also the bill which the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. NEELY] wishes to have considered, the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 1108, being Calendar No. 609.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I think it is not wise to attempt to tie up the Senate with three bills in succession. The Finance Committee is now considering the bill proposing amendments to the Social Security Act and hopes to make a report thereon this week. I do not desire to have the Senate enter into any agreement with respect to proposed legislation which would forego the right to take up that bill whenever it is available for action. We are going to finish the call of the calendar tomorrow, and it may be that the bill in which the Senator from Mississippi is interested may be acted on during the call of the calendar. I doubt the wisdom so far in advance of taking up a bill after consideration of two bills already has been requested. I shall be glad to cooperate with the Senator to have his bill considered.

Mr. BILBO. With the understanding that the measure before the Finance Committee shall be considered when it comes to the Senate, will the Senator agree to let the bill in which I am interested be taken up immediately thereafter?

Mr. BARKLEY. I will say to my friend the Senator from Mississippi that I do not believe it is good legislative practice to take action on matters of that sort in the third degree. I shall be glad to cooperate with him in getting consideration of the measure in which he is interested.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. BARKLEY. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting sundry nominations, which were referred to the appropriate committees.

(For nominations this day received see the end of Senate proceedings.)

EXECUTIVE REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

The PRESIDENT pro tempore (Mr. PITTMAN), as chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations, from that committee reported favorably the nominations of sundry persons for appointment in the Foreign Service.

Mr. McKELLAR, from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, reported favorably the nominations of sundry postmasters.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The reports will be placed on the Executive Calendar.

If there be no further reports of committees, the clerk will state the nominations on the calendar.

COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Leo E. Trombly to be collector of customs for customs collection district No. 7, with headquarters at Ogdensburg, N. Y.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Arthur S. Flemming to be Civil Service Commissioner.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

POSTMASTERS

The legislative clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations of postmasters.

Mr. McKELLAR. I ask that the nominations of postmasters be confirmed en bloc.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

IN THE MARINE CORPS

The legislative clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations in the Marine Corps.

Mr. BARKLEY. I ask that the nominations in the Marine Corps be confirmed en bloc.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

That concludes the calendar.

LEGISLATIVE SESSION

Mr. BARKLEY. I move that the Senate resume the consideration of legislative business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate resumed the consideration of legislative business.

DEATH OF REPRESENTATIVE GRISWOLD, OF WISCONSIN

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a resolution (H. Res. 243) from the House of Representatives, which was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the House has heard with profound sorrow of the death of Hon. HARRY WILBUR GRISWOLD, a Representative from the State of Wisconsin.

Resolved, That a committee of four Members of the House with such Members of the Senate as may be joined be appointed to attend the funeral.

Resolved, That the Sergeant at Arms of the House be authorized and directed to take such steps as may be necessary for carrying out the provision of these resolutions and that the necessary expenses in connection therewith be paid out of the contingent fund of the House.

Resolved, That the Clerk communicate these resolutions to the Senate and transmit a copy thereof to the family of the deceased.

Resolved, That as a further mark of respect the House do now adjourn.

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, on behalf of the senior Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE] and myself, I send to the desk a resolution which I ask to have read, and for which I ask present consideration.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution will be read.

The resolution (S. Res. 155) was read, considered by unanimous consent, and unanimously agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the Senate has heard with profound sorrow the announcement of the death of Hon. HARRY WILBUR GRISWOLD, late a Representative from the State of Wisconsin.

Resolved, That a committee of two Senators be appointed by the Presiding Officer to join the committee appointed on the part of the House of Representatives to attend the funeral of the deceased Representative.

Resolved, That the secretary communicate these resolutions to the House of Representatives and transmit a copy thereof to the family of the deceased.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. As the committee provided for in the resolution, the Chair appoints the senior Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE] and the junior Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. WILEY].

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, as a further mark of respect to the memory of the deceased Representative, I move that the Senate do now adjourn.

The motion was unanimously agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock and 30 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until tomorrow, Thursday, July 6, 1939, at 12 o'clock meridian.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

WEDNESDAY, JULY 5, 1939

The House met at 12 o'clock noon, and was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore [Mr. RAYBURN].

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Our Heavenly Father, Thou art ever very near us in tender love and mercy. May never a day nor night pass unhallowed but that we shall still be grateful for what the Lord hath done; for all the manifestations of Thy holy presence we thank Thee. Now, out of the infinite ease of Thy power and graciousness, may we strongly forget self. Remind us that we must live a mutual life in a mutual world, and where much is given much is expected. Grant us, O Lord, the wisdom to fashion as we feel, the courage to labor as we know, and the purpose to do Thy will. O Love supreme, we pause beside the river; an honored Member has passed through this strange house of life, and speechless sorrow has come to the cherished home of peace and happiness. We pray Thee to lighten the weary load that the family must bear and make the weight Thine own. In the dear Redeemer's name. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of Saturday, July 1, 1939, was read and approved.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. MACIEJEWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to insert in the RECORD a speech made by me at the dedication of the Cicero Ogden Grade Separation, in the town of Cicero, Ill., on June 30, 1939.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

IMMINENCY OF WAR IN EUROPE

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, I submit herewith an adverse report on House Resolution 232.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 232

Resolved, That the President of the United States is hereby requested to transmit forthwith to the House of Representatives, if not incompatible with the public interest, such information as may be in his possession or in the files of the State Department which indicates that actual war is imminent between certain countries on the continent of Europe.

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Speaker, I have just been informed that the gentlewoman from Massachusetts [Mrs. ROGERS] has been called out of the city, but this is the last day for calling up the matter, and it will have to be acted upon. I was informed by the gentlewoman from Massachusetts [Mrs. ROGERS] that she would be here today.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, may I say that the gentlewoman from Massachusetts has been called home on account of the serious illness of her uncle, and she wished me, if possible, to have this matter continued to some day when she could be present.

Mr. BLOOM. I will be perfectly willing to have the matter called up later, provided we do not lose any of our rights, because this is the final day for calling up the resolution.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I am perfectly willing, by unanimous consent, for the gentleman to preserve any rights he may have in the matter.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the resolution will be referred to the House Calendar, and the gentleman from New York may reserve his right to call the matter up later.

There was no objection.

GOVERNMENT EXPENDITURES

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to speak for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, we closed the fiscal year on June 30 with a deficit of over $3,600,000,000. We spent last year over $9,250,000,000, the greatest spending spree this Nation has ever seen during peacetime. It was greater by one-half million dollars than the year we paid the soldiers' bonus.

I believe the Members of Congress who are responsible for this great spending spree should have gold medals made out of the gold that is now stored in Kentucky, because of the fact they have made for themselves a medal that will always be a millstone around the neck of the people of this Nation of ours.

Where are you going to get the money for this enormous expenditure that you have authorized? It is terrible. The high spending of this administration is a record of Government inefficiency and Government waste and Government extravagancy. It shows the inefficiency of the New Deal. I quote the President of the United States, F. D. Roosevelt, in his inaugural address, March 4, 1933:

Through this program of action we address ourselves to putting our own national house in order and making the income balance the outgo.

The President certainly has been spending at a high hand; he has not even tried to make the outgo equal the income. Why does he not do as he said he would do? Why does he not hold the new dealers down in their spending? Why does he not hold down his own requests for Government spending? How does the President console his conscience after making this statement on July 2, 1932, in his acceptance speech? I quote from F. D. Roosevelt:

I propose to you, my friends, that Government * * * be made solvent and that the example be set by the President of the United States.

We are doing anything but making our Government solvent. We are wrecking our country by this wild orgy of spending; nothing in history can be compared to it in its poor management, in its inefficiency, and in its wastefulness.

O Mr. Speaker, the strife, the jealousy, the animosity, and ill will that has been created by this administration only transcends in importance the wild orgy of spending. What will happen to our country if we keep on as we have been the past 6 years? It is terrible to contemplate.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. BOLLES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a short editorial from the Milwaukee Sentinel.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin?

There was no objection.

Mr. THORKE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and, Mr. Speaker, my remarks are on money.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Montana?

There was no objection.

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD on mining legislation.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arizona?

There was no objection.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a short editorial from the Baldwin Home Journal.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein several editorials on neutrality.

Mr. FISH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I did not hear the request.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent to extend his own remarks in the RECORD and to include several editorials.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, when the gentleman says "several editorials" how do the Members know how far he is going in putting editorials in the RECORD? It seems to me there should be some hold-up if possible on the number of editorials being placed in the RECORD. Is this a record of Congress or is it a record for the newspapers of this country?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Pennsylvania, I am sure, understands that the present occupant of the chair is behind him 100 percent, but has not been able to control the matter.

Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. SCHIFFLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a letter written by our colleague, the gentleman from New York [Mr. FISH], to Hon. Carl G. Bachman.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

THE PRIVATE CALENDAR

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under unanimous consent the Private Calendar is the first order of business.

The Clerk will call the first bill on the Private Calendar.

MIKE CHETKOVICH

The Clerk called the bill (S. 1093) for the relief of Mike Chetkovich.

Mr. COSTELLO and Mr. HANCOCK objected, and the bill was recommitted to the Committee on War Claims.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for a moment to explain this bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That is not in order in the call of the Private Calendar.

MARTHA AUSTIN

The Clerk called the bill (S. 1778) authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to issue to Martha Austin a patent to certain land.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior is authorized and directed to issue to Martha Austin a patent in fee to the north half southwest quarter section 1, and north half southeast quarter section 2, township 34 north, range 31 east Montana principal meridian: Provided, That the patent shall contain a reservation to the United States of all the oil and gas in the lands so patented, together with the right to prospect for, mine, and remove the same, in accordance with the provisions, reservations, conditions, and limitations of the act of July 17, 1914 (38 Stat. 509).

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

ANNA ELIZABETH WATROUS

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 542) for the relief of Anna Elizabeth Watrous.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Anna Elizabeth Watrous, the sum of $1,500. Such sum shall be in full settlement of all claims for damages against the United States on account of injuries sustained by the said Anna Elizabeth Watrous when she was struck by a large rock blasted from a quarrying job under the control of the Works Progress Administration in Honolulu, T. H., on October 5, 1936.

With the following committee amendments:

Page 1, line 6, after the word "Watrous" insert "of Baltimore, Md.," and in the same line, strike out "$1,500" and insert "$500."

Page 2, at the end of the bill, strike out the period, insert a colon, and the following: "Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000."

The committee amendments were agreed to and the bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

MAJ. HERBERT A. JACOB

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 1456) for the relief of Maj. Herbert A. Jacob.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Maj. Herbert A. Jacob, of Staunton, Va., the sum of $10,000 in full settlement of all claims against the United States for damages sustained by his wife, Mary S. Jacob, who was struck and killed in Staunton, Va., on August 28, 1937, by a truck owned and operated by the United States Post Office Department then and there being carelessly and recklessly driven by one Warren W. Talley, who was at that time and still is an employee in the post office in the said city of Staunton, Va.: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

With the following committee amendment:

Page 1, line 6, strike out "$10,000" and insert "$3,000."

The committee amendment was agreed to and the bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that there is no quorum present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from California makes the point of order that there is no quorum present. The Chair will count.

Mr. CARTER (interrupting the count). Mr. Speaker, the reason I make the point of order that there is no quorum present is that some of the Members on this side of the aisle who have made a special study of these Private Calendar bills are not present at this time. They anticipated that a certain period soon after the House convened would be taken up by the Committee on Foreign Affairs. Such being the case, they are not present at the moment. I understand that they are on their way over and will soon be present in the Chamber. I have no desire to unduly delay the proceedings, but I think those Members on this side of the aisle should be present when the Private Calendar is called.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair suggests to the gentleman from California that there is a privileged report from the Committee on Rules which is to be filed.

Mr. CARTER. If that might be taken up, I shall be glad to withdraw my point of order that there is no quorum present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from California withdraws the point of order of no quorum.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. RICH. I understand that the Foreign Affairs Committee is going to have the floor after we get through with the call of the Private Calendar. Is it possible for us to learn from that committee what bills they are going to bring up when they get possession of the floor today?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair suggests that the gentleman from New York [Mr. BLOOM] answer that question.

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Speaker, the first bill to be called up will be the Niagara Bridge bill which the President vetoed, and which is now reintroduced and is reported out of the Committee on Foreign Affairs in the way that the President requested. Then there will be two or three bills from the State Department, which I do not think will be controversial. One is a perfecting measure regarding the service career men of the State Department.

Then another bill will be to appropriate $100 for employees in the foreign legations and embassies throughout the country. Also the Soviet claim bill; also the New York World's Fair bill, and one or two others.

I will say for the benefit of the Members here that neither one of the Mexican claim bills will be brought up today. We will also call up the Chilean matter appropriating $500,000 for relief for the earthquake refugees in Chile.

Mr. THOMASON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLOOM. I yield.

Mr. THOMASON. Will the gentleman tell us why the Mexican claims bills are not coming up? It has passed the Senate. It has been considered before. There are certainly some very deserving claims, and if they are ever going to be paid, they should have consideration.

Mr. BLOOM. I agree with the gentleman, but it is absolutely necessary to call up the bills I have mentioned, and that is all the time we will have. I do not think it will be possible to take up the others.

Mr. THOMASON. The gentleman says some of these bills are not controversial, so that if you do not consume the entire time, will you be willing to call up the Mexican claims bills?

Mr. BLOOM. I do not think we will be able to reach them today.

Mr. RICH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLOOM. I yield.

Mr. RICH. How much money are you going to ask for the New York World's Fair?

Mr. BLOOM. Seven-hundred-odd thousand dollars. That is for the world's fair itself. Then there is $50,000 for the Army and $50,000 for the Navy.

Mr. RICH. Does the gentleman think he ought to bring a bill like that in here since the world's fair is having a great amount of people going through the turnstiles, and they will eventually be able to pay their own way? Why bring that bill up now? Why not wait until after the fair is over and see where we are going? If we advertise that fair and tell the people it is a good fair, you will get the $700,000 and you will not have to go back to the taxpayers of the country and ask them to pay the bill.

Mr. BLOOM. I will answer the gentleman's question in this way: Where are they going to get the money?

Mr. RICH. That is just what we want to know. Where are the taxpayers going to get it? The fair will get it if we tell the people that it is a good fair, which it is, and let them go down there and see it, and they will pay the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman has expired.

AMENDMENT OF FLOOD CONTROL ACTS

Mr. COLMER, from the Committee on Rules, submitted the following privileged resolution (H. Res. 241, Rept. No. 1026), which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered printed.

House Resolution 241

Resolved, That immediately upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of H. R. 6634, a bill amending previous flood-control acts, and authorizing certain preliminary examinations and surveys for flood control, and for other purposes. That after general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and shall continue not to exceed 1 hour, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Flood Control, the bill shall be read for amendments under the 5-minute rule. At the conclusion of the reading of the bill for amendment the Committee shall rise and report the same to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted, and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion, except one motion to recommit.

PRIVATE CALENDAR

The SPEAKER pro tempore. I think it is now agreeable to the gentleman from Massachusetts and the gentleman from California [Mr. CARTER] to go on with the Private Calendar.

The Clerk will call the next bill on the Private Calendar.

MARGARET B. NONNENBERG

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 3081, for the relief of Margaret B. Nonnenberg.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Margaret B. Nonnenberg, of Wilkinsburg, Pa., the sum of $2,500, in full settlement of all claims against the United States for personal and bodily injuries sustained by her on November 16, 1936, at Pittsburgh, Pa., when the automobile in which she was a passenger was struck by a Government Plymouth sedan, operated by a Government employee in connection with the Civilian Conservation Corps, while the said operator was in the performance of his duty: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

With the following committee amendment:

On page 2, strike out, beginning in line 3, the remainder of the bill and insert: "That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

ARTHUR WELTNER

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 3337, for the relief of the estate of Arthur Weltner.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to the estate of Arthur Weltner the sum of $5,000. Such sum shall be in full satisfaction of all claims against the United States for personal injuries suffered by him in performance of his duties in the Civilian Conservation Corps in April 1937: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

With the following committee amendment:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert: "That notwithstanding the provisions and limitations of sections 15 to 20, both inclusive, of the act entitled 'An act to provide compensation for employees of the United States suffering injuries while in the performance of their duties, and for other purposes,' approved September 7, 1916, as amended, the United States Employees' Compensation Commission be, and the same is hereby, authorized and directed to receive and consider, when filed, the claim of the estate of Arthur Weltner, formerly of Arverne, Long Island, N. Y., for damages as a result of the death of Arthur Weltner, alleged to have been caused by injuries suffered by him in performance of his duties in the Civilian Conservation Corps during the period October 26, 1936, to December 15, 1936: Provided, That claim hereunder shall be filed within 6 months after the approval of this act: Provided further, That no benefits shall accrue prior to the enactment of this act."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

LOYD J. PALMER

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 3483, for the relief of Loyd J. Palmer.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

Mr. PITTINGER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to substitute the bill S. 1452, which passed the Senate and is now on the Speaker's desk and which is identical with H. R. 3483.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Comptroller General of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to settle and allow the claim of Loyd J. Palmer for compensation for services rendered as United States commissioner in the district of Minnesota from December 1, 1935, to June 6, 1937, inclusive, notwithstanding the fact that accounts therefor were not submitted by the commissioner within 1 year after the rendition of such services in accordance with the provisions of the act of March 1, 1933 (47 Stat. 1383).

FRANK M. CROMAN

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 3614, for the relief of Frank M. Croman.

There being no objection, the Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Frank M. Croman, the sum of $2,500, in full settlement of all claims against the United States for personal injuries and property damages sustained as result of collision between the claimant's automobile and a United States Army truck, which collision occurred on the 19th day of April, 1938, at about 3:30 p. m., on Dual Highway No. 42, at Poplar, Md.:

With the following committee amendments:

Page 1, line 5, after the word "Croman", insert "of Newark, New Jersey";

Page 1, line 6, strike out "$2,500" and insert "$718.85";

Page 2, line 1, strike out "42" and insert "40";

Page 2, line 1, after the word "Maryland", insert: "Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000."

The committee amendments were agreed to.

MARIE B. NEALE

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 5087, for the relief of Marie B. Neale.

Mr. COSTELLO and Mr. HANCOCK objected, and, under the rule, the bill was recommitted to the Committee on Claims.

HOWARD ARTHUR BESWICK

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 129, for the relief of Howard Arthur Beswick.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That notwithstanding the provisions and limitations of sections 15 to 20, both inclusive, of the act entitled "An act to provide compensation for employees of the United States suffering injuries while in the performance of their duties, and for other purposes," approved September 7, 1916, as amended, the United States Employees' Compensation Commission be, and the same is hereby, authorized and directed to receive and consider, when filed, the claim of Howard Arthur Beswick, of Ludlow, Vt., for disability alleged to have been incurred by him October 21, 1928, when a plane piloted by him while a Naval Reserve officer on active duty crashed near Des Moines, Iowa: Provided, That claim hereunder shall be filed within 6 months after the approval of this act: Provided further, That no benefits shall accrue prior to the enactment of this act.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

A. C. WILLIAMS

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 216, for the relief of A. C. Williams, administrator of the estate of his wife, Julia F. Williams.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to A. C. Williams, of Sentinel, Okla., administrator of the estate of his wife, Julia F. Williams, the sum of $1,000 in full settlement of any and all claims against the Government on account of the death of his wife, Julia F. Williams, who died as a result of injuries received in an automobile collision with a truck owned by the Government and driven by Charles Cordell, agent and employee of the Government, in the service of the Works Progress Administration, near Socorro, N. Mex., on July 31, 1936: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this Act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

RAY WIMMER

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 633, for the relief of Ray Wimmer.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Ray Wimmer, the sum of $121.20, in full satisfaction of his claim against the United States for the use of his personally owned automobile from December 5, 1934, to February 15, 1935, while employed as cruiser-appraiser, Indian Service, in cruising and appraising of timber on the Colville Indian Reservation, Washington: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

CATHERINE HUMLER

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 556, for the relief of Catherine Humler.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I object.

There being no further objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That, notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to Catherine Humler, mother of Joe M. Humler, late a private, Ninety-seventh Company, Sixth Regiment United States Marine Corps, 240 equal monthly installments of $57.50 each, commencing July 20, 1918, in full satisfaction of her claim against the United States for payment of yearly renewable term insurance on account of the death of said Joe M. Humler, who was killed in action while in the performance of his duty and before completing arrangements for a contract of such insurance: Provided, That the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs is hereby authorized and directed to deduct from the payment of insurance herein authorized the sum of $68, representing premiums based upon application of October 20, 1917.

J. HARRY WALKER

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 4965, for the relief of J. Harry Walker.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to J. Harry Walker, of Poplar, Mont., the sum of $1,870.93, in full satisfaction of his claims against the United States to November 27, 1937, for compensation for services rendered by him as an undertaker in the burial of Indians of the Fort Peck Agency and other reservations.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. COSTELLO: Line 6, strike out "$1,870.93" and insert in lieu thereof "$1,000."

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the amendment offered by the gentleman from California.

Mr. Speaker, do I understand from the gentleman from California [Mr. COSTELLO] if the amendment is not agreed to he will object to the bill?

Mr. COSTELLO. It was not my intention to object to the bill because of the facts involved in this bill which cover a period of years. A certain undertaker performed burial services for various Indians in Montana. The claim does not show whether he collected any amount at all from the estates of the Indians. It is possible he did collect some small amount. Also it does not show the exact amount of expense in each particular case. In view of the fact this covers a period of 22 years and because of the further fact services were rendered, I feel he is entitled to some compensation, but I believe $1,000 would be sufficient payment to be made to him.

Mr. O'CONNOR. This covers services rendered by Walker for burials of Indians from June 3, 1913, to November 27, 1937. These services were rendered to Fort Peck Indians in the amount of $1,728.60. There are claims in addition in the amount of $142.33 for the burial of two Indians from another reservation in South Dakota. There is another item from Fort Belknap and Standing Rock, N. Dak. These services were performed at the request of the Indian agents.

The payment of these expenses was to be made from the estates of the Indians, but when the estates were wound up there was not anything left for the payment of the burial expenses. The expenses, as I said, were incurred with the approval of the Indian agent. As I understand it, the report of the Department of the Interior is favorable, but the Comptroller General has rendered an unfavorable report. Personally, I think the original amount should be allowed.

Mr. HANCOCK. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'CONNOR. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. HANCOCK. Is it not true that the undertaker performed these services at his own risk and without any legal obligation on the part of the United States Government?

Mr. O'CONNOR. No; that is not true, because the expense was incurred, as I understand it, with the approval of the Indian agent. These Indians are entitled to decent burial the same as a white person.

Mr. HANCOCK. The Comptroller General recommends against the bill, stating there was no legal obligation on the part of the United States Government to pay the undertaker the amounts which he was unable to collect from the estates of the deceased Indians.

Mr. O'CONNOR. The United States is the guardian of these Indians, and if there are no funds in their estates to pay with, the Government should pay the expense.

Mr. HANCOCK. But they would be buried under supervision of the Indian agent.

Mr. O'CONNOR. The expense for their burial should be met by the United States Government for the reasons I just gave.

Mr. HANCOCK. In this case the Indians employed their own undertaker.

Mr. O'CONNOR. But it was done with the approval of the Indian agent.

Mr. HANCOCK. What is that?

Mr. O'CONNOR. The expense was incurred on approval of the Indian agent.

Mr. HANCOCK. That is necessary in all cases where you do business with Indians. You cannot do business with the Indians without approval of the Indian agent. As a matter of fact, an Indian is not liable for his debts with anybody, and anyone who does business with him does so at his own risk.

Mr. COSTELLO. Ordinarily the burial of Indians is done by contract, by advertising for bids. However, in this instance it was not done that way. The undertaker called by phone the superintendent of the Indian agency. Technically, he had no contract with the Government. There is nothing but the moral obligation because of the fact he did render some service to the Government.

Mr. O'CONNOR. The Government should be responsible for burying its own wards, and the full amount asked in the bill should be allowed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. COSTELLO].

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

MARY G. PERSON

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 1628, for relief of Mary G. Person.

MAJ. ANDREW S. ROWAN

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 746, to authorize Maj. Andrew S. Rowan, United States Army, retired, to accept the Order Carlos Manuel de Céspedes tendered him by the Government of Cuba in appreciation of services rendered.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the following-named retired officer of the United States Army is hereby authorized to accept the Order Carlos Manuel de Céspedes tendered him by the Government of Cuba in appreciation of services rendered: Maj. Andrew S. Rowan.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

CHARLES G. CLEMENT

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 3305, to correct the military record of Capt. Charles G. Clement.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in the administration of any laws conferring rights, privileges, or benefits upon honorably discharged soldiers, Capt. Charles G. Clement shall be held and considered to have been honorably discharged from the military service of the United States as captain, commanding Company E, Second Battalion, Three Hundred and Twenty-eighth Regiment United States Infantry.

With the following committee amendment:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert the following: "That in the administration of any laws conferring rights, privileges, or benefits upon honorably discharged soldiers, their widows or dependents, Capt. Charles G. Clement, Company E, Three Hundred and Twenty-eighth Infantry, shall be held and considered to have been honorably discharged from the military service of the United States on August 14, 1918: Provided, That no back pay or pension shall be held to have accrued prior to the approval of this act."

Amend the title.

The committee amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill for the relief of Charles G. Clement."

SGT. FRED W. STOCKHAM

The Clerk called the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 2) providing for consideration of a recommendation for decoration of Sgt. Fred W. Stockham, deceased.

Mr. WADSWORTH and Mr. HANCOCK objected and, under the rule, the joint resolution was recommitted to the Committee on Military Affairs.

IMOGENE ENLEY

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 543, for the relief of Imogene Enley.

Mr. ANDERSON of Missouri objected.

There being no further objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Imogene Enley the sum of $183.70. Such sum shall be in full settlement of all claims for damages against the United States on account of injuries sustained by the said Imogene Enley when an Army truck collided at the Pearl City Junction, Territory of Hawaii, on June 27, 1936, with the parked car of which she was an occupant, said car having been halted by order of the military police to allow a gun convoy to pass.

With the following committee amendments:

Page 2, line 2, after the word "pass", insert the following: "Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. INTERNATIONAL MANUFACTURERS' SALES CO. OF AMERICA, INC.

The Clerk called the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 86) for the relief of International Manufacturers' Sales Co. of America, Inc., A. S. Postnikoff, trustee.

Mr. COCHRAN, Mr. RICH, Mr. GRANT of Indiana, and Mr. COSTELLO objected, and, under the rule the joint resolution was recommitted to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD at this point.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. COSTELLO. My purpose, Mr. Speaker, in requesting this permission to extend my remarks, is to avail myself of an opportunity to explain to the Members of the House the various facts and circumstances connected with this bill for the relief of the International Manufacturers' Sales Co. of America, Inc., A. S. Postnikoff, trustee, which bill is more familiarly known as the Russian shoe bill. In previous Congresses, numerous efforts have been made to secure passage of legislation which would pay directly to the claimant the sum of $968,748.12, to be appropriated from the Treasury. Although such proposals have met with the consistent objections of the officially appointed objectors on both sides of the aisle, nevertheless the bill did pass the House in an omnibus bill during the Seventy-fourth Congress. On February 11, 1936, the President vetoed the bill. The veto message appears at page 1817 of volume 80, part 2, of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. The House thereupon voted on a motion to pass the bill, notwithstanding the veto message of the President, but the motion failed to carry by a roll-call vote showing but 4 Members voting in favor of the bill, while 333 voted against the passage of the bill.

Although it was believed at the time that the decisive defeat of this bill on a roll-call vote of the House would forever end the matter, yet today the same claimant returns with a new bill, asking that he be permitted to present the claim to the Court of Claims. Having witnessed the untiring efforts of the claimant to press this claim, I am confident that even an adverse decision of the Court of Claims will not terminate this matter.

The claimant company was incorporated in Illinois in 1910, and in 1916 was reincorporated in New York to engage in a general sales business in Russia and other European countries. The claimant acted as special sales agent for various manufacturers, all of whom were stockholders in the claimant company. In this instance a sale of 107,000 pairs of shoes had been made to European Russia. However, due to the war situation, shipment had to be made across the Pacific, through Siberia and into Vladivostok, thence to be sent by rail into European Russia. It was not possible to ship the shoes on from Vladivostok, however, and so Mr. Postnikoff then went to Vladivostok to determine what he might do with the shoes. Whether the shoes could have been reshipped back to the United States or to Japan for sale is difficult to say, as the railroads in Russia were in a demoralized condition and the possibility of moving large blocks of freight was extremely difficult. The claimant infers that such reshipment would have been possible.

In the fall of 1918 a plan was formulated by the War Trade Board for the purpose of extending economic aid to the population of Siberian Russia. Meeting with the approval of the President, the War Trade Board was entrusted with carrying out this plan and was placed in control of all supplies licensed for exporting to Vladivostok. Mr. August Heid was appointed chief of the Vladivostok bureau as the representative of the War Trade Board in that city. The supplies, which were proposed to be shipped, were to be obtained partly by use of a revolving fund placed at the disposal of the Board by the President.

In order to carry out the plan of assistance to the people of Siberia, American merchants, manufacturers, and distributors were invited to sell goods in Siberia and were advised that they could obtain information as to the method of selling goods and related matters from the Vladivostok bureau to the War Trade Board. It appears from the record that wide publicity was given to the proposed aid to be extended in Siberia, and that it was in response to this general request and not due to any specific or special invitation that Mr. Postnikoff consulted with Mr. Heid, of the bureau in Vladivostok, regarding the possibility of disposing of the shoes then in that city. Arrangements were made between Mr. Postnikoff and Mr. Heid whereby the shoes would be sold in Russia to various municipalities and cooperative societies at prices which would cover the actual expenses and costs without profit.

Consequently, the shoes, approximately 107,471 pairs, were sold at a price of $10.80 per pair. The American Red Cross provided railroad cars to transport the shoes, attaching the cars to special relief trains; the American forces in Siberia detailed special guards for their protection and the War Trade Board supervised the sales. The shoes were delivered to the purchasers during December 1918 and January 1919, but were not paid for until March, April, and May 1919, in accordance with the sales agreement. The shoes were paid for in full by depositing the purchase price in Russian rubles in five different banks to the credit of the International Manufacturers' Sales Co. To that extent the terms of the agreement between Mr. Postnikoff and Mr. Heid was completed, having been carried out in full accordance with its provisions.

This complete history is given that the Members may know the full background of this claim. Over these facts there is no controversy. However, the basis of the present claim rests upon an order which was issued by the Federal Reserve Board under date of February 14, 1919. The order was pursuant to an Executive order dated January 26, 1918, prescribing rules and regulations under section 5 of the Trading with the Enemy Act. The order complained of was as follows:

Unless otherwise instructed, the exportation or importation of Russian rubles or the transfer of funds for their purchase by "persons" and "dealers" in the United States, as described under the Executive order of the President of January 26, 1918, is prohibited.

Following the ruling of the Federal Reserve Board, the Russian Government issued a ruling prohibiting ruble exchange, the effect of which was to allow withdrawals from Siberian banks not in excess of 1,000 rubles per week. The value of the ruble in American money at this time was 15 cents. The total amount of rubles deposited was 6,448,260, half of this amount being in three banks at Omsk and the balance in two Vladivostok banks. However, the Members should recall that the terms of the sales agreement provided for payment in March, April, and May 1919, while the order of the Federal Reserve Board was issued on February 14, 1919, prior to the time payment was made, but subsequent to the delivery of the shoes. The order of the Russian Government was issued shortly after that of the Federal Reserve Board, and also prior to the deposit of the money in the Russian banks.

It is contended that the order of the Federal Reserve Board made it impossible to exchange the rubles on deposit for any currency, and so deprived the claimant company from withdrawing its funds from Russia. On the other hand, it is apparent that had there been no order from the Federal Reserve Board prohibiting the exchange of dollars and rubles, still the claimant could not have effected the removal of its rubles from the Siberian banks under the order of the Russian Government, except at the rate of 1,000 per week. In a word, only 52,000 rubles could have been withdrawn in a year, and it would have required 124 years to withdraw the entire bank account under the order of the Siberian Government. Subsequently, the new Government in Russia repudiated the former currency, and as a consequence the bank accounts became utterly worthless, the old rubles not being recognized.

Had the Federal Reserve Board issued no order, it is a question, contended by the claimant, whether the Russian Government would have issued its order. However, there could be no doubt that the old currency would have been repudiated in any case, making the rubles worthless.

It is alleged by the claimant company that by reason of the order of the Federal Reserve Board the company was unable to convert its rubles into American dollars; that as a result thereof the rubles had to remain on deposit and still remain in Russian banks, and have subsequently depreciated in value to practically nothing; and that the total amount received by reason of its sale of shoes and on deposit, including interest to January 1, 1922, on the basis of an exchange rate of 18 cents in American money to the ruble, amounts to $1,308,816.46.

It is not questioned that amounts received from the sale of shoes were deposited as rubles in the various banks in Russia, but it is not apparent how there can be any obligation upon the United States, legal, moral, or otherwise. While the War Trade Board assisted in the sale of the shoes, that assistance was confined to facilitating transportation and delivery. The payment and disposition of the money was entirely under the direction of the claimant company. Although the regulation of the Federal Reserve Board did prohibit the exportation or importation of rubles, it did not prevent the withdrawal of such funds from the banks in which they were deposited in Siberia. On the contrary, only the regulation of the Siberian Government prevented such withdrawals. It was because of this latter regulation that it was not possible to exchange the rubles for currency other than American. In a word, in spite of the ruling of the Federal Reserve Board, the claimant company could have exchanged its rubles for any other currency, provided other countries had not also made a like ruling.

It is interesting to note that Mr. Postnikoff admits that he did not know of the ruling of the Federal Reserve Board until early in May 1919—3 months after it was issued—when he called at the Siberian banks to exchange his rubles into dollars; and that was long after the ruling of the Russian Government, likewise. It was not until May 1919, when the transaction was entirely completed and all payments had been made in full, that Mr. Postnikoff first attempted to remove his deposits from the Russian banks.

Certain facts have not been disclosed in any reports and so cannot be given. It does not appear on what date the claimant company first contracted to sell its shoes to European Russia; nor does it appear on what date the shoes were shipped from this country to Russia via the Pacific and Vladivostok; nor does the date of arrival of the shipment in Vladivostok appear; nor does the length of time during which the shoes were in storage in Vladivostok appear. Further, as to whether the company could actually have effected a sale of the shoes elsewhere is not apparent. Supposing that the shoes could have been removed from Russia for sale elsewhere; it is interesting to note that the cost of shipment of the shoes from the United States to Russia was nearly $500,000. To reship the shoes to the United States again, if possible, would have made the shipping cost alone nearly a million dollars.

An effort is made to liken this case to that of the P. DeRonde & Co., Inc., claim, in which that company recovered $1,500,000. However, there are numerous points of difference between the cases and the similarity is more simulated than real. In the DeRonde Sugar case the Federal Government assumed jurisdiction over sugar transactions in an effort to prevent speculation, and in pursuance thereof directly requested the DeRonde Co. to import sugar to be distributed under the direct supervision of the Department of Justice at a profit of a cent a pound. Agreeing to these arrangements the sugar was imported, but in the interim the price had materially declined to such an extent that the sugar could not be sold except at a loss. On the advice of the Department of Justice the sugar was sold and the loss was incurred in the sum of $1,500,000, for which loss relief was granted. To contrast that case with the present claimant one will observe that the Federal Government had not assumed jurisdiction over the shoes of the claimant nor over the shoe business; it had not asked the claimant to export its shoes to Russia, they were already there; it had not agreed to direct and supervise the sale, on the contrary the War Trade Board merely facilitated the transportation; and finally it had not advised the selling at a loss of the shoes. In fact the two cases are similar only in that where the DeRonde Co. was entitled to recover due to several causes brought about directly by the Government, the present claimant is not entitled to recover, because no one of the like causes of the loss was brought about by the intervention of the Government.

From a full study of this case, I am confident that this Congress and subsequent Congresses will continue to deny any merit to this claim, already 20 years old. At best it is a claim for not just remote damages, but extremely remote damages, which can only be asserted on the ground that the order of the Federal Reserve Board directly caused the order to be issued by the Siberian Government, and that this latter order subsequently brought about the complete loss of the money through the repudiation of the currency by Russia. I do not believe that any Member is willing to voice his approval of this claim upon such a chain of argument, and yet that is the only basis on which it can be justified if one would attempt to justify such a claim.

MRS. A. R. BARNARD ET AL.

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 5346, for the relief of Mrs. A. R. Barnard, Charles A. Stephens, Donald W. Prairie, and dependents of Vern A. Needles.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Mrs. A. R. Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of Labor is authorized and directed to cancel the outstanding orders and warrants of deportation in the case of the aliens Morris Hoppenheim, Lena Hoppenheim, Doris Hoppenheim, and Ruth Hoppenheim; and if the said Morris Hoppenheim, Lena Hoppenheim, Doris Hoppenheim, and Ruth Hoppenheim shall establish their present good moral character the Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization shall in respect of each make a record of registry and issue a certificate of arrival in manner and form authorized to be made by the act of March 2, 1929 (U. S. C., title 8, sec. 106A), as if each alien had entered the United States prior to June 3, 1921: Provided, That formal application and fee payments required by such act of March 2, 1929, shall not be held to be waived under this act.

WILLIAM CARL LAUDE

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 3729, for the relief of William Carl Laude.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill S. 1291, for the relief of William Carl Laude, be substituted for the House bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California [Mr. COSTELLO]?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the Senate bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That for the purposes of the immigration and naturalization laws, William Carl Laude, brother of the religious Order of St. Benedict, Atchison, Kans., shall be considered to have been lawfully admitted at Buffalo, N. Y., on August 29, 1936, to the United States for permanent residence.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. COSTELLO: Page 1, line 3, strike out all after the enacting clause and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"That the Secretary of Labor be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to record the permanent residence of William Carl Laude as of August 29, 1936, and that the warrant of deportation be canceled, and William Carl Laude shall not again be subject to deportation proceedings for the reasons set forth in said warrant, and that by the terms of this act he shall not be permitted to become a naturalized citizen of the United States unless and until he shall leave the United States and reenter in a lawful way in full compliance with the existing law.

"Upon the enactment of this act the Secretary of State shall instruct the proper quota-control officer to deduct one number from the nonpreference category of the quota during the current year."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

A House bill (H. R. 3729) was laid on the table.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

NICHOLAS CONTOPOULOS

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 5056, for the relief of Nicholas Contopoulos.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in the administration of the immigration and naturalization laws the Secretary of Labor is hereby authorized and directed to cancel the warrant of arrest and the order of deportation heretofore issued against Nicholas Contopoulos. Hereafter, for the purposes of the immigration and naturalization laws, such alien shall be deemed to have been lawfully admitted to the United States for permanent residence on December 1, 1921, at the port of New York.

With the following committee amendment:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert the following: "That the Secretary of Labor be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to record the permanent residence of Nicholas Contopoulos as of the year 1921, and that the warrant of deportation be canceled, and Nicholas Contopoulos shall not again be subject to deportation proceedings for the reasons set forth in said warrant, and that by the terms of this act he shall not be permitted to become a naturalized citizen of the United States unless and until he shall leave the United States and reenter in a lawful way in full compliance with the existing law.

"Upon the enactment of this act the Secretary of State shall instruct the proper quota-control officer to deduct one number from the nonpreference category of the quota during the current year."

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the order of deportation and warrant of arrest of Annie Reiley be canceled and that her entry at Rouses Point on September 11, 1938, be a legal entry.

With the following committee amendment:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert the following: "That the Secretary of Labor be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to record the permanent residence of Annie Reiley as of September 11, 1938, and that the warrant of deportation be canceled, and Annie Reiley shall not again be subject to deportation proceedings for the reasons set up in said warrant, and that by the terms of this act she shall not be permitted to become a naturalized citizen of the United States."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

LUISE EHRENFELD

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 3094, for the relief of Luise Ehrenfeld.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in the administration of the immigration and naturalization laws, the Secretary of Labor is hereby authorized and directed to permit registration of Luise Ehrenfeld as having entered the United States legally and for permanent residence.

With the following committee amendments:

In line 6, after the words "United States" strike out the words "legally and."

In line 7, after the word "residence" add the following: "By the terms of this act she shall not be permitted to become a naturalized citizen of the United States unless and until she shall leave the United States and reenter with a legal visa, and upon the enactment of this act the Secretary of State shall instruct the proper quota-control officer to deduct one number from the non-preference category of the quota during the current year."

The committee amendments were agreed to.

EGON KARL FREIHERR VON MAUCHENHEIM AND MARGARETE VON MAUCHENHEIM

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 3277, for the relief of Egon Karl Freiherr von Mauchenheim and Margarete von Mauchenheim.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a similar bill, S. 1384, may be considered in lieu of the House bill.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the Senate bill as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in the administration of the immigration and naturalization laws the Secretary of Labor is hereby authorized and directed to cancel the warrant of arrest and the order of deportation against Egon Karl Freiherr von Mauchenheim and Margarete von Mauchenheim, his wife, heretofore issued on the ground that admission to the United States had been fraudulently gained, and that they shall hereafter be deemed to have been lawfully admitted to the United States for permanent residence as of May 19, 1936.

Upon the enactment of this act the Secretary of State shall instruct the proper quota-control officer to deduct two numbers from the nonpreference category of the quota during the current year.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. COSTELLO: On page 1, line 3, strike out all after the enacting clause and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"That the Secretary of Labor be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to record the permanent residence of Egon Karl Freiherr von Mauchenheim and Margarete von Mauchenheim as of May 19, 1936, and that the order of deportation be canceled, and Egon Karl Freiherr von Mauchenheim and Margarete von Mauchenheim shall not again be subject to deportation proceedings for the reasons set forth in said warrant, and that by the terms of this act they shall not be permitted to become a naturalized citizen of the United States unless and until they shall leave the United States and reenter in a lawful way in full compliance with the existing law.

"Upon the enactment of this act the Secretary of State shall instruct the proper quota-control officer to deduct one number from the preference category of the quota during the current year."

Mr. CLEVINGER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman from California yield?

Mr. COSTELLO. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. CLEVINGER. In what particular does this action change the House bill?

Mr. COSTELLO. My purpose in offering the amendment is simply this. The Senate bill has already been passed by the Senate. By substituting it now for the House bill it will go back to the Senate and the Senate will be asked to concur in the amendment I have offered. This amendment is to substitute the amendment the House committee has offered to the House bill, so the language of the bill will be that of the House committee, which provides that these persons may remain in this country but will be denied citizenship, and also that they will be charged against the quota of the country of origin.

Mr. CLEVINGER. I have no objection, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from California.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

A House bill (H. R. 3277) was laid on the table.

PENSIONS TO WIDOWS OF VETERANS OF THE CIVIL WAR

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 6897, granting pensions to certain widows of veterans of the Civil War.

Mr. LESINSKI. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to suspend consideration of the bills from Calendar No. 290 to Calendar No. 297, until the committee gets through with its own private bills. I am going to bring them up under privileged reports.

Mr. HANCOCK. Mr. Speaker, may I ask the gentleman the number of those bills?

Mr. LESINSKI. From 290 to 297, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions. I shall bring them up later or as soon as the committee is through with its own private bills.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will call No. 298 on the calendar.

STEPHEN KELEN

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 4249) for the relief of Stephen Kelen.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in the administration of the immigration and naturalization laws the Secretary of Labor is hereby authorized and directed to cancel all proceedings relating to the deportation of Stephen Kelen. Hereafter, for the purposes of the immigration and naturalization laws, such alien shall be deemed to have been lawfully admitted to the United States for permanent residence on January 18, 1921, at the port of Laredo, Tex.

With the following committee amendment:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

"That jurisdiction is hereby conferred upon the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Missouri to hear, determine, and render judgment upon the claims of the following-named people or their heirs, representatives, administrators, executors, successors, or assigns: G. M. McCrary, Paul N. Shouse, Emma Shults, Mrs. C. E. Johnson, Mrs. A. H. Wilber, G. E. Hutson, Elmer Willis, Ethel McDuff, W. J. Hunter, W. C. Hood, J. P. Kuhnert, Florence O. Saunders, E. Kabel, Oscar Swearinger, Argyle Reese, S. O. Daniels, Belle Wagner, and W. D. Shreve. Said claims arise out of a flood allegedly resulting from the defective or improper placing and construction of dikes or revetments in the Missouri River by the War Department of the United States, at or near Bean Lake in Platte County, and Sugar Lake in Buchanan County, in the State of Missouri, in the month of March 1934. Suit hereunder may be instituted at any time within 1 year from the date of the enactment of this act, and proceedings therein, appeals therefrom, and payment of judgment thereon, if any, shall be had in the same manner as in the case of claims over which such court has jurisdiction under the provisions of the Judicial Code."

The committee amendment was agreed to and the bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read a third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to confer jurisdiction on the District Court of the United States for the Western District of Missouri to hear, determine, and render judgment upon the claims of certain claimants who suffered loss by flood at or near Bean Lake in Platte County, and Sugar Lake in Buchanan County, in the State of Missouri, during the month of March 1934."

ADA FULLER

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 2102) for the relief of Ada Fuller.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, and in full settlement against the Government of the United States, the sum of $1,500 to Ada Fuller, of Atlanta, Ga., for personal injuries received as the result of being struck by a Works Progress Administration truck in Atlanta, Ga., on November 20, 1935.

With the following committee amendments:

Line 7, strike out "$1,500" and insert "$150."

At the end of the bill strike out the period, insert a colon and the following: "Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000."

The committee amendments were agreed to and the bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read a third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GEORGE SLADE

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 2452) for the relief of George Slade.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, directed to pay to George Slade, of Norfolk, Va., out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $4,500 on account of permanent injuries sustained by him in Norfolk County, Va., on October 31, 1924, as a result of being shot and crippled for life by J. G. Griffin, an officer of the United States engaged in the enforcement of prohibition.

With the following committee amendments:

Beginning with line 4 insert "authorized and."

Line 6, after the figures "$4,500", insert "in full settlement of all claims against the United States."

At the end of the bill strike out the period, insert a colon and the following: "Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000."

The committee amendments were agreed to and the bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time was read the third time and passed and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

G. W. NETTERVILLE

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 2610) for the relief of G. W. Netterville.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to G. W. Netterville, of McComb, Miss., the sum of $185, in full satisfaction of his claim against the United States for work done and money paid out for labor in the part construction of a home at the McComb, Miss., homestead project in 1934: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to, or received by, any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

DALE W. GUISE AND OTHERS

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to return to the consideration of Calendar No. 248, H. R. 3161, for the relief of the estate and minor children of Dale W. and Gladys M. Guise, Sally C. Guise, and Martha G. and Arnold E. Orner. I do that for the purpose of permitting the gentleman from California [Mr. COSTELLO] to offer an amendment reducing the amount of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to William Durboraw, Gettysburg, Pa., as administrator of the estate of Dale W. Guise, deceased, the sum of $1,300, and to the First National Bank of Gettysburg, Pa., as guardian of the three minor children of the said Dale W. Guise and his wife, Gladys M. Guise, deceased, the sum of $30,000. The payment to the said William Durboraw, administrator, shall be in full settlement of all claims against the United States for hospital, medical, and funeral and burial expenses incurred on account of the injuries and death of the said Dale W. Guise and for funeral and burial expenses incurred on account of the death of the said Gladys M. Guise. Such injuries and deaths resulted from a collision, on April 10, 1938, on United States Highway No. 40, about 7 miles east of Zanesville, Ohio, when the automobile of the said Dale W. Guise in which he and his wife were riding was struck by an ambulance (No. 71090) in the service of the Civilian Conservation Corps. The payment to the said First National Bank of Gettysburg, guardian, shall be in full settlement of all claims against the United States on account of the loss of care and support by their parents during minority sustained by the surviving children of the said Dale W. Guise and the said Gladys M. Guise, being Mary Louise Guise, 13 years of age; William Crist Guise, 11 years of age; and Evelyn Jane Guise, 8 years of age.

SEC. 2. The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appro-riated, to Sally C. Guise, Arendtsville, Pa., the sum of $7,500. The payment of such sum shall be in full settlement of all claims against the United States on account of the death of Christian Guise, her husband, who was a passenger in the car of Dale W. Guise and was killed in the collision described in section 1.

SEC. 3. The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Martha G. Orner, Arendtsville, Pa., the sum of $15,000, and to Arnold E. Orner, her husband, the sum of $10,000. The payment of such sums shall be in full settlement of all claims against the United States for damages sustained on account of the injuries received by the said Martha G. Orner, who was a passenger in the car of Dale W. Guise and suffered injuries in the collision described in section 1, which resulted in the permanent disfigurement and disablement of the said Martha G. Orner and the loss of her unborn child.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following amendment:

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the amendment offered by the gentleman from California.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. COSTELLO: Page 1, line 8, after the words "sum of", strike out the remainder of line 8 and all of lines 9 and 10, and on page 2 all of line 1 down to and including the figures "$30,000", and insert in lieu thereof the following: "$11,398.16."

Mr. MOTT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman please explain the amendment?

Mr. COSTELLO. Yes.

Mr. MOTT. I would like to ask the gentleman how much that reduces the original amount recommended by the committee?

Mr. COSTELLO. The bill as a total carries $51,000. As a result of this particular amendment and by striking out these amounts I am inserting, instead of the amounts in the bill, the sum of $11,398.16, so that approximately $20,000 is being eliminated from the total of the bill by this amendment.

Mr. MOTT. So the bill would not be $11,000 approximately instead of $51,000?

Mr. COSTELLO. No. The first section would be reduced from $29,636.16 to $11,398.16, saving $18,000. The purpose of offering that amendment is to change the arrangement first made by the committee. Heretofore in all of these accident cases we have tried to establish a certain amount as a maximum, namely, $5,000 in the event of death and $2,500 as a limit in case of injury. While those sums are not fixed, that is more or less the average to which we have been trying to adhere. However, in this case, where there happen to be two or three minor children, the committee has assumed a new policy of considering the age of the children and the estimated earning capacity of the parents and then awarding an annual amount to the minor children until each minor child should reach the age of majority, which amounts to approximately $900 a year.

It is my thought that we should not adopt such a policy, which might prove very expensive in the future, but on the contrary we should adhere to the program followed in the past, namely, of paying approximately $5,000 in case of death.

Mr. GRANT of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COSTELLO. Yes.

Mr. GRANT of Indiana. I understand that the amendment proposed by the gentleman in section 1 which would substitute $11,000 would also take the place of those appropriations in sections 2 and 3?

Mr. COSTELLO. No. I have other amendments to take care of that. I have no amendment to offer to section 2. In section 3 I propose to strike out the amount "$9,000" and insert "$5,000" and reduce $7,500 to cover expenses only in the sum of $1,975.99.

Mr. GRANT of Indiana. What will the total be for the bill as a whole?

Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland. It will be approximately $30,000. I think the gentleman was mistaken when he thought the bill reported by the committee called for $30,000. Actually the committee reported a bill for over $51,000.

Mr. MOTT. Will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. COSTELLO. I yield.

Mr. MOTT. Will the gentleman state the aggregate amount of all the items in this bill?

Mr. COSTELLO. Do you mean as written into the bill?

Mr. MOTT. The aggregate as they are now in the bill as reported, and the aggregate total amount this bill will carry as amended, if passed.

Mr. COSTELLO. I will state that the bill provides, on account of two deaths, as expenses, $1,736.16. It then provides for the minor children—for one, $7,200; another, $9,000; and a third, $11,700. In view of those figures, which amount to approximately $29,000, I am offering this first amendment, which amounts to $11,398. It reduces that figure by more than half. In addition, there is Sally C. Guise, whose husband was killed. For her the committee has allowed $5,000. I have made no change in that. In another instance we have Martha G. Orner and Arnold E. Orner, husband and wife. The wife was killed. Therefore $5,000 was allowed for that amount instead of the amount which the committee suggested, $9,000. For Arnold E. Orner approximately $1,900 in place of $7,500.

The result is that on these two items, which total $16,500, I am reducing them to approximately $7,000, thereby making a saving of more than $9,000.

The committee bill would appropriate, in all, $51,136.16. If the amendments which I have offered are accepted, the total appropriation will be $23,374.15.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from California.

The amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment: Page 1, line 7, strike out "Guise" and insert "Guise and Gladys M. Guise, both."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment: Page 2, line 1, insert "$7,200 to be used for the benefit of Mary Louise Guise; $9,000 to be used for the benefit of William Crist Guise; and $11,700 to be used for the benefit of Evelyn Jane Guise; in all, $27,900."

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I offered my first amendment as a substitute for that committee amendment; also for the committee amendment which appears on page 1, line 8.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question now recurs on the committee amendment.

Mr. COSTELLO. The amendment which I have offered is in lieu of that committee amendment, and for that reason I do not think the committee amendment should be agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection the committee amendment will be rejected.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the next committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment: Page 2, line 21, after the word "Guise" strike out the remainder of line 21 and all of lines 22 and 23.

The committee amendment was agreed to.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. COSTELLO: Page 2, line 16, after the words "Corps", strike out the remainder of section 1.

The amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the next committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment: Page 3, line 1, after the word "of", strike out "$7,500" and insert "$5,000."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the next committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment: Page 3, line 9, strike out "$15,000" and insert "$9,000."

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment to the committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. COSTELLO as a substitute for the committee amendment: Page 3, line 9, after the words "the sum of", strike out "$15,000" and insert "$5,000."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from California to the committee amendment.

The amendment to the committee amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the committee amendment as amended.

The committee amendment as amended was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the next committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment: Page 3, line 10, strike out "$10,000" and insert "$7,500."

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment to the committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. COSTELLO as a substitute for the amendment just reported: Page 3, line 10, after the words "the sum of", strike out "$10,000" and insert "$1,975.99."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from California to the committee amendment.

The amendment to the committee amendment was agreed to.

The committee amendment as amended was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the next committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment: Page 3, line 17, after the word "child", insert "Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with these claims, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

SGT. FRED W. STOCKHAM

Mr. ANDERSON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to return to Calendar No. 231, Senate Joint Resolution 2, providing for consideration of a recommendation for decoration of Sgt. Fred W. Stockham, deceased. I understand the gentleman who objected has withdrawn his objection.

Mr. HANCOCK. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my objection to the joint resolution; and I am authorized to say for my colleague the gentleman from New York [Mr. WADSWORTH] that he wishes to withdraw his objection also.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the Senate joint resolution?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the joint resolution, as follows:

Whereas on the nights of June 13-14, 1918, at Belleau Woods, Fred W. Stockham, deceased, formerly a gunnery sergeant, United States Marine Corps, in action involving actual conflict with the enemy, distinguished himself conspicuously by gallantry and intrepidity at the risk of his life above and beyond the call of duty; and

Whereas a citation citing said Fred W. Stockham for the extraordinary heroism displayed by him at such time was written but, through accident, was not published and is not recorded in the War Department; and

Whereas no decoration has been awarded to said Fred W. Stockham for the extraordinary heroism displayed by him at such time: Therefore be it Resolved, etc., That any recommendation for decoration by the United States of America of Fred W. Stockham, deceased, formerly a gunnery sergeant, Ninety-sixth Company, Second Battalion, Sixth Division, United States Marine Corps, shall be considered and acted upon in the same manner as such recommendation would have been considered and acted upon if it had been pending on May 26, 1928.

The joint resolution was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will now call those bills that were passed over.

GRIZELDA HULL HOBSON

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 474, granting an increase of pension to Grizelda Hull Hobson.

Mr. HANCOCK and Mr. MOTT objected and, under the rule, the bill was recommitted to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

ADELAIDE WESTOVER

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 4574, granting an increase of pension to Adelaide Westover.

Mr. GRANT of Indiana and Mr. MOTT objected and, under the rule, the bill was recommitted to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Mr. LESINSKI. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the consideration of Calendar No. 322.

Mr. HANCOCK. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry. The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. HANCOCK. Was it not agreed to dispense with further proceedings under the Private Calendar?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Michigan asked unanimous consent to take up a bill that appears on the Private Calendar.

Mr. HANCOCK. It was thoroughly understood that we would dispense with further proceedings under the call of the Private Calendar with No. 306.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That does not preclude the gentleman's submitting a unanimous-consent request.

Is there objection?

Mr. HANCOCK. Mr. Speaker, I object.

VARIABLE PAYMENT OF CONSTRUCTION CHARGE ON RECLAMATION PROJECTS

Mr. DEMPSEY, from the Committee on Rules, submitted the following resolution for printing under the rules:

House Resolution 242

Resolved, That upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of H. R. 6984, a bill to provide a feasible and comprehensive plan for the variable payment of construction charges on United States reclamation projects, to protect the investment of the United States in such projects, and for other purposes. That after general debate which shall be confined to the bill and continue not to exceed 1 hour, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation, the bill shall be read for amendment under the 5-minute rule. At the conclusion of the reading of the bill for amendment the Committee shall rise and report the same to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted, and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit, with or without instructions.

CALENDAR WEDNESDAY

The SPEAKER pro tempore. This is Calendar Wednesday. The Clerk will call the roll of the committees.

BRIDGE ACROSS NIAGARA RIVER

Mr. BLOOM (when the Committee on Foreign Affairs was called). Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, I call up the bill (H. R. 6928) to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Niagara River at or near the city of Niagara Falls, N. Y., and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the bill as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Niagara River, at or near the city of Niagara Falls, N. Y., and the city of Niagara Falls, Canada, authorized to be built by the Niagara Falls Bridge Commission by an act of Congress approved June 16, 1938, are hereby extended 1 and 3 years, respectively, from June 16, 1939: Provided, That the Niagara Falls Bridge Commission shall have received offers for the sale of its bonds and securities for the said bridge from responsible interested parties and the contract made as a result of such offers shall have the approval of the comptroller and the attorney general of the State of New York.

SEC. 2. That so much of section 4 of Public Resolution Numbered 117 of the Seventy-fifth Congress which reads as follows: "and said bonds and the interest thereon shall be exempt from all Federal, State, municipal, and local taxation" is hereby repealed.

SEC. 3. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

With the following committee amendment:

Page 2, strike out all of section 2, and insert a new section, as follows:

"SEC. 2. That so much of section 4 of Public Resolution Numbered 117 of the Seventy-fifth Congress which reads as follows: 'The bridge constructed under the authority of this joint resolution shall be deemed to be an instrumentality for international commerce authorized by the Government of the United States, and said bridge and the income derived therefrom shall be exempt from all Federal, State, municipal, and local taxation, and said bonds and the interest thereon shall be exempt from all Federal, State, municipal, and local taxation' is hereby repealed."

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLOOM. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Will the gentleman tell us the difference between this bill and the one vetoed by the President?

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Speaker, this bill was perfected in committee after the President vetoed the previous bill. It is drawn now to conform with the President's veto. The gentleman from New York [Mr. ANDREWS], who originally introduced the bill, has been in communication with the different departments, and the bill has been perfected so as to meet the President's requirements in the matter. The gentleman from New York [Mr. ANDREWS] can tell you anything further about this matter.

The committee amendment was agreed to.

PAYMENT OF BURIAL AND LAST-ILLNESS EXPENSES OF NATIVE EMPLOYEES IN GOVERNMENT SERVICE ABROAD

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, I call up the bill (S. 1523) to authorize the payment of burial expenses and expenses in connection with last illness and death of native employees who die while serving in offices abroad of executive departments of the United States Government, and ask unanimous consent that it be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. GRANT of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House.

A call of the House was ordered.

The Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Two hundred and seventy-two Members have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

On motion of Mr. BLOOM, further proceedings under the call were dispensed with.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. BUCK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to insert in the RECORD an address by the Honorable Louis Johnson, Assistant Secretary of War, delivered at the Institute of Public Affairs, University of Virginia, on July 4.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California [Mr. BUCK]?

There was no objection.

PAYMENT OF BURIAL AND LAST-ILLNESS EXPENSES OF NATIVE EMPLOYEES IN GOVERNMENT SERVICE ABROAD

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New York [Mr. BLOOM] asks unanimous consent that the bill may be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the head of any executive department which maintains permanent staffs of employees in foreign countries is hereby authorized to pay out of any appropriation available to the department concerned for miscellaneous or contingent expenses, burial expenses, and expenses in connection with last illness and death, not in excess of $100 in any one case, of the native employees of such departments in those countries with respect to which the Secretary of State shall determine it is customary for employers to pay such expenses; and the head of any executive department, which maintains permanent staffs of employees in foreign countries where such custom does not exist, is authorized, upon finding that the immediate family of the deceased is destitute, to make such payments within the limitations prescribed above to the family, heirs-at-law, or persons responsible for the debts of the deceased, as the officer in charge of the office abroad in which the deceased was employed shall determine to be proper.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

CLASSIFICATION AND GRADING OF FOREIGN SERVICE PERSONNEL

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, I call up the bill (H. R. 6836) to amend the act entitled "An act for the grading and classification of clerks in the Foreign Service of the United States of America, and providing compensation therefor," approved February 23, 1931, as amended, and ask unanimous consent that it may be considered in the House as in the Committee of the Whole.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York, Mr. BLOOM?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That paragraph (n) of section 26 of the act entitled "An act for the grading and classification of clerks in the Foreign Service of the United States of America, and providing compensation therefor," approved February 23, 1931, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"(n) Any diplomatic secretary or consular officer who has been, or any Foreign Service officer who may hereafter be promoted from the classified service to the grade of Ambassador or Minister, or appointed to a position in the Department of State, shall be entitled to all the benefits of this section in the same manner and under the same conditions as Foreign Service officers: Provided, That any officer now included under the act of May 24, 1924, and the amendment thereto of July 3, 1926, shall be entitled to the benefits of this section: And provided further, That hereafter an Ambassador or Minister, or a former Ambassador or Minister who is not otherwise entitled to an annuity under this section and who shall have served as such for the period mentioned in the following paragraph (1), shall nevertheless be entitled to the benefits thereof in the same manner and under the same conditions as Foreign Service officers, but subject to the following terms and conditions:

"(1) Any person who has served as Ambassador or Minister continuously or at different times for an aggregate period of 20 years or more, in which period may be included any periods of service in any of the capacities and as provided in paragraph (o) of this section, may become entitled to the benefits of this section as hereinafter provided by paying into the Foreign Service retirement and disability fund a special contribution equal to 5 percent of his annual salary for each year of such employment subsequent to July 1, 1924, with interest thereon to date of payment compounded annually at 4 percent.

"(2) Any Ambassador or Minister who becomes entitled to the benefits of this section as provided in the preceding paragraph (1) shall receive an annuity computed in accordance with paragraph (e) of this section, including the right to voluntary retirement as provided by paragraph (d) of this section: Provided, however, That in case any Ambassador or Minister is retired from active service at less than 65 years of age and with at least 20 but less than 30 years of service, computed in accordance with this section, and assuming that he shall have complied with the requirements of the law entitling him to such annuity, he shall receive an annuity computed in accordance with paragraph (d) of this section on the basis of the total period of service thus computed, including extra service credits as provided in paragraph (k) of this section, the fractional part of a month, if any, to be eliminated from such total period of service; or if he is over 65 years of age (unless he is retained in active service as provided in paragraph (d) of this section), or not in active service, on the effective date of this act such annuity shall begin on the date he complies with all the requirements of law to entitle him to such annuity."

With the following Committee amendments:

Page 2, line 10, after the word "Minister", insert "or a person appointed to a position in the Department of State after serving as Ambassador, Minister, or Foreign Service officer."

Page 2, line 17, after the word "Minister", insert "or a person appointed to a position in the Department of State after serving as Ambassador, Minister, or Foreign Service officer."

Page 3, line 3, after the word "Minister", insert "or a person appointed to a position in the Department of State after serving as Ambassador, Minister, or Foreign Service officer."

Page 3, line 9, after the word "Minister", insert "or a person appointed to a position in the Department of State after serving as Ambassador, Minister, or Foreign Service officer."

The Committee amendments were agreed to.

CLAIMS OF AMERICAN NATIONALS AGAINST THE GOVERNMENT OF THE UNION OF SOVIET SOCIALIST REPUBLICS

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Speaker, I call up the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 315) to provide for the adjudication by a commissioner of claims of American nationals against the Government of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, and ask unanimous consent that the joint resolution be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The Clerk read the title of the joint resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the joint resolution as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the President be, and he is hereby, authorized to appoint a Commissioner learned in the law to determine the validity and amounts of the claims of American nationals against the Government of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and to fill any vacancy in the same manner that the original appointment was made.

SEC. 2. The salary of the Commissioner shall be at the rate of $9,000 a year. He shall have a secretary and such additional legal, clerical, and other assistants as may be approved and appointed by the Secretary of State, and at such rates of compensation as may be fixed by him within the limits of appropriated funds. Such persons may be appointed without reference to civil-service laws and rules or the Classification Act of 1923, as amended.

SEC. 3. The Commissioner shall be allowed the necessary actual expenses of office rent, furniture, stationery, books, printing, travel expenses when on official business outside the city of Washington, and other incidental expenses which he may certify as necessary and which shall be approved by the Secretary of State.

SEC. 4. Before entering upon his duties the Commissioner shall take a solemn oath faithfully and impartially to examine the claims and to give his decisions in accordance with his best judgment and such principles of law as may be applicable. The decisions of the Commissioner shall be in writing and shall be final and conclusive as to the merits of all cases decided. No claim within the Commissioner's jurisdiction which shall not have been presented to him within 12 months from the date he enters upon the duties of his office shall be considered by him.

SEC. 5. (a) The Commissioner shall perform his duties in the city of Washington beginning within a period of 15 days from the date of his appointment. He shall as soon as practicable make all necessary rules and regulations not inconsistent with this resolution or the laws of the United States governing the method of procedure before him in carrying into effect the provisions of this resolution.

(b) For the purpose of any investigation which, in the opinion of the Commissioner, is necessary for carrying out the provisions of this act, he is empowered to administer oaths and affirmations, subpoena witnesses, take evidence, and require the production of books, papers, or other documents which he considers relevant to any case within his jurisdiction. Any person knowingly and willfully swearing or affirming falsely in any such proceedings shall be deemed guilty of perjury and shall, upon conviction, suffer the punishment provided by the laws of the United States for that offense when committed in its courts of justice.

(c) The attendance of witnesses and the production of documentary evidence may be required from any place in the United States at any designated place of hearing. Any failure to attend as a witness or to testify as a witness or to produce documentary evidence in an appropriate case may be regarded as a contempt of the authority of the Commissioner and shall be punishable in any court of the United States in the same manner as is provided by the laws of the United States for that offense when committed in its courts of justice.

SEC. 6. The work of the Commissioner shall be completed within 2 years from the date on which he undertakes the performance of his duties, at which time the authority vested in him by this resolution shall terminate.

SEC. 7. The Commissioner shall upon the completion of his work submit a written report to the Secretary of State. This report shall include a statement of the expenses of the Commissioner, a list of all claims presented to him, and his decision in each case.

SEC. 8. When the work of the Commissioner is terminated, the records, books, documents, and all property of the United States in the possession of the Commissioner or his staff shall be turned over to the Secretary of State.

SEC. 9. Appropriations are hereby authorized for the purpose of carrying into effect the provisions of this resolution.

SEC. 10. Any and all expenditures made in carrying out this resolution shall be a first charge on any moneys which have been received, or may hereafter be received, in settlement of the claims described in section 1.

Mr. FISH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman from New York kindly explain the bill a little in detail?

Mr. BLOOM. I shall be very pleased to do so. The gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. KEE], who reported the bill, will explain it in detail, but before he does so I wish to state that the total amount of the claims between the United States and the Soviet Government is $827,000,000. The claims of the United States amount to $366,000,000, and the private claims amount to $461,000,000.

This Commission, the life of which would run for 2 years, is merely to decide what the claims amount to and to adjudicate the claims of both sides. Some of these claims go back to 1919. The Soviet Government has been trying to settle these claims of both the United States Government and private citizens of the United States.

All the expenses incurred by the Commission which it is proposed to set up shall be a first charge against any moneys received by the claimants, so having these claims adjudicated will not cost the Government of the United States one penny.

The President and the Secretary of State have sent letters approving of this legislation and are very eager to get these claims out of the way. They believe that within 2 years from the time this Commission is appointed the various claims of private citizens of the United States and of the United States Government against the Soviet Government can be adjudicated.

Mr. FISH. Has the Soviet Government shown any disposition whatever to pay any of these claims?

Mr. BLOOM. I may say that there is a sum of money now in the United States Treasury that has been paid and we have certain assets that have been turned over by the Soviet Government to the Government of the United States. This money now remains in the Treasury of the United States. I do not know what the amount is, but I believe it is a substantial sum.

Mr. FISH. What I wanted to find out is, Will the Soviet Government pay for property they have seized from foreign nationals? Are they willing to do that?

Mr. BLOOM. That is what this Commission is supposed to be for, to find out what the claims are. Up to now they have never been able to determine what the claims really are or whether a claim is a just or a legal one. As the gentleman knows, there has never before been a commission established to determine what are rightful claims and the amount of the claims of our nationals against the Soviet Government. That is the purpose of this Commission. However, there is money in the Treasury today that has been paid over by the Soviet Government. This Commission is to determine the claims against not only the Soviet Government but previous governments.

Mr. FISH. And it is recommended by both the President and the Secretary of State?

Mr. BLOOM. That is so.

Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLOOM. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. DONDERO. Are any of these claims for money loaned to Soviet Government by our Government?

Mr. BLOOM. I do not know. That is what this commission is for.

Mr. KEE. If the gentleman will yield, I will answer the inquiry of the gentleman from Michigan.

The claims of our Government against the Soviet Government are supposed to be included in the claims intended to be considered by the commissioner to be appointed under the terms of this resolution.

As has been stated by the acting chairman of our committee, this joint resolution briefly authorizes the appointment of a commissioner, who shall be, as it is expressed in the measure, "learned in the law," to determine the amounts of the claims of American citizens against the Government of Russia, officially known as the Government of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. The salary of the commissioner is to be $9,000 a year. He is authorized to have a secretary and such additional legal and clerical and other assistance as may be approved by the Secretary of State, who is given the authority to fix the rate of compensation for such employees.

The joint resolution provides that the work of this commissioner shall be completed within 2 years from the date on which he undertakes the performance of his duties, and that his office shall be terminated at that time. The Secretary of State advises us that there has already been filed with the Department of State a number of claims of individual American citizens against the Soviet Government. The Department of State has been very active for a number of years in an effort to secure from all the citizens of the United States having claims against the Soviet Government a statement of their claims together with proof of the amount and validity of such claims. However, as suggested by the State Department, it seems that a number of the citizens having these claims are of modest means and have refrained from going to the expense of perfecting their claims without some assurance of having some return from that expense.

In addition, there is at the present time no authority established in this country for the purpose of marshaling all these claims and determining their validity and aggregate amount. The figure given by the acting chairman a moment ago as the total of all these private claims is merely an estimate, because the private claims have not been filed, and it is impossible to estimate accurately just what the total is.

Mr. FISH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KEE. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. FISH. Does the gentleman know whether the Soviet Government proposes to offer as an offset the occupation of Archangel by American troops after the World War?

Mr. KEE. While negotiations have been in process between our Government and the Soviet Government for adjustment of these matters there has been no result from the negotiations except that back in 1933 the Soviet Government transferred to our Government a considerable amount of assets, to be applied upon the claims of our Government against the Soviet Government as well as the claims of our citizens. Part of those assets have been liquidated and covered into the Treasury in a special fund. Part of the assets are still in litigation, but as soon as the litigation is completed and anything collected from the assets, all the receipts will be turned into this same fund.

Mr. FISH. Suppose this commission is appointed, could the commission award money now in the Treasury to pay awards to American nationals under the decisions of the commission?

Mr. KEE. The commission is not given authority by this joint resolution to make payments, but only to determine the amount and validity of the claims. The result will be that when the amount and validity of these claims are determined, it will then be up to Congress to make provision for distribution of this fund equitably between the Government and our citizens, or to prorate the fund among them.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. KEE. I yield.

Mr. TABER. Could the gentleman tell us about how much money will be involved in appropriations out of the Treasury under this bill?

Mr. KEE. It is impossible, except I can tell the gentleman just what it contemplates in the way of employment of personnel; a commissioner at $9,000 a year and a small office force at a rate of salary to be fixed by the Secretary of State, all of which is to terminate at the end of 2 years.

Mr. TABER. Would the gentleman object to a limitation in the bill, limiting the amount, say, to $20,000 a year as the total?

Mr. KEE. Before accepting that, I think the committee would want to have some information from the State Department as to whether that would cover it or not. Twenty thousand dollars probably would not cover it, because the salary of the commissioner for 2 years would be $18,000.

Mr. TABER. I mean $20,000 a year, which ought to take care of all the office force they have. If we do not do this, they will come in here with a very elaborate set-up and have the set-up before they come in and will be all set to go, and our last chance to put on a limitation is right here.

Mr. KEE. I should think that would be a matter to determine when they come to the House for appropriations to meet these expenses.

Mr. BLOOM. If the gentleman will permit, this is simply an effort to collect some money and it does not come out of the Treasury eventually.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman may proceed for 2 additional minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

Mr. KEE. Before yielding further, I would like to answer the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] by the statement that this measure provides that all of the expenses incurred shall be a charge against this fund, and as I understand, we have in the Treasury today, although I cannot give you the exact amount, sufficient funds to meet these expenses.

Mr. DONDERO. The gentleman has answered the question I was about to ask him.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KEE. I yield.

Mr. COCHRAN. It is true, according to your report, that there are assets in the Federal Treasury that have been turned over to the United States Government by the Russian Government in connection with settlement of claims of our Government, but not of our nationals against Russia. You are now proposing to take part of that money that is now in the Treasury of the United States to pay the expenses in connection with an investigation of the claims of American nationals.

Mr. KEE. Oh, no; the expenses of this 2-year job during which this commissioner has to marshal these claims will be taken out of the fund after it is all collected from Russia.

Mr. COCHRAN. Is the gentleman really sincere in his belief that there will be a day when the Russian Government will pay this?

Mr. KEE. The Secretary of State indicates that negotiations are proceeding and that they are hopeful it will not be long until they will have some indication from the Russian Government, as they intimated in 1933, that they will pay these claims or a part of them.

Mr. COCHRAN. As the gentleman knows, we have had some mixed-claims commissions, so-called, that have gone on for a period of years and we have spent an awful lot of money in determining the claims of our nationals against certain governments, but can the gentleman tell us any instance where such governments have ever paid the claims of our nationals?

Mr. KEE. Oh, yes.

Mr. COCHRAN. Where?

Mr. KEE. We are collecting some money from Mexico now, $500,000 a year, and they have been paying this for 5 years upon a special Mexican Claims Commission award.

Mr. STEFAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KEE. Yes.

Mr. STEFAN. I am very much interested in this bill and I notice the gentleman who is now speaking seems to be the only one who knows very much about it. I notice on my side of the aisle very few Members of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs seem to know very much about the details of this measure. There is nothing in this bill that is a limitation and there is nothing in the bill whatsoever which would assure Members of Congress that any of this money would be returned to us. I do not understand why some mention of this has not come to our Committee on Appropriations, especially those of us who are making appropriations for the State Department where we make appropriations for various commissions. This will come later, I understand, but I would like to see something in this bill that would act as a limitation.

Mr. KEE. You mean a limitation on how long they shall proceed?

Mr. STEFAN. No; there is a limitation in the measure as to the life of the commission, but here you have a bill calling for the employment of a commissioner at $9,000 a year, who will have a secretary, legal assistance, clerical assistance, and any amount of money for travel expense. The gentleman has not yet told us what in his opinion this is really going to cost, and there is nothing in the resolution which would limit the expense or assure us of something definite which would give Congress some assurance that we are going to get some of this money back.

Mr. KEE. Mr. Speaker, that was the question asked by the gentleman from New York [Mr. Fish] just a moment ago. The resolution distinctly puts a limit upon the salary of the commissioner, the office force that he is to have, and the time in which the service is to be completed.

Mr. STEFAN. But that is not a limit upon the money that is to be expended.

Mr. KEE. There is a limit on the time that they are employed, and the gentleman can figure that out as well as I can.

Mr. STEFAN. There is no limit as to the expense, and no assurance to Congress that we will ever get any of this money back. It is merely appointing another commission with all kinds of expense at its disposal. They can travel any place in the United States or all over the world.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from West Virginia has again expired.

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the time be extended for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Speaker, section 10 provides as follows:

Any and all expenditures made in carrying out this resolution shall be a first charge on any moneys which have been received, or may hereafter be received, in settlement of the claims described in section 1.

Of course, it would be impossible to answer the gentleman's question and say what the expenses of this commission will be, because nobody knows what the claims are to be. This is the first time that any commission has ever been set up to settle these claims between the Soviet Government and the Government of the United States, and within 2 years after these claims have been made we can then determine what the amount will be.

Mr. STEFAN. When is the gentleman coming in to make application for the appropriation?

Mr. KEE. I could not tell when we will ask for the appropriation to pay this $9,000 salary and the wages of the office force. I do not think the amount of these claims would have anything to do with the cost of this commission.

Mr. STEFAN. But the gentleman will have to come to the Appropriations Committee to get the appropriation.

Mr. LUTHER A. JOHNSON. The question of the appropriation will be brought before the Committee on Appropriations, and that committee will scrutinize any request very carefully. The appropriation will not be granted unless a good case is made out.

Mr. KEE. That is true. I know that the Committee on Appropriations will scrutinize the matter very closely.

Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLOOM. Yes.

Mr. DONDERO. Would the committee accept an amendment to the effect that any expense on the part of this commission will be paid out of this money? The resolution simply says that the amount will be a charge against the money collected. I suggest that the words "and paid out" be added.

Mr. BLOOM. I do not believe that an amendment of that kind is necessary. If the gentleman thinks it is necessary, I have no objection to it.

Mr. DONDERO. If the language is sufficient, in the judgment of the committee, I do not care to offer it.

Mr. BLOOM. I again quote section 10:

Any and all expenditures made in carrying out this resolution shall be a first charge on any moneys which have been received, or may hereafter be received, in settlement of the claims described in section 1.

Mr. DONDERO. If that language is strong enough to make the payment out of that fund, I would have no objection to it.

Mr. BLOOM. The committee believes it is, but if the gentleman wishes to amend it in the manner suggested, I would be glad to accept the amendment, if he thinks it would make it stronger.

Mr. DONDERO. I suggest that we add to it that it shall not only be made a charge, but shall be paid out.

Mr. BLOOM. It says it shall be a first charge on any moneys which have been received. I do not believe that we can make it any stronger than that. However, I do not object to the amendment.

Mr. STEFAN. I think such an amendment should be in the bill, but I say to the gentleman from New York, the acting chairman of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, that if we have the same experience with Russia in respect to the collection of this money that we have had with other foreign nations, we will get nothing out of this.

Mr. BLOOM. If we do not start to do something to try to get this money and have a commission appointed to find out how much money is owing to the United States Government and to the citizens of the United States and vice versa, we will never get anything. At least let us make the gesture and try to find out how much is coming to us.

Mr. STEFAN. But we should know how much money we will have to pay out for the expense of this commission.

Mr. BLOOM. I do not believe it will be very much.

Mr. STEFAN. I guess it will run over $200,000.

Mr. BLOOM. The Committee on Appropriations will have that in charge when the time comes. I think this is the sensible way of determining how much money is due the citizens of the United States and to the United States Government, so that we can determine and make these claims against that government.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following amendment which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. TABER: Page 4, line 16, after the word "resolution", strike out the period, insert a comma and the following: "not exceeding $20,000 in any year."

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I am hopeful that the committee will accept this amendment. It is designed to limit the expenditures in any 1 year to $20,000. The salary of the commissioner is $9,000. He is entitled to a secretary, legal, clerical, and other assistants which may be approved. If we do not have any limitation on it we will have an elaborate set-up which will run into $75,000 or $100,000 a year. The only way we can put a limitation on these set-ups is by doing it at this time.

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield.

Mr. BLOOM. Of course, I personally believe that $20,000 is not a sufficient sum, but I agree with what the gentleman says, that there should be some limit. If the gentleman would make that $25,000 so as not to hamper the commission in any way, I will be glad to accept it.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to amend my amendment to make it $25,000.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. RAYBURN). Without objection the amendment will be amended as requested.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin: Page 2, line 3, after the word "funds", strike out the remainder of line 3 and all of lines 4 and 5.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I hope that the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Foreign Affairs will accept this amendment. In these days we hear a great deal of talk in favor of the civil-service selective merit system for appointments which are made in the Government service. We have the Ramspeck bill pending, which would cover political spoils-system appointees into civil-service lifetime positions providing said appointees make a grade of 70 in a noncompetitive civil-service examination.

If we favor the merit system, we should act as well as talk about it.

If my amendment is adopted, the new positions created by this bill will not be exempt from the provisions of the civil-service merit system.

I sincerely hope that the chairman will accept this amendment.

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Speaker, I do hope this amendment will not prevail. This commission must do its work within 2 years. It is limited in time. We have now limited the amount to $25,000 a year. We are trying to do something so as to bring about a settlement of these claims. It may be that they would be compelled to have special service—people who are not on the civil-service list. I do not think the hands of the commission should be tied any more than has been done. It is a difficult task for these men to adjudicate or settle claims running up to nearly a billion dollars. You have allowed them $25,000 a year to do this. They have only allowed them 2 years' time within which to do it. I think the commissioner should be entitled to select those people who are especially able and qualified to do this work.

Therefore, I do hope this amendment will not be agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. SCHAFER].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin) there were ayes 48 and noes 56.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present. This is a very important amendment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will count.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw the point of order.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment which is at the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. DONDERO: Page 4, after the comma in line 19, insert "and paid out of any such moneys."

Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Speaker, I do not intend to take the full 5 minutes on this amendment. My only purpose is to make sure that the appointment of this commissioner and whatever personnel he may require shall not be a charge against the taxpayers and Treasury of the United States, and that these moneys shall be paid out of this fund or moneys which may be collected. That is the only purpose of it.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DONDERO. I yield.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Suppose there are no recoveries?

Mr. DONDERO. Then apparently there will be no payment.

I trust the committee will accept this amendment. It is simply to strengthen the language and strengthen the bill in order to not make any charge against the taxpayers of this country, and to be sure that it is paid out of the moneys recovered.

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will recall, with reference to previous commissions of this kind it has cost $100,000 or $200,000 a year. There is no question about how the money is going to be paid out, and that the money is going to come back to the Government.

I think this will probably complicate the bill a great deal, and I hope the gentleman will not insist upon his amendment. We are trying to do a difficult job here for a very few dollars. But $25,000 is asked for this commission. Other commissions doing similar work have cost the Government from $200,000 to $250,000. The gentleman's amendment would complicate things very much.

Mr. DONDERO. I have no desire to complicate the work of the commission. My aim and effort is not to add further to the burden of the taxpayers.

Mr. KEE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DONDERO. I yield to the gentleman from West Virginia.

Mr. KEE. Section 10 of this resolution provides that the expenses of this commission shall be a first charge on the moneys received. Ultimately these expenses will be paid out of that money. Should the gentleman's amendment be adopted, it would require that the Government every month pay the stenographers and other employees of the commission from this special fund. The gentleman will recall that a moment ago I mentioned the fact that Russian moneys had already been placed in a special fund earmarked for this purpose in the banks.

Mr. DONDERO. Does the gentleman think the language in the bill sufficiently broad to permit the Government to reimburse itself out of the fund?

Mr. KEE. Yes, indeed. It was inserted for that purpose.

Mr. BLOOM. That is provided for in the bill.

Mr. DONDERO. The gentleman from New York [Mr. WADSWORTH] has asked a very embarrassing question: In the event there is no recovery, where would the money come from to reimburse the commission.

Mr. BLOOM. The money is in hand now. It would be deducted from that money. It is in existence at the present time.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the amendment for the purpose of asking the chairman of the committee a question.

On the Private Calendar today was a bill commonly called the Russian shoe bill, for the relief of the International Sales Corporation, an outfit that wants to collect nearly $1,000,000 from the United States Government. That bill passed the House and the Senate several years ago and was vetoed by the President. On a record vote in this House only four Members voted to override the President's veto. It came back to the House today not in the form of a direct appropriation from the Treasury, as before, but to refer the case to the Court of Claims to determine whether or not this corporation was entitled to be reimbursed by the Government. I assisted in sending this bill back to the committee today.

The claim grows out of the sale of shoes by this corporation to Russian municipalities. This corporation was doing business in Russia long before the World War. When the value of the Russian ruble fell to nothing, this corporation claimed that it was in possession of a very large amount of rubles paid for shoes that it had sold to the municipalities. It further claims, because the Federal Reserve Board had issued orders to Federal Reserve banks not to accept Russian rubles, the United States Government is responsible for their loss.

What I want to know from the chairman of the Committee on Foreign Affairs is: Does he feel this claim would be one for consideration of this commissioner? I want the information so that if the gentleman says it is such a claim I can use that information if an attempt is made to bring the bill back to the House at a future date. I want to use that as an argument in my effort to keep this bill from passing.

Mr. BLOOM. I cannot, of course, answer the gentleman's question offhand whether that claim would come within the purview of this bill; but I may say to the gentleman that every claim that is made by any citizen of the United States must under this bill have some consideration to find out whether it is a just claim. Should the commission find that it is not a just claim, they would discard it. If it be a just claim, it then goes to the Soviet Government or to the representative of any previous government before the Soviet Government. I hope the gentleman does not expect me to answer offhand whether this claim is permissible under this bill.

Mr. COCHRAN. I express the hope that it will be a claim that will come under the jurisdiction of this commission so we can get rid of it and so the United States Government will not be robbed by a lot of lawyers who have been trying to get about $1,000,000 out of the Treasury for the last 10 years.

Mr. BLOOM. The gentleman is right. That is what this commission is for, to do away with lawyers and find out what the just claims are.

Mr. COCHRAN. In view of what the gentleman says, I will tell the House, when the bill is called up again, that the acting chairman of the Committee on Foreign Affairs thinks it should be considered under the provisions of the bill now before us.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan.

The amendment was rejected.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

INTERNATIONAL STATISTICAL INSTITUTE

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, I call up House Joint Resolution 320, to amend Public Resolution No. 46, approved August 9, 1935, entitled "Joint resolution requesting the President to extend to the International Statistical Institute an invitation to hold its twenty-fourth session in the United States in 1939," and ask unanimous consent that it be considered in the House as in the Committee of the Whole.

The Clerk read the joint resolution as follows:

Resolved, etc., That Public Resolution No. 46, approved August 9, 1935, entitled "Joint resolution requesting the President to extend to the International Statistical Institute an invitation to hold its twenty-fourth session in the United States in 1939" be amended as follows:

After the word "hereby", insert the words "authorized and."

After the word "its", strike out the word "twenty-fourth" and insert the word "twenty-fifth."

After the word "year", strike out the figures "1939" and insert the following: "1940; and to invite foreign governments to be represented by delegates at that session."

"Sec. 2. That the sum of $5,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the expenses of participation by the Government of the United States in the meeting of the International Statistical Institute to be held in the United States in 1940, including personal services in the District of Columbia and elsewhere, without regard to the civil-service laws and the Classification Act of 1923, as amended; communication services; stenographic, translating, and other services by contract if deemed necessary, without regard to section 3709 of the Revised Statutes (41 U. S. C. 5); travel expenses; hire of motor-propelled passenger-carrying vehicles; transportation of things; rental of necessary equipment; entertainment; and such other expenses as may be actually and necessarily incurred by the Government of the United States by reason of observance of appropriate courtesies in connection therewith under the authorization of the Secretary of State, including the reimbursement of other appropriations from which payments may have been made for any of the purposes herein specified."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

The resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

SAN DIEGO-CABRILLO QUADRICENTENNIAL

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, I call up Senate Joint Resolution 124, authorizing the President to invite foreign countries to participate in the San Diego-Cabrillo Quadricentennial Celebration, to be held in 1942.

The Clerk read the joint resolution as follows:

Be it resolved, etc., That the President is authorized to invite by proclamation, or in such other manner as he may deem proper, foreign countries to send naval (or merchant) vessels to San Diego, California, to participate in the San Diego-Cabrillo Quadricentennial Celebration, to be held in 1942, in commemoration of the discovery of California and the west coast of the United States by Juan Rodriguez Cabrillo, a native of Portugal, who, while in the service of the King of Spain, entered San Diego Harbor on September 28, 1542.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. This bill is on the House Calendar.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLOOM. I shall be pleased to yield.

Mr. RICH. At the present time a fair is being held in California, the Treasure Island Fair. I understand Congress is to be asked for an additional $600,000 contribution to this fair, an amount in addition to what Congress contributed several years ago.

They are going to ask for another fair to be held in San Diego.

Mr. BLOOM. This is a special exposition. It is not a fair.

Mr. RICH. What is the difference between an exposition and a fair?

Mr. BLOOM. This is celebrating a special event. This is not for an industrial exposition or fair. It is in celebration of a special event. This calls for participation in an event commemorating the discovery of California and the west coast.

Mr. RICH. California—where is that?

Mr. BLOOM. Can the gentleman from New York [Mr. FISH] tell us where it is? The gentleman from California [Mr. Izac] is sponsor of this bill.

Mr. RICH. I would like to have that question explained.

Mr. IZAC. I may say to the gentleman from Pennsylvania that several years before the Mayflower came to the east coast of the United States a gentleman by the name of Juan Rodriguez Cabrillo sailed around the Horn and came up into the Pacific Ocean and discovered land east of the Pacific Ocean. We on the west coast claim that from that day the history of California begins. That applies not only to California but to the whole west coast of the United States. It was discovered for the first time by a white man. And in commemoration of that we will celebrate 3 years from now the four hundredth anniversary of that discovery—the greatest, we think, that was ever made.

Mr. RICH. Let me ask the gentleman what it is going to cost the Federal Government to help the State of California celebrate this great exposition, since we know where it is now.

Mr. IZAC. It should not cost anything at all, because we are merely inviting foreign nations to send men-of-war or merchant vessels around to congregate there, celebrate the original discovery, and go through the motion of discovering California again.

Mr. RICH. Will the gentleman assure us he is not going to ask for any funds from the Federal Government for the celebration if we permit this bill to pass?

Mr. IZAC. That is a rather embarrassing question. At the present time there is no intention to ask for any funds for the participation.

Mr. RICH. At the present time you are not asking; but after a resolution of this kind goes through, the promoters of that resolution come back and ask us for funds to carry on the fair or exposition.

Mr. IZAC. The cost of this will be very small.

Mr. RICH. What does the gentleman mean by "small"?

Mr. IZAC. A million dollars or so.

Mr. RICH. A million dollars, small? Where are you going to get the money?

Mr. IZAC. That is only a celebration. It is not an exposition or fair of any kind. I am sure it will cost the Federal Government little, if anything.

Mr. RICH. The gentleman means a million dollars?

Mr. IZAC. I was being facetious, I may say to the gentleman.

Mr. RICH. If California is going to have this celebration and it will cost the Federal Government a million dollars, I think the chairman of the Committee on Foreign Affairs should be careful about bills and proposals of this kind which are being brought in here. All we have had during the past 6 years is bill after bill after bill calling for fairs. The statement has been made that they will not cost anything, but according to my knowledge the bills that have been brought in have been for a small amount, as the gentleman says, a million dollars at the minimum. May I say that a million dollars to me seems like a mountain. Where are you going to get all this money? You on that side have been spending and spending. You have brought in bill after bill after bill, and all you think about is how to spend the taxpayers' money. The way you are doing you will ruin America and not honor it by a celebration of an event like this. I think it is time for the New Deal to stop bringing in a lot of bills of this kind that are cluttering up our calendar.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

RELIEF OF THE SUFFERERS FROM THE EARTHQUAKE IN CHILE

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Speaker, I call up the bill (H. R. 5031) for the relief of the sufferers from the earthquake in Chile, and ask unanimous consent that this bill may be considered in the House as in the Committee of the Whole.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York [Mr. BLOOM]?

Mr. FISH. Mr. Speaker, I think it would be better if we went into committee on this bill.

Mr. BLOOM. If the gentleman thinks so, we can do that.

Mr. FISH. I would like a little time, and, Mr. Speaker, I object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The House automatically resolves itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill H. R. 5031, with Mr. ZIMMERMAN in the Chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The first reading of the bill was dispensed with.

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Chairman, may I ask the gentleman from New York if we can make an agreement on allowing less time for general debate than the 2 hours allowed under the rule? I do not believe the consideration of this bill will take much time.

Mr. FISH. I would suggest 20 minutes on a side.

Mr. BLOOM. I agree to that.

Mr. Chairman, this is a bill appropriating $500,000 for the relief of the sufferers from the earthquake in Chile. According to the report, every other nation in the Western Hemisphere contributed very largely to the sufferers from this Chilean earthquake. The $500,000 provided in this bill is to be expended as follows:

That the President is hereby authorized, through such agency or agencies as he may designate, to purchase in the United States and transport and distribute or make available for rehabilitation and relief in the earthquake area in Chile such materials, equipment, and supplies as he may determine to be needed. The President is hereby authorized to expend or cause to be expended, out of the funds of the United States Treasury not otherwise appropriated, a sum not exceeding $500,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this act.

This is not an appropriation direct to the Chilean Government or to any other organization.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLOOM. I shall be pleased to yield.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. I thought it was understood that we would not consider controversial bills today. I cannot imagine that the gentleman would without a quorum present call up a bill appropriating a half million dollars as a hand-out to a foreign country, in view of the almost bankrupt condition of our Federal Treasury. I sincerely hope the gentleman will withdraw his request for consideration of this highly controversial bill so that we may keep faith with Members who thought we would not have any controversial legislation considered this afternoon.

Mr. BLOOM. I do not know whether the gentleman was on the floor when I was asked previously what bills I was going to call up, but I may say that I have put aside several bills that I know are highly controversial. I took this matter up with the ranking minority member of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, the gentleman from New York [Mr. FISH], and also with the minority leader. I hope the gentleman does not believe I have done anything that is contrary to my original thought of not bringing up any highly controversial bill.

This bill, Mr. Chairman, merely deals with something I believe a majority of the Members think should be done. The bill calls for the expenditure of $500,000 on building materials to be sent to Chile to be used by the sufferers from the earthquake to build homes for themselves. This is not an outright gift. All the other countries in the Western Hemisphere have contributed handsomely to these sufferers in Chile, and I believe the United States should do something for them. Our neighbors to the south of us have been very friendly. We have friendly relations with all of them. This bill has the approval of the President of the United States and the State Department. The money is to be expended in this country.

The money stays here. I sincerely believe this bill should have favorable consideration, and I hope the gentleman does not believe I have done anything I should not have done as acting chairman of this committee in calling up this bill at this time.

By the way, all this material is to be sent from this country to Chile free of any cost or charges by the various steamship companies which serve that part of the world.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLOOM. I shall be pleased to yield.

Mr. RICH. Is this to be given to them in the form of commodities or in cash, so they can buy commodities?

Mr. BLOOM. No; this is to be given in commodities. The Government buys the building materials that are necessary in that part of that country and the materials are then sent to Chile, not the money. The money stays in this country. Not one dollar of this $500,000 is to be spent out of this country. The building materials, whatever may be necessary to build these homes, are the only things the Chileans get. The money is spent in this country. Not one dollar of it goes for any other claim, not even for the payment of freight from the United States to Chile.

Mr. RICH. Where will you get the $500,000 to buy the material?

Mr. BLOOM. From money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

Mr. RICH. There is nothing in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

Mr. BLOOM. I may say to the gentleman from Pennsylvania there will be a lot by that time. A lot of money is going to be paid in.

Mr. CHIPERFIELD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLOOM. I shall be pleased to yield.

Mr. CHIPERFIELD. What was the date of that earthquake?

Mr. BLOOM. January 24.

Mr. CHIPERFIELD. Does not the gentleman believe it is very late now to do anything?

Mr. BLOOM. No; I do not believe it is too late now. Further, I may say to the gentleman, as he knows, we tried to bring this matter up on the floor on several occasions on the Consent Calendar. The bill was reported in April, I may say to the gentleman.

Mr. THORKELOSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLOOM. I shall be pleased to yield.

Mr. THORKELOSON. Does not the gentleman believe we are extending this good-neighbor policy too far? I understand the Chilean Government is now going to expel all American interests from Chile, even the copper companies. Why should we put ourselves out and provide material for them when they are going to take our property away from us?

Mr. BLOOM. I doubt if any Member of this House believes we can extend the good-neighbor policy too far. I do not believe there is any distance to the good-neighbor policy, not only as it applies to the Chileans but to all the peoples of the world if there is affliction anywhere. The United States has always shown its good-fellowship and friendliness to everyone.

Mr. THORKE. Yes; but does not the gentleman believe it is a good idea to extend that policy to our own people?

Mr. BLOOM. I believe, with the gentleman, that we should extend it to our own people, but at the same time we should not forget our neighbors.

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLOOM. I shall be pleased to yield.

Mr. COOLEY. The gentleman made the statement that this bill does not provide for an outright gift. Did the gentleman mean by that statement that it is not an outright gift of money, but is the appropriation of money with which to buy materials which will be given outright?

Mr. BLOOM. Yes; that is true. The materials are to be contributed to the sufferers in Chile, but the money is to be spent here. The materials are to go to Chile free. There is no question about that.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. FISH. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 10 minutes.

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Chairman, may I inquire how much time I have remaining?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York has 8 minutes remaining.

Mr. FISH. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 5 minutes of my time out of order.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. FISH. Mr. Chairman—

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, we are only to have 20 minutes on this bill, which proposes to spend $500,000 of the taxpayers' money. When the people of this country are suffering from taxation we certainly ought to give a little more than 20 minutes of consideration to a matter involving that amount of money.

Mr. FISH. I am going to oppose the bill, I may say to the gentleman.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman's objection comes entirely too late. The gentleman from New York is recognized.

Mr. FISH. Mr. Chairman, I have asked for this time as this is the first opportunity I have had to make a statement as to why I voted for the Bloom bill on final passage.

In the consideration of the Bloom bill I stated on the floor that if section 3 were stricken out and the Verys arms embargo amendment was adopted I would vote for it as a compromise measure, and in order to keep my word I reluctantly voted for the final passage of the bill, although I much prefer the existing neutrality law to the Bloom bill as amended, and I am as much opposed to the Bloom bill in its original form, as reported to the House and before amendment, as I have ever been.

President Roosevelt has been releasing columns to the press as to what he proposed to do to force the unneutral Bloom bill through Congress in its original form. The Bloom bill, with its attempt to wipe out the arms embargo and entangle us in the eternal wars of Europe, is a dead cock in the pit. The American people have expressed to Congress their opposition to this interventionist and war-making proposal. They will have none of it, and are opposed to the sale and export of arms and ammunition to warring nations as being the first step toward sending our youth to be slaughtered on the battlefields of Europe.

The American people do not trust President Roosevelt on account of his interventionist views, and do not agree with him that our participation in another World War is a "virtual certainty." The Congress is determined to exert its constitutional prerogative to keep America out of foreign wars unless we are attacked.

The continued pressure on the Congress by the President to obtain greater interventionist powers to police and quarantine the world with American blood and treasure will have no more effect on the Senate than it did on the House of Representatives. The Congress does not propose to permit President Roosevelt to usurp its constitutional power to declare war by entering into entangling alliances with any group of nations.

The American people went to war once to oust the Kaiser and opened the way for Hitler, and are not disposed to send our soldiers to throw out Hitler and establish communism in Germany, Italy, and all of Europe.

If we must go to war, let it be in defense of America, but not in defense of the munitions makers, war profiteers, Communists, to cover up the failures of the New Deal, or to provide an alibi for a third term.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FISH. I yield.

Mr. RICH. May I ask the gentleman who is the author of this bill to give $500,000 worth of supplies to Chile? Who made the request?

Mr. FISH. I will tell the gentleman the whole story. I put in the first bill soon after the earthquake in Chile, one of the most disastrous earthquakes in the history of the world. My bill provided for an appropriation to purchase foodstuffs and medical supplies for the victims of this disaster, which I think would have been a very wonderful gesture some 6 months ago when the earthquake occurred. I was unable to get a hearing on the bill and then, later on, the gentleman from New York [Mr. Bloom] put in this bill. I am opposed to this bill because the emergency of the disaster has passed and it is no longer necessary to provide foodstuffs, medical supplies, or clothing to the earthquake victims in Chile.

I am opposed to the principle involved in this bill, because it establishes an entirely new precedent. These relief measures are emergency measures, to help the destitute and the needy and the sufferers from acts of God. We have done this before repeatedly. We did it in Japan, in Italy, and in other countries, but this bill, as it was introduced and as it now comes before you, provides $500,000 to build houses, to provide concrete or steel or whatever may be necessary to build houses in Chile.

I think this is a wrong precedent to establish. This can no longer be considered as an emergency measure and for immediate relief of sufferers from the earthquake. Building new permanent homes for them is not emergency relief for sufferers from earthquakes.

Chile is a great country, and being a Pan-American I want to trade with Chile and I would, in such an emergency, vote for a bill to provide medical supplies, foodstuffs, and clothing. But I will not support this bill.

Another reason I do not intend to vote for this bill is the fact that Chile has repudiated $200,000,000 of bonds she has sold the American people. She is not paying us 1 cent of interest on those $200,000,000 worth of bonds. Instead of paying interest on them, she is buying up the bonds herself at $10, or 10 cents on the dollar, at the expense of American investors; and it seems to me, in view of that situation, and the fact that we will have established a most unfortunate precedent which will plague us in the future, we should not pass this legislation. We should have acted at the time of the emergency. A stitch in time saves nine. It was an emergency, and it would have been a fine gesture of good will. Other nations in South America did the same thing, but they did it at the time; and I beg of the House now not to establish such a precedent, 6 months after the emergency has passed, not giving them food, medical supplies, and clothing, but housing material, steel, concrete, and so forth, to build houses for the future. If we are to build houses, let us build houses in the United States of America for our own citizens. [Applause.]

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FISH. Yes.

Mr. RICH. Did not the American Red Cross at the time of this disaster send medical supplies there to assist Chile?

Mr. FISH. Yes; they sent a number of airplane loads of medical supplies, which were very much needed at the time. Of course, food and clothing and medical supplies were needed, but they are no longer required. If we had acted at the time it would have been a fine gesture on our part, but I think this will be very unfortunate now.

Miss SUMNER of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FISH. Certainly.

Miss SUMNER of Illinois. Does the gentleman know that 3 weeks ago we had a hurricane in Indiana and Illinois, which Members probably read of and saw pictures of in the news reels, and that when requests came through for help to the department here we were told that there was no provision under our law to build up the houses that were torn down in that hurricane area in this country?

Mr. FISH. Mr. Chairman, that is a very logical and strong reason why we should not build houses 5,000 miles away when we ought to be building them back home.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FISH. Yes.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I might say that the administration took the same attitude when the hurricane occurred in New England.

Mr. FISH. Mr. Chairman, am I in control of the time?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York has control of the time.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. CARTER. Would a motion that the Committee do now rise and report the bill back to the House with the recommendation that the enacting clause be stricken out be in order at this time, or must we wait until debate closes?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair rules that the motion is not in order at this time.

Mr. FISH. Mr. Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. STEFAN].

Mr. STEFAN. Mr. Chairman, I am opposed to this bill for the reason that the emergency has passed. This hurricane took place on January 24 last, at which time American Army planes, by direction of the President, flew at the first possible moment to Chile, carrying urgently needed medicines and medical supplies. The American Red Cross did considerable work there, and in addition to that made a cash contribution to the Chilean Red Cross, and appealed for further donations on the part of the American people, who I am informed, sent considerable money to Chile. In addition to that, the American people doing business in Chile contributed considerable money and supplies and did considerable relief work there. If gentlemen will take the report and look on page 2 they will find that this half million dollars is to be used for the purpose of building permanent homes in Chile. The report itself tells that. We have 10,000,000 people out of jobs in America. We have our slums. You heard a little while ago one of your colleagues tell you that aid was refused in our own country, in two States, where we had hurricanes and storms and where houses were destroyed. In my own district some of my own people need permanent homes, and I feel that during the Chilean emergency America and the American people and the American Red Cross matched what some other countries had done to help the Chilean people when the help was actually needed. There is no evidence here that Chile is asking for this money.

Now that the emergency has passed, we are asked to go a little further with this good-neighbor policy by dipping into the people's Treasury to the tune of half a million dollars to send materials into a foreign country to build permanent homes at a time when our own people need homes.

Now, this foreign policy of ours is a good policy up to a certain point. I am not opposed to all of it. I am not going to take the floor today and say anything derogatory about Chile and what she has done about defaulting of millions of dollars worth of her bonds, held by Americans, but I want to call attention to the report on page 2, where it is stated that the additional aid which could now be furnished under the authority of this bill would not only be a form of aid which may properly be extended to a friendly nation and to a neighbor in distress, but that this assistance would likewise strengthen even more the very close ties which unite the two countries.

Now, let us be fair about this. Let us be sane. Let us be fair to the American taxpayers. We want to be friends. We are going to do business with our South American neighbors, but in my personal opinion this goes too far. It means that we go into permanent home building in a foreign country.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. FISH. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 1 additional minute.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STEFAN. I yield.

Mr. CURTIS. I want to make one observation in connection with the help needed for homes in this country. In my district we had a flood which occurred in 1935, which swept away people's homes and buildings and ruined their farms. At least 110 people were drowned. That valley has not been taken care of yet. I am opposed to this bill, for the spending of huge sums to rehabilitate the country of Chile, when we have portions of our own country that have been neglected as the Republican valley in Nebraska has.

Mr. STEFAN. Of course the gentleman is right. There are delegations from my own district here today who say they cannot get money to save their homes. They are losing them by foreclosures. There are Indians in my district who live in homes where three or four families live in one little house. We cannot get the money to build permanent homes for our own people. I wish I had time to tell you what is happening to the farmers in my district who are forced off their farms.

Mr. Chairman, this sort of good neighborhood policy business is going too far. Here we have a bill asking that we spend half a million dollars of taxpayers' money to build permanent homes for people in Chile. You will recall that we stopped an effort only recently to spend many thousands of dollars to translate all kinds of agriculture books and other pamphlets into foreign languages and send them broadcast into Latin America to teach the farmers down there how to grow more beef, more corn, more wheat, more cotton, and other farm commodities which come to our country to compete in the market which belongs to our own farmers. In this bill we go further in spending money than what we do for our own people. Do not forget that every penny of this money will have to be borrowed and American taxpayers will have to pay this money sometime. We American people are not heartless. We feel sorry and we do help our neighbors when they are in distress. This earthquake occurred 6 months ago. The report itself says that they do not need anything in the way of emergency help. The report says that they now have plenty of food, clothing, medicine, and supplies. You know that in Chile the climate is temperate. It does not get as cold as it does in Nebraska. What the bill really asks is that we take this money and build permanent homes for the people in Chile. We have already sent money there. We have sent medicine, food, and supplies, and the American Red Cross has sent money and other necessary things. Private people in America have given money. Our own Government has sent supplies. Why are we now suddenly asked to do permanent building work down there? Is it because somebody feels that it would make Chile feel more friendly toward us? I think those people appreciate what we have already done. That was not begrudged by us. I think this is overdoing it and is not necessary, especially at a time when we need this money ourselves. I am sincere in telling you that today—at this very moment—I am being called upon by a delegation of Winnebago Indians who live in my district. They are headed by Mr. Frank Beaver, who is chairman of the Winnebago tribal council. These people tell me of the bad conditions under which some of our own people must live. They do not have enough houses. Their wells are dry and they need water and many other things which we deny them. They are American citizens. Other people in my district would be glad if this Government would build them a permanent home. When we consider that we have already done much for the people of Chile in a time of distress we should consider the distress of our own people and begin permanent charity at home. There must be a limit to these expenditures which I feel are not absolutely necessary. I hope the chairman of the committee will withdraw this bill. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Chairman, I move that the Committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker pro tempore [Mr. RAYBURN] having resumed the chair, Mr. ZIMMERMAN, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill H. R. 5031, had come to no resolution thereon.

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill H. R. 5031 be withdrawn from the calendar of bills for consideration at this time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

FOUR HUNDREDTH ANNIVERSARY OF THE EXPLORATIONS OF FRANCISCO VASQUEZ DE CORONADO

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Speaker, I call up the bill (H. R. 6852) authorizing Federal participation in the commemoration and observance of the four hundredth anniversary of the explorations of Francisco Vasquez de Coronado, establishing a commission for that purpose, and authorizing an appropriation therefor, and I ask unanimous consent that the same may be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Speaker, I ask that Senate bill 2197, an identical bill, be considered in lieu of the bill H. R. 6852.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. This bill is on the Union Calendar. The House automatically resolves itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill H. R. 6852, with Mr. Lewis of Colorado in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the first reading of the bill will be dispensed with.

Mr. BLOOM. Would it be possible to agree upon time with reference to this matter?

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, there will be objection unless I can have the gentleman answer a question.

Mr. BLOOM. You can ask all the questions you want.

Mr. RICH. I want to know what the object of this Committee on Foreign Affairs is, in bringing in all these bills for the expenditure of additional funds?

Mr. BLOOM. Is that a parliamentary question?

Mr. RICH. With reference to this bill you are asking for $250,000 to take care of this celebration.

Mr. LUTHER A. JOHNSON. Mr. Chairman, the regular order.

Mr. SCHIFFLER. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that there can be no agreement as to time.

Mr. BLOOM. We just agreed upon time on the other bill.

Mr. SCHIFFLER. I beg to differ with the gentleman. My understanding was that we were to take the time allowed by the rule, and we might terminate that in less time if the speakers did not want the time.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman is entitled to an hour and the gentleman from New York [Mr. Bloom] is entitled to an hour.

Mr. BLOOM. I understand that. The gentleman is entitled to an hour and I am entitled to an hour, but I am asking the gentleman if we cannot agree on less time so we can get through with this bill. If the gentleman desires to use his full hour, then he does not want to agree on time. That is up to him.

Mr. SCHIFFLER. But we cannot agree at this time.

Mr. DOWELL. Mr. Chairman, that agreement should have been made in the House instead of in Committee of the Whole. We are now under the rule. That is a rule of the House and the time should have been fixed in the House before the House went into Committee.

The CHAIRMAN. The Committee can limit time by unanimous consent if it so desires.

Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

Mr. HOOK. Mr. Chairman, I object.

The CHAIRMAN. Objection is heard. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby established a commission, to be known as the United States Coronado Exposition Commission (hereinafter referred to as the Commission), to be composed of the Vice President of the United States, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, the Secretary of the Interior, the Secretary of Agriculture, and the Secretary of Commerce; which Commission shall serve without additional compensation and shall represent the United States in connection with the holding of an exposition and celebration during the observance and commemoration of the four hundredth anniversary of the exploration of the States of New Mexico, Arizona, Colorado, Texas, Oklahoma, and Kansas by Francisco Vasquez de Coronado.

SEC. 2. The heads of the various executive departments and independent offices and establishments of the Government are authorized to cooperate with the Commission in the procurement, installation, and display of exhibits, and to lend to the Commission and to the Coronado Cuarto Centennial Commission, established by an act of the Legislature of the State of New Mexico, for exhibition during the period of such observance and commemoration such articles, materials, documents, specimens, exhibits, or papers in the possession of the Government which the Commission shall deem to be in the interest of the United States and in keeping with the purposes of such commemoration and observance and which relate to the exploration of such States, or illustrate the function and administrative faculty of the Government in the advancement of industry, science, invention, agriculture, the arts, and peace, or demonstrate the nature of our institutions, particularly with regard to their adaptation to the needs of the people. Any such articles, materials, documents, specimens, exhibits, or papers so lent shall be lent only under such conditions as will assure their return in good condition and without expense to the Government.

SEC. 3. The Commission is authorized and directed to prepare, print, bind, and distribute a pamphlet on the explorations of Francisco Vasquez de Coronado, and for such purpose is authorized to have printing, binding, photolithography, and other work done at establishments other than the Government Printing Office.

SEC. 4. The Commission is authorized to procure advice and assistance from any governmental agency and to procure advice and assistance from and cooperate with individuals and agencies, public or private. The Commission is authorized to accept and utilize voluntary and uncompensated services of any person and, without additional compensation, the services of such experts, consultants, research assistants, clerks, and stenographers as may be detailed by the heads of the various executive departments and establishments of the Government for the purpose of assisting the Commission to carry out the provisions of this act.

SEC. 5. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated the sum of $250,000 for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this act, and such sum when appropriated shall remain available until expended. Subject to the provisions of this act and any subsequent act appropriating the money authorized herein, the Commission is authorized to make any expenditures or allotments deemed necessary by it to fulfill properly the purposes of this act and to allocate such sums to the said Coronado Cuarto Centennial Commission for expenditure as the Commission deems necessary and proper in carrying out the purposes of this act for (1) the erection of monuments; (2) the erection and enlargement of museum facilities for the housing of historical and anthropological material and material illustrative of the native arts and crafts of such States; (3) the preparation and publication of historical pamphlets; (4) aiding in defraying the expenses of National, State, and local programs in celebration of such anniversary; and (5) aiding in defraying any other expenses incurred in properly observing and commemorating such anniversary.

All amounts and vouchers covering expenditures shall be approved by such person as the Commission may designate, but this provision shall not be construed to waive the submission of accounts and vouchers to the General Accounting Office for audit, nor to permit any obligations to be incurred in excess of the amount authorized to be appropriated herein. In the construction of buildings and exhibits requiring skilled and unskilled labor, the prevailing rate of wages, as provided in the act of March 3, 1931, shall be paid.

Sec. 6. The Commission shall transmit to Congress on or before January 3, 1941, a detailed statement of the manner of expenditure of any funds appropriated pursuant to the authorization contained in this act.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New Mexico [Mr. DEMPSEY].

Mr. DEMPSEY. Mr. Chairman, this bill provides for Federal participation in the four hundredth anniversary of the expedition of Coronado into Arizona, New Mexico, and the Panhandle of Texas and Kansas. Of all the brilliant and heroic exploits of human history few surpass this unique expedition in its thrilling human interest. Likewise, the results which flowed from this opening up of the northern borderlands of New Spain to Spanish settlement and culture was of great historical moment. This exposition, then, in its full significance, will probably be considered one of the most important ever held on these shores, for Coronado's expedition brought to that part of the world, which is now the southwestern corner of the United States, the first horse, the first cow, and the first sheep. It brought something greater than all that; it brought Christianity to our Southwest. The soldiers of the Cross achieved greater results than did the soldiers of the King.

This bill has the approval of the Director of the Budget; it has the strong endorsement of the Secretary of State. It was reported unanimously by the Foreign Affairs Committee of the House and received the unanimous approval of the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate, and passed that body by unanimous consent. I cannot conceive any opposition to an exposition celebrating the four hundredth anniversary of an event as important as this. The historical significance in itself would justify the very small appropriation we are asking the Federal Government to contribute. The South American countries have been invited to participate and have accepted.

Mr. PARSONS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DEMPSEY. I yield.

Mr. PARSONS. Is not this the second four hundredth-anniversary celebration, preceded only by the Columbian Exposition in Chicago in 1893?

Mr. DEMPSEY. The gentleman is correct. This exposition is naturally second in point of time and otherwise is second only in importance to that of Columbus.

Mr. LUTHER A. JOHNSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DEMPSEY. I yield.

Mr. LUTHER A. JOHNSON. This is not to be a fair or an exposition; it is merely a celebration of this great historic event; and the total amount the Federal Government is to appropriate, as I understand, is $250,000. How much has the State of New Mexico appropriated for this purpose?

Mr. DEMPSEY. As the gentleman from Texas states, this is not an affair that is to be commercialized. There will be no side shows, or things of that kind. We are marking the trail that Coronado and his followers traversed, marking it by monuments. We are building a small building to house certain relics. There will be pageants and other events of educational value.

Mr. CHIPERFIELD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DEMPSEY. I yield.

Mr. CHIPERFIELD. Is this the same celebration to which the gentleman from California [Mr. IZAC] referred a few moments ago?

Mr. DEMPSEY. Not at all; it is quite different.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DEMPSEY. I yield.

Mr. RICH. The gentleman from New Mexico was asked how much money the State of New Mexico had already appropriated for this purpose.

Mr. DEMPSEY. I am very happy the gentleman asked me that question.

Mr. RICH. Will the gentleman tell me about that?

Mr. DEMPSEY. Yes. At the session of our legislature in January the question of appropriation for this event came up. It is largely a matter of building roads and trails. The State Legislature of New Mexico appropriated $6,000,000 to build roads and trails, not all of which will be used in connection with this, but whatever amount is necessary to be used will be used.

Mr. RICH. What is the significance of building roads and trails for the celebration?

Mr. DEMPSEY. The gentleman should keep in mind that it is quite significant to us who appreciate the great good done by this expedition to know of the route traveled and to mark that very historic trail for all time to come. To us it means a great deal. I do not know what it means to the gentleman from Pennsylvania, but even when I lived in Pennsylvania myself it meant something to me.

Mr. RICH. If the gentleman will yield for a further question, how much money is being spent by the C. C. C. camps in the State of New Mexico to build roads and trails, and what part of that is applicable to this exposition?

Mr. DEMPSEY. None of it. When the gentleman talks about C. C. C. camps in the State of New Mexico I would remind him that the Federal Government owns 55 percent of all the acreage of the entire State of New Mexico. Were I the owner of property I would certainly do something to improve it. The Federal Government is not doing anything to improve the land it owns in New Mexico but the carrying out of this plan will certainly do so.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. DEMPSEY. I shall be very happy to yield.

Mr. RICH. Suppose we give all that land back to the State of New Mexico so they will own it; would not that be the best thing the Federal Government could do?

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 additional minutes to the gentleman from New Mexico.

Mr. DEMPSEY. We would be very happy if that were done, because we have very valuable oil lands in New Mexico owned by the Federal Government. The royalty from these oil lands goes to the Federal Government. We have forestry and grazing lands all owned by the Federal Government. While the Federal Government participates to some extent in the building of roads in New Mexico, as it does in other States, the burden of maintaining the roads in the State devolves upon 45 percent of the total acreage.

What we are asking, I may say to the gentleman from Pennsylvania, is not in any sense charity. I should think this House would be happy and proud to have the United States contribute to such an undertaking as this.

Mr. RICH. If the gentleman refers to the State of New Mexico, and the interests of the Federal Government in the State, the Federal Government contributed $5,000,000 to continue and make worth while a project started by the President of the United States out of W. P. A. funds. It seems to me we are doing pretty well by New Mexico.

Mr. DEMPSEY. I am sorry the gentleman brings up such questions in connection with this bill. We are discussing an entirely different proposition. Any Member who thinks this important historic event should not be celebrated should vote against this bill, but I cannot conceive such a thing. So long as I am a Member of the House, irrespective of where the event may be, I shall vote for the Federal Government to participate in such celebrations.

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DEMPSEY. I yield.

Mr. HOPE. May I say to the gentleman that there are other States besides New Mexico interested in this celebration, because the route of Coronado traversed six States in all, as I understand it? May I ask the gentleman whether it is his understanding that under the provisions of the pending bill some of the money might be spent in other States which are on the route traversed by Coronado in his exploration?

Mr. DEMPSEY. That is my understanding. I may say to the gentleman that there is a representative on this Commission from the gentleman's State of Kansas, Mr. Jones. It is also my understanding that the Commission as set up can use this money where and how it sees fit, provided it conforms to the authorization. May I say further that in my experience in the House I have never met anyone who has been more generous to New Mexico than that splendid man from Pennsylvania [Mr. RICH] and I deeply appreciate it. [Applause.]

Mr. HOUSTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DEMPSEY. I yield to the gentleman from Kansas.

Mr. HOUSTON. I may say to the gentleman that I was on a committee that has been very interested in this celebration, which includes the State chambers of commerce, industrial organizations, and so forth. May I say to the gentleman that I expect to support this worthy cause and the only question that occurs to me is whether the $250,000 is enough.

Mr. DEMPSEY. Personally I do not think so, but the Director of the Budget thought it was. I was in the position where I thought I better dicker with him.

Mr. ZIMMERMAN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DEMPSEY. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. ZIMMERMAN. It is my privilege to know something about this great celebration in Arizona, New Mexico, and other States. I know and highly regard several of the leading men back of this move. Is it not one of the greatest educational proposals which has been offered this country for many years?

Mr. DEMPSEY. I think it is. It is rather embarrassing to me to note that there is so little known of the great things that these Spanish explorers have done to advance our country. They deserve credit far beyond that which my use of words can express.

Mr. CURTIS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DEMPSEY. I yield to the gentleman from Nebraska.

Mr. CURTIS. What permanent benefit, if any, will come from the educational standpoint from this commemoration of the journey of Coronado?

Mr. DEMPSEY. There will be this building which will house all these relics. We have the uniforms worn out there by the Spanish explorers going back several hundred years. The monuments will mark the trail and the whole history will be reopened, reviewed, and impressed.

Mr. CURTIS. Will there be any compilation and publications of the valuable records pertaining to this journey?

Mr. DEMPSEY. We have been working for several years to bring up-to-date the literature in order that the people of this continent may be better informed of the importance of that expedition and of the Spanish phase of our American history.

Mr. CURTIS. Part of this money will be used for that purpose?

Mr. DEMPSEY. Yes.

Mr. CURTIS. I am very much interested in this bill. There is good authority for the statement that Coronado reached southwest Nebraska. Such is the conclusion of Mr. Addison E. Sheldon, historian of Lincoln, Nebr., in his book Nebraska, Its Land and People, published in 1931.

Mr. JONES of Texas. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DEMPSEY. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. JONES of Texas. It is my understanding that the idea is to mark out the entire route that Coronado took?

Mr. DEMPSEY. Yes.

Mr. JONES of Texas. During his journey throughout this entire southwestern area?

Mr. DEMPSEY. Yes.

Mr. JONES of Texas. The journey was made before the Pilgrim Fathers landed in America?

Mr. DEMPSEY. A long time before that. This was made in 1540.

Mr. JONES of Texas. And covered practically all the territory in that great southwestern area. It goes back into the early history of that section of the country and brings to life in more vivid form that area, does it not?

Mr. DEMPSEY. Yes. That is the purpose.

Mr. COFFEE of Washington. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DEMPSEY. I yield to the gentleman from Washington.

Mr. COFFEE of Washington. It might be helpful to know what route that great Spaniard, Coronado, covered.

Mr. DEMPSEY. Coronado entered what is now the United States from Mexico in the southeastern part of Arizona. From there he entered the western part of New Mexico and traveled across and located near where Albuquerque now stands, where he made his headquarters for a long time. From there he went over into what is now known as the panhandle of Texas, thence into Kansas and back into Colorado.

Mr. COFFEE of Washington. Did he start from Mexico City?

Mr. DEMPSEY. From Mexico City; yes.

Mr. PARSONS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DEMPSEY. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. PARSONS. I understand there are a lot of old records that have never been translated, on which they are working now, written in Italian and Spanish. Does the gentleman know whether those records are being explored?

Mr. DEMPSEY. They are being explored and recently copies of some very old records have been brought to the museum at Santa Fe, N. Mex., where is located what was formerly known as the Palace of the Governor. It is situated at the plaza in Santa Fe, N. Mex.

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 2 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, I take this occasion to answer the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RICH], when he asked why we are at this time bringing in this bill from the Committee on Foreign Affairs. May I say that I personally took this matter up with the ranking minority member of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, the gentleman from New York [Mr. FISH]. I told him what bills we expected to call up and asked him if there were any bills to which he had objection and if he would let me know those bills to which he objected I would not call them up, realizing there are many Members out of town who may be interested in certain bills or anything that may be controversial. That is the reason these bills were brought up today and they were brought up with this understanding. The gentleman from New York [Mr. FISH] agreed that these bills could be brought up, and also that agreement, I may say, was made with the minority leader.

I can assure you that it was not the intention of the Committee on Foreign Affairs to bring up anything that is controversial. As soon as I saw that one measure was controversial I immediately withdrew it.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLOOM. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I do not want the gentleman to imply that I passed on whether or not these bills are controversial.

Mr. BLOOM. No; I did not say that, and if I did I want to correct the statement. I said I took this matter up with the minority leader and told him we would not bring up any bills that are controversial. There are several bills that are very controversial and we did not want to bring them up at this time.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Is that why the gentleman is going to withdraw this bill now?

Mr. BLOOM. I am not going to withdraw this bill. I would not have brought up the other bill if I had known that the gentleman from New York [Mr. FISH] is opposed to it. The gentleman from New York told me he was not opposed to the Chilean bill. If I had thought he was opposed to it I would not have brought it up at this time.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I did not know but that the gentleman, having found that controversy had developed among other Members of the House, was ready to withdraw the bill.

Mr. BLOOM. I am not going to withdraw this bill. I know this bill is going to prevail.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Does the gentleman maintain a bill is not controversial when he thinks he can pass it?

Mr. BLOOM. I should be very pleased to argue this question at some other time with the minority leader, but I do not care to do it now.

Mr. SCHIFFLER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RICH].

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, I hold in high esteem the acting chairman of this committee and my good friend the gentleman from New Mexico [Mr. DEMPSEY], who has introduced this bill. They are both fine fellows; but we go beyond the point of being fine fellows when we agree to everything that is brought up on the floor of the House and permit it to be passed just because some good fellow would like to have passed a particular bill in which he is interested.

My principal objection to this bill at this particular time is that it will require the expenditure of $250,000 of Federal funds in order to have this celebration. When we asked the gentleman from New Mexico how much his State has expended directly for carrying on this exposition his reply was, "$5,000,000 for building roads." Spending $5,000,000 for building roads ought to be a good thing for the State of New Mexico. It would be mighty fine for them to spend $5,000,000 for that particular purpose. However, that money will not be spent directly on the celebration on which we are asked here to spend $250,000. If it were, that would be a different proposition; but the $5,000,000 is for the direct benefit of the people of the State of New Mexico.

Mr. ZIMMERMAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RICH. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. ZIMMERMAN. I call the attention of the gentleman to the fact that this celebration is for the benefit of not only the people of New Mexico and Arizona but the people of the entire United States who may come there and see the pageant that will be put on in many places in those two States, showing a real picture of what took place there 400 years ago. This celebration will not only be entertaining but will be educational, and will bring to life a large part of the history of our country that has never received very much prominence.

Mr. RICH. Will this celebration be put on in the same form as if it were being put on in the good old "horse and buggy" days, or will it be put on as we would figure it ought to be put on now, with automobiles and airplanes?

Mr. DEMPSEY. I may say to the gentleman it was the good old horse but there were no buggies.

Mr. RICH. They did not have any buggies? Did you go beyond the period of the good old "horse and buggy" days?

Mr. DEMPSEY. That is right.

Mr. RICH. What would the President of the United States have to say about that?

Mr. DEMPSEY. I do not know about that.

Mr. RICH. Thank goodness, we are going to get back to the good old horseback days, and I think that is what we ought to do.

Let us just see how much money we can afford to spend for this celebration. The past 6 years this administration has made a lot of promises. Here is a promise that was made by Franklin D. Roosevelt in his Budget message of January 3, 1934. I quote:

Furthermore, the Government during the balance of this calendar (1934) year should plan to build its 1936 expenditures, including recovery and relief, within the revenues expected within the fiscal year 1936. We should plan to have a definitely balanced Budget for the third year of recovery and from that time on seek a continuing reduction of the national debt.

That is what the President of the United States said in 1934, but what have been the results since then? We have had the largest national deficit since that time this country has ever known. In the last fiscal year, which ended on the 30th of June, we were over $3,600,000,000 in the red, although the President promised not only a balanced Budget but a reduction of the national debt.

The newspapers carried in headlines the other day, trying to make excuses, that the deficit this past year was not as great as was anticipated. They thought that was a real achievement. When the President thought he would be over $3,600,000,000 in the red, it was a real achievement for the deficit to be under $4,000,000,000. Achievement? There is just nothing to that claim. That was one of the most outstandingly disgraceful expenditures of Government funds that ever occurred in the history of this Nation, yet the newspapers of Washington would have you believe that we are achieving something under this administration.

If they are trying to fool or hoodwink the people of this country any longer by such headlines, I can tell you now that the taxpayers of this country are not going to stand for it. The taxpayers of this country are becoming so fed up, they are becoming so disillusioned about the things that you men on that side are proposing, they are now ready to say they want no more of it.

Mr. GEYER of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RICH. And if you are going to continue to bring in all these bills that require the expenditure of Government funds which means an increase of our national debt more and more annually, then I believe the people of this country ought to say that you can go so far and no farther; and they will say this in 1940. You just mark that.

I now yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. GEYER of California. Is the gentleman accusing the newspapers of being pro-New Deal? If so, that is interesting.

Mr. RICH. I refer to the newspapers that speak of this as an achievement and refer with some satisfaction to the fact that we are only going into debt $3,600,000,000 this year. I say to you that when anyone can find any satisfaction in a matter of that sort, there is something wrong with him from the neck up.

Mr. GEYER of California. Then, evidently, they see the handwriting on the wall and want to be on the winning side. Is that the gentleman's interpretation?

Mr. RICH. These newspapers, I think, are being subsidized to use such propaganda as that.

Mr. JOHNS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RICH. I yield.

Mr. JOHNS. I think the interpretation the gentleman has been giving us of these deficits should be changed. You know that has all been changed now so that they are investments rather than deficits. Does not the gentleman understand that?

Mr. RICH. If anybody can see where there is an investment in any deficit, I must say that I fail to see it myself. I was never brought up in that way. I have always believed that if you saved your pennies, after a while you would begin to accumulate a few dollars, and when you are spending your pennies and your dollars and have nothing, you are bound to come to ruin, and if this policy of government is continued they are going to bring everybody in this country to a condition of want, and, eventually, we are going to wreck our present system of government.

Mr. JOHNS. I suppose the gentleman understands that the President has said that now we have reached the point where these deficits are investments?

Mr. RICH. The President of the United States knows nothing about financing. He has always been in the red, and I sometimes think he is punch drunk from his spending.

Mr. JOHNS. But from now on, all the money we borrow is going to be self-liquidating.

Mr. RICH. I cannot understand how the President can get any foundation for a statement of that kind.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RICH. I yield.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. And it will not be very long before our American dollar and our American Government bonds will be about as worthless as the Camco Slot Machine stock, which our President peddled before he went into the White House.

Mr. RICH. I presume that stocks that are worthless will be no more worthless eventually than our Government bonds will be if we continue the course we have followed during the past 6 years of this administration.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. And about as worthless as the German inflation marks that our ex-international banker President peddled prior to entering the White House.

Mr. RICH. Let me call your attention to the President's statement on October 19, 1932, in Pittsburgh:

Taxes are paid in the sweat of every man who labors. * * * If excessive, they are reflected in idle factories, tax-sold farms and, hence, in hordes of the hungry tramping the streets and seeking jobs in vain. Our workers may never see a tax bill, but they pay in deductions from wages, in increased cost of what they buy or (as now) in broad cessation of employment. * * * Our people and our business cannot carry its excessive burdens of taxation.

Mr. SCHIFFLER. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 2 additional minutes.

Mr. RICH. The President, before the election, having made such fine statements with respect to the carrying on of our Government, I cannot understand how he can permit the Director of the Bureau of the Budget to grant all of the requests that Members of Congress make of that Bureau. Gentlemen seem to think that it is a great achievement when the Bureau of the Budget recommends a certain thing. I think we ought to have an investigation of the Bureau of the Budget, because apparently they are giving no consideration to the amount of income in comparison to the amount of outgo. It is no honor, nor is it any achievement, to have the Bureau of the Budget say that he approves of these expenditures because they are only leading to this great downfall that surely will come. If Members on the Democratic side of the aisle ask for these bills carrying these expenditures then they must assume the responsibility, but as for me, I want no part in it, notwithstanding the fact that my good friend from New Mexico [Mr. DEMPSEY] is one of the finest fellows in the House of Representatives and that he wants to take something more down to his State. We cannot hate him for that, although he has gotten more things for the State of New Mexico and has done more for that State than any Representative in any year, that I know of. He is a fine fellow and an honorable gentleman, but the time has come when we should say to our friend that we have gone so far, and that we cannot go any farther.

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to close debate upon this bill in 1 hour, 30 minutes on a side.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

Mr. HOOK. Mr. Chairman, I object.

Mr. BLOOM. I thought that that was acceptable to the other side. I move that we close debate in 1 hour.

Mr. TABER. Oh, Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that the gentleman cannot do that.

Mr. SCHIFFLER. Mr. Chairman, we have no objection to closing debate within 1 hour, so far as this side is concerned, the time to be equally divided.

Mr. HOOK. Mr. Chairman, I understand that unless there is unanimous consent the time cannot be changed.

The CHAIRMAN. That is correct.

Mr. HOOK. Mr. Chairman, I object unless the gentleman withdraws the bill.

Mr. SCHIFFLER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. H. CARL ANDERSEN].

Mr. H. CARL ANDERSEN. Mr. Chairman, sometimes I believe that we are losing our perspective and fail to understand exactly what $500,000 or $250,000 or the $350,000 such as was appropriated for a South Pole expedition the other day, while the House was not looking, really means. When I think of the $250,000 in this bill for a little folderol, as I would call it, when I think of the $500,000 embodied in the bill brought up by the genial acting chairman of the Committee on Foreign Affairs for donation to Chile, a country which has reneged on millions of bonds due American people; when I think of the $350,000 put through Congress the other day with very few Members of the House even knowing anything about it, although we were present, I think of what we could have done with all of that money frittered away up in our State. Just the other week we had a severe storm, killing 12 or 15 people back in Minnesota, doing $1,000,000 worth of damages, or better. My colleague came in here asking for some money to help those people, my people and your people, in the way of rehabilitating themselves, and we received what? Thirty-five thousand dollars to help people reestablish their homes, which had been blown over by a tornado. Yet here you are asking for $250,000 to have a little pageant or something of that kind, for 1 day's time, to be forgotten next week—in my opinion, money merely thrown away, doing no permanent good. If the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOODRUM] were here, I would be glad to ask him by what right the $350,000 is to be used for an expedition to the South Pole, without it being brought up for your attention and my attention for debate here in the House. I would like to have asked him what that same money was for, which was being slipped through, as you might say, on slides greased with soap, so quietly that nobody knew it was going through.

You and I know if that particular item to finance a trip to the South Pole had been voted on its merits, it would never have passed. That may be parliamentary procedure, the way this affair was handled, but it means far more than that to me. It means the squandering of money that the farmers back in the State of Minnesota, many of whom do not have a decent place to live, many of whom cannot afford to paint their buildings, have to pay eventually in taxes. It means to me that thousands of those people now without a decent living could have been provided with useful work at decent wages. It means that this $1,000,000 we are speaking of in these three so-called small items would have helped two or three thousand old people to the extent of $30 or $40 a month, to give them the bare necessities of life, for at least 1 year or more.

I repeat in conclusion, as I stated in the beginning, I sometimes think that we are losing our perspective in this House of Representatives and in this Congress. [Applause.]

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend the remarks I made in committee today.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. KEE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Arizona [Mr. MURDOCK].

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. Mr. Chairman, on first reading of the bill, not knowing quite the parliamentary situation, I rose to offer an amendment to the House bill. This was the amendment I proposed:

On page 4, line 6, after the word "act," insert the following: "including the expenditure of not more than $10,000 for the erection of a suitable monument at or near a point on the international boundary between the United States and Mexico where Coronado first entered what is now the United States."

I hope to offer that amendment later at the proper time.

Members of the Committee, a few weeks ago up in New England, for the first time in my rather mature life, I looked with awe upon Plymouth Rock where some of the fathers of this country landed in the year 1620. On day before yesterday, with my family, I journeyed south several hundred miles to Jamestown and spent an hour or two on the 3d of July examining that historic island, that ivy-covered tower of the old church, in which the House of Burgesses met to establish representative government in America in the year 1619.

As a student of history, I was awed and deeply impressed at Plymouth Rock and again at that old ivy-covered tower at Jamestown, for I assure you that in my study of American history I have imbibed much from the early sources of the founding of this Nation. My history has its beginning at Jamestown and at Plymouth Rock. It took a long while for our forefathers in covered wagons to pass from the Atlantic coast westwardly, as the star of empire moves, until they reached the Pacific. Some of them stopped on the way, and some were brought back, in the backwash of the tide of migration, into the interior country which I represent, Arizona.

I assure you that I have recently revised my history greatly, and I find that at an earlier date than the landing of the Pilgrim fathers, or the heroic efforts of Capt. John Smith on the Atlantic coast, the Spaniards entered this land from the south. I want to remind you that our southwestern culture is today a composite picture, a mixture of Anglo-Saxon and Spanish-American elements. It took our Spanish forbears in the Southwest about as long—in fact, a little longer—to come by way of the oxcart from Mexico City northward to Phoenix, or to that part of Arizona where I live, as it took our Anglo-Saxon forebears moving westward in covered wagons to reach that same locality.

We are proud all through the Southwest of our heroic past. Remember, Arizona, California, New Mexico, and Texas were fringes and northern border lands of New Spain. They were Spain's outposts of empire in a wilderness of barbarism. I want to assure you gentlemen that in American colleges and universities little has been taught of that remarkable phase of American history which is even now being written in textbooks by such authors as the California School of Historians, headed by Dr. Herbert Bolton, of the University of California at Berkeley, Calif.; Dr. Leonard, in southern California; Dr. Zimmerman, of the University of New Mexico, and many of their disciples, of which I count myself one, men who are searching the archives in Spain and Mexico, translating manuscripts. Oh, what a glamorous story this is.

Of course, California is not included in this particular celebration, but it is a part of the whole sweep of Spanish history on this continent. Four hundred years ago those Spaniards came to our Southwest. My friends over on the left side of the aisle say, "Why can we not celebrate this without the expenditure of a lot of money?" We can and I will suggest one way.

For more than a year I have been trying to get a postage stamp issued to commemorate the coming of the first white man, Fray Marcos de Niza, who came into Arizona in April 1539, just a year before the coming of Coronado himself. We can celebrate that by the mere issuing of a commemorative postage stamp. This humble Franciscan monk was the forerunner of a great host of "soldiers of the cross" who brought civilization and Christianity to this beautiful, but barbarous land. Many times in Spain's long career of conquest, when the soldiers failed the padres prevailed. Their work should not be forgotten.

You ask: What is the value of such an effort as this? Why should we spend money on it? I assure you that this is to be something more than a pageant. My friend from Pennsylvania asked, "What are you going to do, build roads and trails?" That is part of the program, not only in New Mexico but in Arizona, and I assure you that Arizona has put up as much money as has New Mexico. About a year ago I made it a point to drive with my wife and son over the Coronado Trail, over the White Mountains, from Springville, Ariz., to Clifton, Ariz. The White Mountains are the Alps of America. No more magnificent scenery can be found on earth, and I make no exception whatever. I traveled many miles over the White Mountains along the course that Coronado took. On what kind of roads? I feared for my life all the time. I take off my hat to Coronado and the men who first covered that trail nearly 400 years ago.

They did not have horses and buggies, they had only horses; and right in this connection, it was Coronado who introduced horses into the Southwest, horses, cows, sheep, and hogs; and I want to tell you that the mission fathers, who founded the missions all over California, Arizona, New Mexico, and Texas, as well as in Sonora, brought to the Southwest citrus and other fruits, especially oranges. They planted vineyards, and they developed that which is now the Sunkist glory of the Southwest. This certainly is of some pecuniary importance as well as of cultural importance. But the thing I am speaking of now particularly is the cultural aspect.

We Anglo-Americans, having been brought up on the Jamestown-Plymouth Rock variety of history, have been entirely too narrow in our conception of the civilizing influences in this country. We look across the Atlantic to one small portion of Europe as the source and fountain of all of our culture. This is too narrow, for a vast portion of this continent received contributions from the south of Europe, coming by way of New Spain or Mexico. We have not properly appraised our history until we learn what the Spanish conquerors, the Spanish padres, did in bringing all the elements of their culture and planting it with indelible impress upon our portion of the Americas. It is more or less to give this particular form, but particularly to emphasize it in our schools and colleges and to make it a vital, living part of our history that I ask you to vote this appropriation to make this celebration possible. Remember, man does not live by bread alone. We cannot value these things in dollars and cents. You cannot value the work of the soldiers and conquerors who brought civilization to this country on a dollars-and-cents basis.

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. I yield.

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. How many men were in Coronado's company?

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. Coronado brought several hundred souls into this country; he brought many who never went back. He spent about 2 years in this country. He entered southern Arizona in the spring of 1540, coming by way of Tucson, by way of what is now Safford, Ariz., entered the White Mountains near Clifton, crossed over into New Mexico, and spent about a year there. While in northern Arizona he sent Pedro de Tovar west to the Grand Canyon, the first white man ever to lay eyes on that great natural spectacle in Arizona. The Spaniards were astonished at the humpback cattle, as they called the buffalo; and I assure you that the humpback cattle were no more queer to the Spaniards than were the Spanish horses to the Pueblo Indians. Those Indians had never seen a horse before. They thought that horse and rider were all one piece and were astonished at the man-animal.

Coronado after spending 2 years in fruitless search for the seven cities of gold, crossing the Panhandle of Texas returned to Mexico. They say it was a fruitless search, but it opened up the Northern Mystery, as the unknown region to the north was called, to Spanish exploration and settlement. The text of our history books must be revised to eliminate from the elementary text the thought that the Spaniards did nothing but run around and search for gold. This notion is far from true. On the other hand they left an indelible impress upon our civilization which extends all the way from where I live southward to Cape Horn, an indelible impress. Spain did not fail as a colonizer. It is true her colonies broke away from her just as the Thirteen Original Colonies broke away from our mother country; but what, after all, is a mother for if not to bring forth children? Spain surely takes her place in the family of nations as one of the greatest mother countries of the world.

Mr. SHANLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. I yield.

Mr. SHANLEY. The gentleman referred to a great Hispanic scholar. Did he have reference to Dr. Irving Leonard?

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. Yes; I mentioned Dr. Leonard among others. I spoke of Dr. Bolton, who is the father of the movement in which so many students are now engaged, the study of Mexican and Spanish diaries for the purpose of reconstructing a picture which has never been adequately presented.

Mr. SHANLEY. I thank the gentleman for his observation as I know the House recognizes him as one of the outstanding scholars on the Spanish contributions to the making of Colonial America. Your mention of the high caliber of Dr. Leonard's attainments are particularly pleasing to me for

I spent some very treasured moments with Dr. Leonard. We were in the same high school and worked together in the New Haven Public Library. While under a common teacher, Miss Warren, we learned values that have been immeasurable to us. Only recently I have had the occasion to read chapter 9 of the Colonial Society by Irving A. Leonard, and I am sure that that chapter is one of high scholastic attainment.

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. The gentleman is entirely correct. Dr. Leonard is, I believe, one of the disciples of Dr. Bolton and certainly one of the leaders of this new school of historical research.

Mr. GEYER of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. I yield.

Mr. GEYER of California. The gentleman from Arizona is a school man. He can tell us whether it is true or not that in our schools up to the sixth and seventh grade in the matter of social studies most of the time is spent in studying this Spanish phase of American history.

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. That is a correct statement for the States of the Southwest. That is certainly true in my State and is quite generally true in the other States which have received the impress of Spanish culture. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. SCHIFFLER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentlewoman from Illinois [Miss SUMNER].

Miss SUMNER of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, there are a great many recreational and educational things that we might devise for the people of this country, if we would only stop spending long enough to work ourselves into a position where we could afford them.

Since coming here I have just about decided that the difference between a liberal and a conservative is that the conservatives are the "whys" and the liberals are the "why not's." But the real distinction, perhaps, is in the way they look at the taxpayers. The liberals seem to look at taxpayers as sheep in ogres' clothing, or as goats. A conservative looks at the taxpayers as lambs. We conservatives want our lambs to grow and thrive. We encourage them to do so in order that we may shear them yearly. But we do not wish to slaughter them.

Mr. Chairman, $250,000 is a fortune. How many people do you know who have made $250,000 in their lifetime? It would be difficult to do so since 1928. Unless one had the kind of glamour which can be liquidated either in Hollywood or in Washington.

When I think of the man who has made $250,000 I think of the fellow who wears a suit until his wife has to burn it, a man who never thinks he has enough money to go to fairs.

When I think of taxpayers I do not think of the people on Wall Street, because there are not any rich people in the district I have the honor to represent. Our taxpayers are home owners and farmers. The railroads now ask you to bail them out, with the rest of the taxpayers having to pay the bill. I think that it would be better at present to save our pennies so that we may later afford to do these things which we would like to do for our people. I doubt if our people at home feel like celebrating just at present. [Applause.]

Mr. LUTHER A. JOHNSON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. HOPE].

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Chairman, the fact that this celebration really goes back to the pre-"horse and buggy" days is best attested by the fact that the modest sum of only $250,000 is being asked. If we were to celebrate an event of the historical importance of the journeys of Coronado on the basis of other similar events, we would be asking a good deal more on this occasion than $250,000.

I agree with what has been said by preceding speakers that this phase of the history of our country has been very much neglected. This is a part of our history that goes back long before the Pilgrims landed on Plymouth Rock, long before the State of the gentleman from Pennsylvania was founded, long before William Penn or William Penn's father was born. It was then that Coronado was making history out on the plains of the Southwest.

This is not a local celebration that will be held in commemoration of this great journey, one of the greatest land journeys of all time. It is a national celebration. There are six States which were included in the journeys of Coronado. The celebration that I understand is contemplated is not one that will necessarily be confined to the State of New Mexico. It may embrace parts of all these six States and, more than that, it will be a national celebration for the benefit of the people of the entire United States. Its benefits will not be so much to the people of the Southwest who are already familiar with that important part of our history, but to the people of the entire country because it will make available to them the story of these great journeys which contributed very much to the history of this country.

There is another phase of this matter that I think ought to be considered. The journey of Coronado was part of the great Spanish explorations. The history of the Southwest is a history that we have in common with all of the nations to the south of us and in this day, in view of the international situation, it is important that we build up and maintain a spirit of good will and amity with those people. A celebration of this kind can do more than can be counted in dollars and cents toward bringing about better international relations.

I agree with the gentleman from Minnesota that sometimes we do lose our perspective and I think we are losing it today if we regard this expenditure in any other light than as a great expenditure for education, because that is what it is. We are losing our perspective if we hesitate when it comes to spending the small sum of $250,000 for this purpose. That is approximately one-fifth of a cent for everyone of 125,000,000 or 130,000,000 people in the United States. Just a small fraction of a cent to perpetuate in the minds and hearts of the people of this country the memory of one of the great exploratory journeys of all time.

Mr. SCHIFFLER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HOOK].

Mr. HOOK. Mr. Chairman, I have the highest regard and respect for the gentleman from New Mexico [Mr. DEMPSEY]. I know of no man in the House whom I regard with more respect. He is able, lovable, and energetic. The State of New Mexico should be proud of their Representative and should return him as long as he wishes to present himself for their consideration. I think he is a wonderful Member of Congress, and I would like to be able to go along with him on this bill. But it just so happens that I am getting thoroughly disgusted with the actions of some of the so-called economy bloc and their double-dealing as has happened in this House lately. I have had occasion to check on some of the behind-the-scene actions of some of the spokesmen of the so-called economy bloc. The revelations have been amazing. I feel it is about time to stop and expose what they are actually doing. There is no one on the floor of the House who would have the audacity to say that I have not been liberal. I have been, I am, and I intend to continue to be a liberal. That kind of a liberal that acts and speaks in the open with the cards on the table. The kind of liberal that will oppose the expenditure of any money not necessary to the proper administration of government and the welfare of the great mass of people in the interest of the taxpayer. We have problems in this Nation that need more attention than celebrations and centennials.

There are people in this Nation who actually need jobs to clothe and feed their families. Let us study the problem of recovery so that every able-bodied man and woman will be employed, but in the interim extend to them the necessary relief. What we ought to do is use more money for the purpose of studying out a program of recovery. I have a bill before this Congress, H. R. 933, which will if put into effect by this Congress provide 9,000,000 jobs in this Nation and at the same time cost less than the present relief program. It will bring recovery with a program of abundance, and not scarcity. But the great self-styled economy Members are not interested from that angle. Let this House pass this bill and end our unemployment problem. I sat on the floor of this House and witnessed the great program of the friendly enemies, the gentleman from Virginia and the gentleman from New York, in their comedy act of the hands-across-the-aisle. I witnessed a great program of what was supposed to be economy by a coalition between the gentleman from Virginia and the gentleman from New York. Above their walls and cries of economy I heard the pleas of the needy, the jobless, that fell on deaf ears of these two gentlemen. Last Friday, June 30, I had occasion to stand in the rear of this Chamber and beg for recognition from both the gentleman from New York and the gentleman from Virginia to ask for information with regard to conference reports that they submitted to the House. We did not have time to read their reports, and in view of all the false economy that had been preached on the floor of this House by them I wanted to know whether or not the reports on the relief bill or the report on the deficiency-appropriation bill carried the sum of $340,000 for the purpose of sending Admiral Byrd to the South Pole to try to discover coal. Of course, the admiral hails from Virginia, the home State of the Democratic end of the New York-Virginia economy axis. It is my understanding that there was not enough information from the last Byrd expedition submitted to the State Department on which that Department could take any worth-while action. I note that among the managers on the part of the House was named the great economist the gentleman from Virginia, C. A. WOODRUM. I am informed that the Appropriations Committee in the House refused to approve this item, and it was inserted in the Senate and then accepted in conference and slipped by the House in a very clever move of the steamroller tactics.

If such actions as this are the basis of their idea of a program of economy, I do not know what economy is. Both of these gentlemen refused even to yield for a question. After it was put through, I read in the conference report that amendment No. 9, proposed by the Senate, inserts an appropriation of $340,000 to enable the Division of Territories and Island Possessions of the Department of the Interior to conduct an investigation and survey of the natural resources of the land and sea areas of the Antarctic regions. In other words another expedition to be headed by a great Virginian proposed by another Virginia economist.

We came in here this afternoon with a bill for $500,000 proposing to send materials to Chile to build homes for the people of that country. I believe in the good-neighbor policy but we should take care of our own citizens first. Now it is proposed that we appropriate another $250,000 to celebrate a four hundredth anniversary of the explorations of Coronado. No doubt at the proper time we should recognize the part played by this great explorer in the development of the Southwest. A wonderful historical event. Probably when we have reached the days of recovery, the days when men will not be begging for jobs, we can properly, fairly, and honestly celebrate these occasions; but I say if we are going to have economy let us have economy in the best interests of the preservation of democracy, in the interest of general welfare, as is proposed by our great President, and not by hands across the aisle, as was done on the relief bill and on some of the appropriation bills. I understand that the two gentlemen to whom I have referred knew that the Appropriations Committee had turned down the $340,000 appropriation. I should like to have those two great economists explain some of that economy to this House.

Mr. SCHIFFLER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER].

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, we are now considering a bill authorizing the appropriation of $250,000. We have had thrown up here an intimation that some items were included in the deficiency bill that perhaps the House might not have approved of. Let me say that I did not have the floor while that bill was under consideration. No one would have any trouble finding out just exactly what was in it.

When you go to conference you cannot control everything that you bring back to the House. I believe that as far as dollars and cents go, as a general proposition the deficiency committee has brought back to the House fewer increases in items added by the Senate than any other committee that has gone over to deal with them.

Mr. HOOK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. Not at this time.

With reference to this particular item, if we are going to take care of every celebration that anyone asks us to on a liberal basis we are doing it out of money that may come into the Treasury and that has not yet been borrowed. We are not doing it out of money that is in the Treasury. This is something we must think about. Forever and ever in these days there has been a demand on the House that it appropriate large sums of money to do all sorts of things that are not even thought of in good times. I believe our expenditures in the last 6 years for such activities as this have been 3, 4, and perhaps 10 times as large as they have been in ordinary, normal times; and the Treasury is empty, the people are broke, and we are doing nothing constructive to get them out of that condition.

Let us begin not by saying that this Coronado proposition is not as good as something else but by saying that we are setting our face toward the rising sun and are not going further to deplete the Treasury of the United States for things that do not have to be done at this time. [Applause.]

Mr. LUTHER A. JOHNSON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. JONES].

Mr. JONES of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I wish every Member of the House might have heard my friends, the gentleman from New Mexico [Mr. DEMPSEY] and the gentleman from Arizona [Mr. MURDOCK], as well as some of the other Members, who described in detail what this particular celebration means. I am thoroughly in accord with the thought that we should not spend money uselessly; on the other hand, you cannot hold a nation or a people together or build a nation on mechanical things alone. I love the rocks and the hills and the vales and the mountains and the springs and the rivulets and the rivers of this country. I glory in our material wealth. But most of these can be duplicated in other lands. You cannot build strong character, a strong people, and a strong nation, without taking into consideration something besides silver and gold.

I recall as a boy in school reading of the hanging-out of the lantern in the old North Church as a signal to Paul Revere. I said then I would rather see the old North Church than any other spot in North America, and I have kept that feeling through the years. That is where the whole thing started. A few years ago I had the privilege of visiting the old North Church and standing in the same spot where stood the man who gave those signals. I believe we get something out of the sentiment, the tradition, the history, and the background that build a nation and hold together and cement the lives of a people.

This is a very small sum to be spent in a great project like this. Some of the Members who spoke against it, I recall, were very ardent in their support of the provision for memorializing the Lewis and Clark expedition, a celebration that commemorated the conquest of the great Northwest and the bringing of that country into our land and into the activities of the National Government, making it a part of the development of this broad, big country. I am glad that was done. I believe such commemorations help us to be what we are and what we should be in the future of this country of ours. We have said that it is all right to spend a great many millions of dollars in commemorating happenings in various sections of the country, and we have done that. We have spent large sums for the New York World's Fair. We have spent a considerable sum in helping the world's fair in San Francisco. We have built monuments and markers all over America. I do not know of anything particularly that has been done in the great Southwest in the way of marking or memorializing the historical background of that great section, whose history began as early as that of the other sections of the country.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JONES of Texas. Yes; I yield to my friend.

Mr. RICH. Does the gentleman think it is necessary to have so many of these celebrations in 1 or 2 particular years? Instead of having the four hundredth anniversary, why do we not celebrate the four hundred and fiftieth year and scatter them over a longer period of time?

Mr. JONES of Texas. Perhaps there are too many, but why pick on the least expensive of them all and yet one of the most important. They may want to have a celebration a hundred years from now, but the gentleman and I will not be here to arrange it. This is the four hundredth anniversary of this particular event, one of the oldest in American history, one that commemorates the discovery and the exploration of one great section of the United States of America.

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JONES of Texas. I yield to the gentleman from Kansas.

Mr. HOPE. Does not the gentleman think we have waited quite a while, inasmuch as we have waited 400 years to celebrate this event, while in Pennsylvania they waited only 100 years to celebrate the centennial or 150 years to celebrate the sesquicentennial of the signing of the Declaration of Independence?

Mr. JONES of Texas. And I think if a people never go back in their minds and get their anchoring places, a country is headed for the downhill grade rather than uphill, and so long as they maintain the ties that bind them in the tradition and in the background and in the bottom and the mudsills of the building of their country, they have hope for the future. This Republic is anchored in the sentiment and patriotism that are inspired by the heroism of the pioneers and trailblazers of the early days.

Mr. PARSONS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JONES of Texas. I yield.

Mr. PARSONS. In reply to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RICH] we cannot very well turn the clock back for a few years or wait for some future time to have such a celebration.

Mr. JONES of Texas. No; and it seems that these gentlemen waited for a long time, and the people have been very modest in their request for funds to commemorate a great event that is of special significance to the people of Arizona and the great Southwest, who have a part in our national history as well as the other sections of the country. After all, if we are going to simply say that we shall worship at the shrine of silver and gold alone or that we are going to depend wholly on material things, may I say that a country cannot be any more held together in that way than an engine can be made to run without steam. It may be the most perfect engine in the world, it might have all the painting they have been talking about, it may have the pistons ground, it may have had all the workshop efforts placed upon it to make it a most perfect engine, and you might write all the theories about running an engine you could think of or conceive and pile them into the firebox and still it would not run. It takes something in the mind and heart of folks to build a country and hold it solid, especially in troublous times. I believe the small amount the gentleman has asked is modest enough to commemorate an event that marked the beginning of a section of the country that if you will get your map you will find means a large portion of the United States.

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 2 additional minutes.

Mr. JONES of Texas. And if we make the appropriations for the other celebrations and turn down the one in which all the South American countries have manifested an interest and in which they have a great sentiment themselves, it would seem like a slap at those countries. We are intimately linked with the South American countries. We are at peace with them. Much of the commerce and trade of the future will be with them. We are touched by the same geography. We are joined in many respects by a common interest. That interest has been sealed for a hundred years by the Monroe Doctrine. Is it too much to hope that it will continue through the coming centuries?

I hope the House, notwithstanding it may be economy-minded, will not undertake to start on this great celebration. [Applause.]

Mr. SCHIFFLER. Mr. Chairman, I announced a few moments ago that we had concluded, but I find that a member of our committee, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. TINKHAM] would like to have 3 minutes, and I would like to yield him that time now.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Massachusetts is recognized for 3 minutes.

Mr. TINKHAM. Mr. Chairman, the House of Representatives on Friday last, by a decisive vote, repudiated the foreign policy of intervention in the political affairs of other nations which President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hull have been pursuing for the last 6 years. At last, the House of Representatives has declared its independence of Executive domination.

By that decisive vote, the President and Secretary of State Hull were given a mandate that the foreign policy of the United States must continue to be one of genuine neutrality, the traditional foreign policy which for 150 years kept this country out of foreign wars.

If President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hull persist in following a foreign policy which is unneutral and in contradiction to American traditions they are not representing the American people. They are working in the interest of alien governments.

The decisive vote of the House of Representatives on Friday last means three things:

First, it means that the United States refuses to join the London-Paris-Moscow axis or group of powers, as well as the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo axis or group of powers, both of which axes or groups of powers are now in conflict, not in support of principles of government or of morality, but wholly to gain their own selfish, material, imperialistic ends.

Second, it means that the United States refuses in time of war to arm other nations for a wholesale slaughter of the human race; and

Third, it means that the United States intends to stand steadfastly as a monument to peace in a warring world, as it has stood resolutely since the declaration of its independence as a monument to liberty and freedom. [Applause.]

Mr. LUTHER A. JOHNSON. Mr. Chairman, I yield now to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. MAHON].

Mr. MAHON. Mr. Chairman, as Representative of the Nineteenth Congressional District of Texas, a portion of the great Southwest, I have been very much interested in this proposed celebration and heartily endorse the bill. I hope that we may pass it by a very substantial vote. I predict that we will, and in view of the very appropriate remarks already made concerning this matter I shall not undertake to say more.

The CHAIRMAN. The time for general debate having expired, the Clerk will read the bill for amendment.

The Clerk read the bill.

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Chairman, I move that the Committee do now rise and report the bill back to the House with the recommendation that the bill do pass.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and Mr. RAYBURN having resumed the chair as Speaker pro tempore, Mr. LEWIS of Colorado, chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that Committee had had under consideration the bill H. R. 6852, and had directed him to report the same back to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the bill to final passage.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill S. 2197, a similar bill, be substituted for the House bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent that on the final passage the bill, S. 2197, be substituted for the House bill. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair is informed that there is an omission in the printing of the Senate bill respecting the date on which the commission shall transmit a statement of expenditure. Is there objection to an amendment being made to correct that omission?

There was no objection.

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following amendment to the Senate bill which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Bloom to the Senate bill 2197: Page 5, line 4, after the word "before" insert "January 3," and after the figures "194" insert the figure "1", so that it will read: "The Commission shall transmit to Congress on or before January 3, 1941, a detailed statement of the manner of expenditure of any funds appropriated pursuant to the authorization contained in this act."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question now is on the passage of the Senate bill.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. SCHIFFLER) there were—ayes 52, noes 24.

So the bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

A House bill, H. R. 6852, was laid on the table.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. EATON of California, for 1 week, on account of illness.

To Mr. PATRICK, for 1 day, on account of official business.

To Mr. FERNANDEZ, for 10 days, on account of important official business.

To Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts, indefinitely, on account of illness in family.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks and include therein certain letters from people, which letters are very short.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. KEE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that I may extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include therewith a brief editorial from the Baltimore Sun.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. IZAC. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include therein an editorial from the Washington Daily News.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. COFFEE of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and include therein a radio colloquy between ex-Congressman Charles G. Binderup and Etta Russel.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. JARMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include a brief editorial from the Washington Post.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include an article from the July issue of Amerasia, entitled "The United States Still Continues to Arm Japan."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. SHORT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks and include an address delivered by our distinguished minority leader, Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts, at Springfield on last Saturday.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. CHIPERFIELD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks and include therein quotations from an article in the American Magazine by Herbert Hoover.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

WICHITA, KANS., THE LOGICAL SITE FOR AN AERONAUTICAL RESEARCH LABORATORY

Mr. HOUSTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HOUSTON. Mr. Speaker, it has been conclusively shown by the testimony of Colonel Lindbergh, General Arnold, and others having a comprehensive understanding of the operations of our air force and those of foreign countries that there is a very definite need for new research facilities for the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics.

The development program now being carried on at Langley Field should be supplemented by at least two new laboratories, one on the west coast and the other in the interior, and Wichita, Kans., is the logical location for the interior research center.

Wichita's geographical location between the mountain chains provides for remoteness from aerial attack; its terrain and landing facilities are suitable for flight testing, and its climate affords a high percentage of flying days.

Wichita is now the center of a great civil airway network; it now possesses commercial research and production facilities and general cooperative facilities; it offers a minimum hazard of sabotage and espionage; it has the type of labor required for such facilities, and it has the transportation systems, utility resources, housing, and available sites for the laboratory, all of which make it the strategic interior point for the facilities needed for national defense.

WICHITA, A LEADING INTERIOR INDUSTRIAL CENTER

Wichita is Kansas' greatest city and one of the leading industrial cities of the Southwest. The leading industry classifications—in addition to her livestock, grain, broomcorn, and dairy markets—are meat packing, poultry packing, dairy manufacturing, petroleum refining, milling, airplanes, grain storage, electric and gasoline household appliances, foundry and metal products, steel fabrication, oil-field equipment, food products, railroad cars, building materials and specialties, woodworking, air-conditioning equipment, printing and publishing.

Wichita's population of 125,000 is more purely American than that of any other metropolitan city, being 91.9 percent native white, 2 percent foreign-born white, 5.1 percent Negro, and 1 percent all others.

STRATEGICAL LOCATION OF WICHITA

Wichita's location in the center of the United States, between the country's mountain chains, situated in the Great Plains region, is a strategical and logical location for an N. A. C. A. research center. Wichita is more remote from aerial attack and more convenient to all aircraft manufacturers than any other metropolitan city.

CENTER OF CIVIL AIRWAY NETWORK

Wichita is at the hub of the civil airway system, and her municipal airport, or an aerodrome in conjunction with a research center, could be utilized as a central refueling base in the transcontinental movement of group or squadron operations. Practically all direct transcontinental flights could well use Wichita as a central or middle refueling base.

If it is advisable to locate an N. A. C. A. research center in conjunction with a military flying field, there is ample justification for a central refueling base at Wichita, and the two could be planned for the same aerodrome at the same time so that future development would not conflict as it has at Langley Field.

MINIMUM HAZARD OF SABOTAGE AND ESPIONAGE

Wichita's 91.9 percent native white population with its agricultural and pioneer background, and her excellent police department guarantees a minimum hazard from sabotage and espionage.

TERRAIN AND LANDING FACILITIES SUITABLE FOR FLIGHT TESTING

The nature of the terrain in the vicinity of Wichita is especially adaptable to flying activities that are likely to require emergency landings. Wichita is situated in the Great Plains region and the surrounding area is smooth and gently rolling and suitable landing areas can be found on practically every square section of ground.

WICHITA RANKS NEAR THE TOP IN NUMBER OF FLYING DAYS

Municipal airport records show 356 days of active operation during 1938, with only 9 days of limited operations. There are various ways of recording flying days. A detailed study of Weather Bureau records for 1938, based on Civil Aeronautics Authority contact-flying requirements of visibility of over 2½ miles, and ceiling of over 1,000 feet, showed that the visibility was greater than 2½ miles 96.5 percent of the total hours in 1938 and that the ceiling was greater than 1,000 feet during 93.65 percent of the total hours during 1938. The ceiling and visibility of Wichita are mainly affected by precipitation rather than heavy fogs, and as a result, periods of low ceiling and poor visibility are of short duration.

The winters are mild to a degree, permitting aviation activities practically every day of the year. The few snows are of slight duration and the summers are tempered with constant breezes with an average velocity of 10 miles per hour. The relative humidity is low, averaging 78 at 7 a. m., 53 at 12 noon, and 56 at 7 p. m. The average mean temperatures of the extreme months are: January, 32°; February, 33.8°; July, 79.2°; August, 78.6°. The average annual rainfall is 30.14 inches.

ALTITUDE OF WICHITA WILL NOT MATERIALLY INCREASE MATHEMATICAL COMPUTATIONS IN RESEARCH STUDIES

Wichita and vicinity has an altitude averaging around 1,350 feet. Even though a laboratory were located at sea level there are very few days when standard sea-level conditions exist, that is, when the barometer is 29.92 and the temperature is 15° C. It is necessary, therefore, to make corrections to standard sea-level conditions, whether the laboratory is located at sea level or at an altitude of 1,350 feet. The results obtained in most wind-tunnel operations are independent of altitude, inasmuch as they are set up in a nondimensional coefficient form. The effect that this altitude might have on the Reynolds number can be compensated for by increasing slightly the size of the wind-tunnel model.

COMMERCIAL RESEARCH AND PRODUCTION FACILITIES

Wichita has four aircraft-manufacturing plants, namely, the Beech Aircraft Corporation, Cessna Aircraft Co., Stearman Aircraft Division of the Boeing Airplane Co., and the Swallow Airplane Co., all of which maintain extensive production and research facilities. Due to the location of these plants in Wichita there has developed many local sources of supply and services that would be a distinct aid and convenience to a research facility.

Wichita is also the center of the petroleum-refining industry in Kansas and all local and area refineries maintain commercial research laboratories that would be of assistance in the development of aircraft engine fuels.

GENERAL COOPERATIVE FACILITIES AND ACTIVITIES AVAILABLE

The Wichita Public Library (the largest library in the State of Kansas) and the Wichita Municipal University Library maintain extensive files of magazines, publications, and scientific books on aviation, petroleum, and chemistry, which are available for reference by a research staff.

Many national scientific societies function through local branches in Wichita, including the American Chemical Society, American Institute of Electrical Engineers, American Petroleum Institute, American Society of Automotive Engineers, American Society of Mechanical Engineers, Kansas Academy of Science, Wichita Engineers Club, and others that would be of particular interest to personnel connected with a research center.

THE FINEST OF LABOR AVAILABLE

Practically all Wichita labor is native to this region, being of pioneer parentage and is progressive, patriotic, loyal, steady, reliable, and has a relatively high degree of education.

The diversified nature of Wichita industries provides a good supply of labor in practically all classifications of trades. The vocational department of the Wichita Board of Education is set up to train semiskilled workers in such classifications as current demands warrant. Labor difficulties are unheard of in Wichita. There has not been one strike since the passage of the Wagner Labor Disputes Act. Open-shop conditions prevail throughout the manufacturing industries. The type of workmen found in Wichita do not readily lend themselves to labor agitation. The efficiency of Wichita labor is high due to characteristics of workers, climatic conditions, good housing, excellent recreation facilities, and low living costs.

WICHITA CAN COPE WITH ANY UTILITY NEEDS

The Kansas Gas & Electric Co. has a total generating capacity of 89,000 kilovolt-amperes, of which 26,000 kilovolt-amperes is available through a stand-by plant located within the city limits of Wichita. This company also has interconnections with a capacity available totaling 44,000 kilovolt-amperes.

The Gas Service Co. and the Consolidated Gas Utilities Co. serve Wichita with industrial and domestic gas and can supply unlimited quantities of natural gas at rates running as low as 12 to 15 cents per thousand cubic feet of 1100 British thermal unit gas.

The city of Wichita and the Wichita Water Co. has under construction a new soft-water plant capable of supplying water for over 100,000 additional population, which assures an ample supply of good water.

LOW CONSTRUCTION COSTS

Construction costs in Wichita and vicinity run from 15 to 20 percent less than construction costs in most metropolitan districts, especially when reinforced concrete is the basis of the structure. This would mean quite a saving to the Federal Government in case of a large construction program.

TRANSPORTATION SYSTEM FITS CENTRAL LOCATION

Wichita transportation facilities are equal to those of most any other city in the Middle West in relation to production and supply centers. Her railway lines connect her with practically all of the important railway termini west of a line drawn from Chicago through St. Louis, Memphis, Birmingham, and Pensacola, which makes available fast and convenient freight, parcel post, and express service to and from all parts of the United States. Bus and truck lines connect directly with such production and supply centers and gateways as Chicago, St. Louis, Dallas, Denver, Omaha, and Los Angeles.

Wichita enjoys the most convenient air mail, passenger, and express service of any city in the Nation through Transcontinental and Western Airlines, Inc., Braniff Airways, Inc., and Continental Airlines, Inc.

WICHITA CAN MEET REASONABLE HOUSING DEMANDS

Wichita has many fine residential areas being developed in practically every direction from the city, and without question, convenient housing facilities could be provided by private enterprise in the vicinity of a research center.

LIVING CONDITIONS UNSURPASSED

Wichita, with her pure American population, ranks fourth from the lowest tax rate of the country's major cities; is one of the five lowest in the cost of living, according to American Magazine survey; has efficient and responsive government; unexcelled police and fire protection; low insurance rates; low utility costs; 5-cent bus fare; no back-of-the-yards districts; 83 percent live in single and two-family detached houses; and with her nationally famous park system and unsurpassed public-school system, providing instruction from kindergarten to a college master's degree, is one of the most wholesome cities in the Nation in which to live and do business.

WICHITA MUNICIPAL AIRPORT IDEAL FOR INTERIOR REFUELING BASE

The mile-square Wichita Municipal Airport, with its hard-surface runways under construction; Department of Agriculture Aerological Station, 24-hour service; Civil Aeronautics Authority Airways Communication Station, a junction of two circuits; airway radio and radio-range facilities, and freedom from obstructions, together with excellent climatological conditions in this area, is probably the finest location in this interior region for a refueling base, which would permit mass movement of aircraft through this center region.

EXCELLENT SITES AVAILABLE

There are many excellent sites that can be made available for either a research center or a combination research center and interior refueling station. The following is a description of a number of available sites:

First. One hundred and forty-seven acres, on which is located an aircraft plant containing 37,000 square feet of ground-floor space and 15,000 feet of second-story floor space, located adjacent to one of Wichita's exclusive residential districts.

Second. Two hundred and eighty acres one-half mile north of Wichita Municipal Airport, which contains a group of buildings formerly used as the Sedgwick County poor farm.

Third. If traffic on the municipal airport would not interfere, a tract of 60 acres on the airport, or a tract of 160 acres adjacent to the airport could be made available, which would also provide an airdrome suitable for the largest of military equipment.

Fourth. Six hundred and forty acres, located approximately 3 miles from the city limits and 5 miles from the Wichita Municipal Airport.

There is, without question, need for additional research facilities, and a portion of these facilities should be located in the interior in the interests of national economy and encouraging the aircraft industry to expand into the interior.

On May 18, 1939, I introduced H. R. 6399, a bill authorizing an appropriation of $10,000,000 for the construction and equipment at Wichita of research facilities for aeronautical research, and I earnestly ask the support of my colleagues for passage of this bill, back of which there is no profit motive whatever, as a group of prominent Wichita civic air-minded citizens have offered as a gift to the Federal Government a tract of land valued at $75,000 for the site of this proposed laboratory. The establishment of this facility will, I can honestly assure you, be in the public interest.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. SHANLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. JOHNS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks by including a letter from a constituent of mine with reference to woolen and paper makers' felts.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

SENATE BILLS REFERRED

Bills of the Senate of the following titles were taken from the Speaker's table and, under the rule, referred as follows:

S. 28. An act to provide for the erection of a public historical museum in the Custer Battlefield National Cemetery, Mont.; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

S. 163. An act directing the Secretary of the Interior to issue to Albert W. Gabbey a patent to certain lands in the State of Wyoming; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

S. 507. An act to provide allowances for inactive-status training and for uniforms and equipment for certain officers of the Officers' Reserve Corps; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

S. 878. An act to amend the act of August 26, 1937; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

S. 1398. An act to amend the act entitled "An act to punish acts of interference with the foreign relations, the neutrality, and the foreign commerce of the United States, to punish espionage, and better to enforce the criminal laws of the United States, and for other purposes," approved June 15, 1917, as amended, to increase the penalties for peacetime violations of such act; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

S. 1442. An act for the relief of Max J. Mobley; to the Committee on Claims.

S. 1672. An act authorizing the Secretary of War to permit Salt Lake City, Utah, to construct and maintain certain roads, streets, and boulevards across the Fort Douglas Military Reservation; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

S. 1723. An act to correct the military record of George M. Ruby; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

S. 1918. An act relating to the retired pay of certain retired Army officers; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

H. J. Res. 133. Joint resolution authorizing the President of the United States of America to proclaim October 11, 1939, General Pulaski's Memorial Day for the observance and commemoration of the death of Brig. Gen. Casimir Pulaski.

THE LATE HON. HARRY W. GRISWOLD

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 5 minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, it is with deep regret and personal sorrow that I announce, on behalf of our Wisconsin delegation, the death of our esteemed and beloved colleague, the distinguished gentleman from Wisconsin, Hon. HARRY W. GRISWOLD.

Mr. GRISWOLD was a man of exemplary character, exceptional ability, and devotion to the public service. He was born on a farm near West Salem, Wis., on May 19, 1886, and he was an expert on farm problems. His great soul was not satisfied with the dead past, its glooms and its shadows. He dealt with realities, not fancies. Life to him was an objective; he saw things as they were. He did not fashion them by the more subtle forces of the brain and live in the realm of dreams. In his passing his district, our State, and the Nation have suffered a distinct and irreparable loss.

We read in Holy Writ:

Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friend.

Our departed colleague did lay down his life in the service of his country and his countrymen.

He was an able, diligent, and conscientious legislator, who unstintingly devoted his energies toward the solution of the distressing and perplexing problems confronting our country. In his zeal he disregarded the physical limitations of an ordinary man, and he laid down his earthly life as a sacrifice on the altar of his country's welfare.

HARRY GRISWOLD was loved by his constituents and his colleagues, regardless of their party affiliations, as he was ever looking for an opportunity to perform some kind deed or act for others.

His devotion to his wife and children and to their welfare was unexcelled, and I know that the sympathy of the entire membership of this House goes out to them in this, their sad hour of bereavement.

Our colleague has passed into the great beyond, but his spirit will forever dwell in the hearts of his countrymen. Although we shall miss him in our councils, we know that while his earthly body is dead, he has just commenced to live in the mansions prepared by our Heavenly Father. He had the works of godliness as well as faith in God, and we know that he who dies in the name of the Lord shall have everlasting life.

Mr. Speaker, at a later date it is my purpose to ask the indulgence of the House for sufficient time to speak at greater length on the character and public service of our departed colleague.

Mr. THILL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. THILL. Mr. Speaker, in the death of HARRY W. GRISWOLD this Nation has lost a conscientious student of legislation and a true statesman. His loss is more keenly felt in Wisconsin, where he devoted so many years of his life to State affairs. It was my good fortune to know HARRY GRISWOLD and my life was enriched by his counsel and legislative wisdom.

HARRY GRISWOLD religiously and indefatigably sought information and factual data, then he analyzed and arranged his thoughts in logical order to substantiate his conclusions. With keen intelligence and high-mindedness he approached the legislative problems facing this country. His judgment was to be relied upon because it was based upon profound study and intellectual honesty.

We mourn the passing of a great and sincere soul. HARRY GRISWOLD left behind him a gleaming record of devotion and service to State and country.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. JOHNS].

Mr. JOHNS. Mr. Speaker, I was shocked this morning when on my way back to Washington I picked up a paper at the Pittsburgh Airport and learned of the sudden death of my colleague, HARRY GRISWOLD.

I have known HARRY GRISWOLD for many years. He has been a devoted servant to the people of his State of Wisconsin, having represented his district in the State senate for 4 years prior to his election to the Congress of the United States. He was a young man, in his prime, and was devoted to his work in the Congress.

It is true, of course, that the shadows which have been falling to the West for him, had turned and for 3 years were passing to the East, but he was in good health, and it was a shock to all of his friends to learn that he had passed on so suddenly. As I reflect on those who have preceded him here in the House since I came here on the 1st of January, I feel that it behooves all of us to be prepared for these sudden changes that take us away from our friends.

HARRY GRISWOLD is going to be greatly missed here in the House among his colleagues, and especially by the delegation from Wisconsin. He is going to be more missed in his home State, and in his home city of West Salem, where he is so well and favorably known.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. GEHRMANN].

Mr. GEHRMANN. Mr. Speaker, I was greatly shocked when last evening I heard over the radio news of the sudden death of HARRY GRISWOLD.

I had the honor and pleasure of serving with HARRY GRISWOLD in the Wisconsin State Senate, and that is where I learned to respect and love him. Although we were oftentimes on opposite sides of the different issues before the Wisconsin Senate, he was the type of man who never held anything against another because the other opposed him. He was honest, he was honorable, he was sincere; and above all, he was loyal to the people he represented. As I said before, though we were oftentimes opposed to each other, at the same time we were the best of friends.

I shall miss HARRY GRISWOLD perhaps more than anyone else, because he was my colleague in the State senate and he was a colleague here. I shall never forget his memory.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, in respect to the memory of our departed colleague, I offer a resolution which I have sent to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

HOUSE RESOLUTION 243

Resolved, That the House has heard with profound sorrow of the death of Hon. HARRY WILBUR GRISWOLD, a Representative from the State of Wisconsin.

Resolved, That a committee of four Members of the House with such Members of the Senate as may be joined be appointed to attend the funeral.

Resolved, That the Sergeant at Arms of the House be authorized and directed to take such steps as may be necessary for carrying out the provision of these resolutions and that the necessary expenses in connection therewith be paid out of the contingent fund of the House.

Resolved, That the Clerk communicate these resolutions to the Senate and transmit a copy thereof to the family of the deceased.

The resolution was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair appoints as members of the funeral committee Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin, Mr. MURRAY, Mr. JOHNS, and Mr. HULL.

The Clerk will report the further resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That as a further mark of respect the House do now adjourn.

The resolution was agreed to.

Accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 4 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until tomorrow, Thursday, July 6, 1939, at 12 o'clock noon.

SENATE

THURSDAY, JULY 6, 1939

The Chaplain, Rev. Z. Barney T. Phillips, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Unworthy though we be, with thoughts unsanctified and full of doubts and fears, we come to Thee, O Righteous Father, for Thou alone canst make us worthy. We can find purity and peace only at Thy feet; we can see light only as we stand in the light of Thy countenance. Take, Thou, our hand in Thine and lead us where Thou wilt; e'en though the way be long and the shadows deep we cannot be afraid when Thou art near, and only with Thee can we find strength and know the meaning of our life. May it be our chief concern, as servants of our country, to lead men unto Thee and to fight in Thy battle for righteousness, with the courage and the tenderness of Christ, that we may find our joy as He found His in being and in doing good. We ask it in His name. Amen.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, I submit amendments intended to be proposed by me to the bill (H. R. 6635) to amend the Social Security Act, and for other purposes. I also present copy of a letter from Rt. Rev. Msgr. Michael J. Ready, general secretary of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, addressed to the chairman of the Committee on Finance, with copies to other members of the Finance Committee, relative to the amendments.

I ask that the amendments be printed and the letter and amendments printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Finance.

There being no objection, the amendments were ordered to be printed and the letter and amendments were referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Amendments intended to be proposed by Mr. WALSH to the bill (S. 6635) to amend the Social Security Act, and for other purposes, viz: On page 37, to strike out lines 17 to 25, inclusive.

On page 59, line 17, after "(8)", to insert "In the case of the tax imposed by section 1410."

NATIONAL CATHOLIC WELFARE CONFERENCE,
Washington, D. C., June 16, 1939.

The Honorable PAT HARRISON,
Chairman, Committee on Finance,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SENATOR HARRISON: The administrative board of the National Catholic Welfare Conference desires to place before your committee its views with regard to H. R. 6635, a bill to amend the Social Security Act.

The purpose of the United States Congress in enacting Public No. 271, Seventy-fourth Congress (H. R. 7260), the Social Security Act, approved August 14, 1935, as stated in the act, is:

"To provide for the general welfare by establishing a system of Federal old-age benefits, and by enabling the several States to make more adequate provision for aged persons, blind persons, dependent and crippled children, maternal and child welfare, public health, and the administration of their unemployment compensation laws; to establish a Social Security Board; to raise revenue; and for other purposes."

Among its provisions the Social Security Act establishes three activities. Title II provides a Federal system of old-age benefits for workmen employed in industry and commerce and an excise tax on their employers. Title IX levies a second tax on employers of eight or more in industry and commerce, with certain credits allowed to employers contributing to a State plan of unemployment compensation.

Under this act not all persons gainfully employed are covered by either the unemployment compensation system or by the old-age benefits system.

Titles II, VIII, and IX of the Social Security Act exclude from the benefits of this act any worker employed in the service of a nonprofit charitable, educational, or religious institution.

The principal benefit provided by the old-age benefits system is a monthly pension payable to a worker in a covered employment after he has attained the age of 65. The bill now before your committee substitutes for lump-sum benefits monthly benefits for widows and children. Thus a worker in a noncovered employment, a nonprofit religious, charitable, or educational institution, etc., is entitled to no benefit at all; a worker who has at times received wages in a noncovered employment and at times in a covered employment is entitled to a benefit based solely on the wages he received in a covered employment.

This provision of the Social Security Act places the worker in a noncovered employment at a serious economic disadvantage as compared with the worker in a covered employment, unless the noncovered organization employing the worker has made some equivalent provision for him in his old age. No practical plan for providing such protection has been recommended. Especially is this true in the case of workers in the lower wage brackets, and these workers are precisely those who need this kind of protection most.

In his message of January 16, the President emphasizes the "desirability of affording greater old-age security." The President holds that the extension of the old-age benefits system "to as large a proportion as possible of our employed population is necessary in order to avoid unfair discrimination." The administrative board of bishops is desirous of gaining for the lay workers in Catholic institutions the benefits which accrue to employees generally under the Social Security Act. The administrative board wishes to assist in removing discrimination against workers in our charitable, educational, and religious institutions.

The Advisory Council on Social Security, in its final report of December 10, 1938, makes the following recommendation:

"1. The employees of private nonprofit religious, charitable, and educational institutions now excluded from coverage under titles II and VIII should immediately be brought into coverage under the same provisions of these titles as affect other covered groups.

"The council believes that there is no justification in social policy for the exclusion of the employees of such organization from the protection afforded by the insurance program here recommended. Further, no special administrative difficulties exist in the coverage of the employees of such organizations under the system."

The administrative board agrees with the general meaning of that recommendation and would accept it unequivocally if all payments under the Social Security Act were segregated in an insurance fund and not collected as taxes in the general fund.

Workers now in excluded employments but not permanently bound to such employments may at later periods acquire benefit rights by working in such employments that are not excluded. The rights they could thus acquire, however, would not be as complete and extensive as they would be had they been working continuously in a covered employment. Thus the worker in the employment of a nonprofit organization is practically reduced in his old age to a condition of economic inferiority as compared with one who works in an employment operating for profit.

As workers become conscious of this fact and are made to feel the loss in the value of their old-age benefits, it will become increasingly difficult to find satisfactory workers willing to make the sacrifice of a part of their old-age benefits. Thus it becomes apparent that excluded employments may find the exclusion a burden rather than a benefit.

The employees of tax-exempt institutions do not enjoy the exempt status of the institutions for which they work but are subject to income and other taxes—Federal, State, and local. There is no essential difference between the services rendered under the Social Security Act by the old-age benefits system and other public services such as public education, etc.

The administrative board, therefore, pleads for a formula of participation of workers in the old-age benefits of the act without prejudice to the tax-exempt status of the nonprofit, religious, charitable, and educational institution. These institutions at the same time desire that any amendment extending to their employees the coverage of old-age benefits recognize and safeguard their traditional status of exemption from general laws of taxation.

Our nonprofit institutions of charity, education, and mercy are religious foundations. In these institutions members of the clergy and of religious orders of men and women devote their lives freely and generously to the cause of education, religion, and charity. Education and charity traditionally are fields in which the church has had an important place. The clergy and religious devote their lives to education and works of mercy without regard to compensation other than what is necessary for life. They administer and operate these institutions. To that extent they are self-employed. They should continue to be exempt as they now are under titles II, III, VIII, and IX of the act. The general welfare does not require that the coverage of old-age benefits or unemployment compensation be extended to include them.

With regard to title IX, which levies a tax on employers of eight or more in commerce and industry, the administrative board of the National Catholic Welfare Conference feels that since unemployment in religious, charitable, and educational institutions is not seasonal, there is no unemployment problem as far as they are concerned, and that here, too, their traditional tax-exempt status should be recognized.

The administrative board expresses the earnest hope that an adequate formula be written to grant coverage under the Social Security Act to the lay employees of our charitable, educational, and religious institutions. In summary, the administrative board recommends:

"(1) That lay employees of Catholic institutions be included under the provisions of the Social Security Act on the basis of a contribution on the part of the employee, but not on the part of the employer.

"(2) That the present status of our institutions as tax exempt be kept unimpaired.

"(3) That unemployment coverage be not extended to employees of religious institutions, because, since unemployment in such institutions is not seasonal, there is, generally speaking, no unemployment problems as far as they are concerned.

"(4) That clergy and religious be not included in the category of employees but in the category equivalent to the family relationship as provided in the act.

"(5) That all payments be segregated as an insurance fund rather than as a general fund constituted of taxes."

With sentiments of esteem, I remain

Respectfully yours,

MICHAEL J. REIDY,
General Secretary.

AMENDMENTS TO SOCIAL-SECURITY LAW—ADDRESS BY SENATOR WALSH

[Mr. WALSH asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD a radio address on the subject of amendments to the social-security law, delivered by him on July 1, 1939, which appears in the Appendix.]

THE RIGHT TO HEALTH—AND HOW TO WIN IT—ADDRESS BY SURGEON GENERAL PARRAN

[Mr. WAGNER asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an address delivered by Surgeon General Thomas Parran at the sixty-sixth annual meeting of the National Conference of Social Work, at Buffalo, N. Y., on June 20, 1939, which appears in the Appendix.]

THE LOUISIANA PURCHASE—ADDRESS BY JUDGE WILLIAM C. HOLMES

[Mr. HILL asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an address delivered by Judge William C. Holmes before the Louisiana Historical Society on April 30, 1939, on the occasion of the celebration of the one hundred and thirty-sixth anniversary of the signing of the Treaty of Paris; which appears in the Appendix.]

CONSIDERATION OF UNOBTAINED-TO BILLS ON THE CALENDAR

The VICE PRESIDENT. Morning business is closed.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of bills on the calendar to which there is no objection, beginning where we left off last Friday.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none. The clerk will state the first bill on the calendar under the unanimous-consent agreement.

The first business on the calendar under the unanimous-consent agreement was the bill (S. 1949) for the relief of Indian war veterans who were discharged from the Army because of minority or misrepresentation of age.

Mr. KING. Let the bill go over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

HARRY W. ROBERTSON

The bill (S. 1936) for the relief of Harry W. Robertson was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in the administration of the pension laws and any laws conferring rights and privileges upon honorably discharged soldiers, their widows and dependent relatives, Harry W. Robertson, late of Company C, Eleventh Regiment United States Infantry, shall be held and considered to have been honorably discharged from the military service of the United States as a member of said organization on December 3, 1903: Provided, That no back pay, pension, bounty, or other emolument shall accrue prior to the passage of this act.

PORT OF CASCADE LOCKS, OREG.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 255) authorizing the Secretary of War to convey to the port of Cascade Locks, Oreg., certain lands for municipal purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with an amendment, on page 1, line 6, after the word "lands", to strike out: "Commencing at a point, not monumented, on the left bank of the Columbia River, 1,206.3 feet north from the center of section 12, township 2 north, range 7 east, Willamette meridian, in Wasco County in the State of Oregon; this point being on the southerly boundary line of the R. G. Atwell, D. L. C.; thence from said initial point by metes and bounds, east 125 feet to a point; south 203.5 feet to an 8-inch by 8-inch stone with iron plug marked 'U. S.'; south 41°15' west 578.6 feet; south 29°30' east 60 feet; south 29°45' west 75 feet; south 29°13' west 58.51 feet; south 40°0' west 135.5 feet; south 37°30' west 100 feet; south 36°20' west 100 feet; south 34°15' west 101 feet; south 31°50' west 100 feet; south 30°20' west 100 feet; south 30°10' west 2,228.4 feet; south 26°20' west 414.1 feet; south 0°30' east 490 feet; south 21°15' west 990 feet; south 46°34' west 438.1 feet; north 0°6'20" west 215.58 feet; north 28°0' east 1,247.4 feet; north 7°0' west 354.42 feet; north 18°45' east 561 feet; north 19°15' west 1,237.5 feet; north 28°0' east 286.44 feet; north 11°0' west 343.2 feet; north 46°0' east 1,171.5 feet; north 88°0' east 726 feet; north 49°0' east 907.16 feet; south 55.4 feet to the point of beginning, which is on the southerly boundary of the R. G. Atwell, D. L. C."; and to insert: "Commencing at a point, not monumented, on left bank of Columbia River, 1,206.3 feet north from center of section 12, township 2 north, range 7 east, of the Willamette meridian, in Hood River County in the State of Oregon, this point being on the southerly boundary line of the R. G. Atwell, D. L. C."; so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War is authorized and directed to convey, by quitclaim deed, to the port of Cascade Locks, Oreg., all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to the following-described lands: Commencing at a point, not monumented, on left bank of Columbia River, one thousand two hundred and six and three-tenths feet north from center of section 12, township 2 north, range 7 east, of the Willamette meridian in Hood River County in the State of Oregon, this point being on the southerly boundary line of the R. G. Atwell, D. L. C.; thence from said initial point by metes and bounds east one hundred and twenty-five feet to a point; south two hundred and three and five-tenths feet to an eight-inch by eight-inch stone with iron plug marked "U. S."; south forty-one degrees fifteen minutes west five hundred and seventy-eight and six-tenths feet; south twenty-nine degrees thirty minutes east sixty feet; south twenty-nine degrees forty-five minutes west seventy-five feet; south twenty-nine degrees thirteen minutes west fifty-eight and fifty-one one-hundredths feet; south forty degrees no minutes west one hundred and thirty-five and five-tenths feet; south thirty-seven degrees thirty minutes west one hundred feet; south thirty-six degrees twenty minutes west one hundred feet; south thirty-four degrees fifteen minutes west one hundred and one feet; south thirty-one degrees fifty minutes west one hundred feet; south thirty degrees twenty minutes west one hundred feet; south thirty degrees ten minutes west one thousand five hundred and ninety and one-tenth feet; north fifty-nine degrees fifty minutes west two hundred feet; north forty-seven degrees fifteen minutes west nine hundred and fifty feet; north twenty-eight degrees no minutes east two hundred and eighty-six and forty-four one-hundredths feet; north eleven degrees no minutes west three hundred and forty-three and two tenths feet; north forty-six degrees no minutes east one thousand one hundred and seventy-one and five-tenths feet; north eighty-eight degrees no minutes east seven hundred and twenty-six feet; north forty-nine degrees no minutes east nine hundred and seven and sixteen one-hundredths feet south fifty-five and four-tenths feet to the point of beginning, which is on the southerly boundary of the R. G. Atwell, D. L. C.

SEC. 2. The Secretary of War is further authorized and directed to convey to the port of Cascade Locks, Oreg., in addition to the lands described in the first section of this act, all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to the following: All buildings and permanent fixtures, and any material, supplies, and sundry equipment abandoned by the War Department on such lands, together with the water systems, water mains, distribution lines, and water rights located on or connected with such lands.

SEC. 3. The lands and other property authorized to be conveyed by this act shall be used by the grantee for a municipal park and dock, and for other municipal purposes. The deed executed by the Secretary shall contain the express condition that if the grantee shall cease to use such land for such purposes, or shall alienate or attempt to alienate such lands, title thereto shall revert to the United States.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

TRESPASS UPON LANDS OF THE UNITED STATES

The bill (S. 2619) to provide a measure of damages for trespass involving timber and other forest products upon lands of the United States was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator from Colorado [Mr. ADAMS] explain the bill?

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, the bill was introduced at the instance of the Interior Department to provide a measure of damages for trespass on the public domain. They advised me that there was a gap in the civil-damage processes of the law. This bill merely provides for civil damages. It does not entirely meet their desire. The committee reduced the rate of damages for innocent trespass.

Mr. KING. I invite the Senator's attention to section 2. It seems rather to imply that persons having valid mining claims upon the public domain might be subjected not only to harassment but to suits, and to civil if not criminal prosecution. It seems to me there ought to be some recognition of the fact that a mining claim, when the law is complied with, transfers the equitable title to the occupant, and the legal title, of course, to the patentee. It seems to me this measure imposes too great a burden and hardship upon the locators of mining claims upon the public domain. The Senator knows that the courts recognize the validity of valid locations of mining claims, and protect the person who has made the application against trespasses by the Government or by anyone else, for that matter.

Mr. ADAMS. Does not the last part of section 2, saying that—

Nothing in this act shall interfere with or take away any right, authority, or privilege under any existing law of the United States to cut or remove timber from any public lands—

Obviate the objection of the Senator?

Mr. KING. I should like to have the Senator let the bill go over. I think it is pregnant with danger.

Mr. ADAMS. I shall be very glad to have it go over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

FISH HATCHERY, GLACIER NATIONAL PARK

The bill (S. 770) to authorize the addition to Glacier National Park, Mont., of certain property acquired for the establishment and operation of a fish hatchery, and for other purposes, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to administer as a part of the Glacier National Park, in the State of Montana, subject to all laws and regulations applicable thereto, the lands, or interests in lands, within the State of Montana, in township 28 north, range 20 west, Montana meridian, which may be acquired by the United States for the establishment and operation by the National Park Service of a fish hatchery for restocking the waters of the said park.

CORONADO NATIONAL FOREST, ARIZ.

The bill (S. 2152) to protect scenic values along the Catalina Highway within the Coronado National Forest, Ariz., was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That hereafter mining locations made under the mining laws of the United States upon lands within 400 feet of the center line of the Catalina Highway, Coronado National Forest, Ariz., which highway begins at the south boundary of said national forest near the southeast corner of section 7, township 13 south, range 16 east, Gila and Salt River base and meridian, and runs in a general northerly direction for a distance of about 25 miles to Soldier Camp, shall confer on the locator no right to the surface of the land described in his location other than the right to occupy and use, under the rules and regulations relating to the administration of the Coronado National Forest, so much thereof as may be reasonably necessary to carry on prospecting and mining, and shall not authorize the taking of any resource other than the mineral deposits, or the occupancy of said land for any purpose other than prospecting and mining; and each patent issued thereafter under the United States mining laws upon a mineral location made upon lands within 400 feet of said center line shall convey title only to the mineral deposits within said land and the right, subject to rules and regulations relating to the national forests, to occupy and use the surface of the land for prospecting and mining only: Provided, That valid mining claims within said lands existing on the date of enactment of this act and thereafter maintained in compliance with the laws under which they were initiated and the laws of the State of Arizona may be perfected in accordance with the laws under which they were initiated.

LIMITATION OF COST OF CONSTRUCTION OF BUILDINGS IN NATIONAL PARKS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2624) to amend the act of August 24, 1912 (37 Stat. 460), as amended, with regard to the limitation of cost upon the construction of buildings in national parks, which had been reported from the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys with an amendment, on page 1, line 8, after the word "to", to strike out "$5,000" and insert "$3,000", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the limitation of cost upon the construction of any administration or other building in any national park without express authority of Congress, contained in the act approved August 24, 1912 (37 Stat. 460), as amended by the act of July 1, 1918 (40 Stat. 677), is hereby increased from $1,500 to $3,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ARIZONA STATE ELKS ASSOCIATION HOSPITAL

The bill (S. 5) to grant certain lands to the Arizona State Elks Association Hospital was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Executive Order No. 2295 and dated January 1, 1916, as modified by the Executive Order No. 6971 and dated February 19, 1935, is hereby further modified by the elimination from the provisions of said Executive order as modified of a certain tract of land particularly described as follows, to wit: The north 200 feet northwest quarter northwest quarter section 10, township 14 south, range 13 east, Gila and Salt River base and meridian; in all, an area approximately 200 feet wide by approximately 1,315.28 feet long.

SEC. 2. The Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and directed to issue patent covering the lands described in section 1 hereof to the Arizona State Elks Association Hospital.

ENROLLMENT OF MENOMINEE INDIAN CHILDREN

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 4497) to prescribe rules for the enrollment of Menominee Indian children born to enrolled parents, and for other purposes, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That, regardless of the act of June 15, 1934 (48 Stat. L. 965), upon receipt of proper birth certificates the names of unenrolled living Menominee Indian children born prior to that date of an enrolled parent or parents residing on the reservation at the time of their birth, and the names of children born thereafter otherwise qualified under section 4 of said act but irrespective of the derivation of their Menominee blood, shall be automatically placed upon the official roll approved on December 27, 1935; and such children shall be entitled to participate in any tribal payments made between the time of their birth and enrollment.

SEC. 2. The Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and directed on or before June 30, 1941, to investigate and determine the correct degree of Menominee Indian blood of every person whose name appears on the basic official roll as originally approved December 27, 1935. The determination made by the Secretary of the Interior shall be final and conclusive for enrollment purposes under the act of June 15, 1934, as modified herein, and any changes necessary to conform to such determination shall be made in the appropriate column of said roll.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, may I have an explanation of the bill from the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE]?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, this is a House bill which has already passed the House. It is designed to correct certain inequalities that exist with respect to the present Menominee Indian rolls.

The measure is drawn to accomplish the following results:

First. To permit the names of certain Menominees who by mistake were not placed on the Menominee Tribe roll to be placed thereon.

Second. To permit children of enrolled members to be automatically placed on the tribal roll as they are born.

Third. To permit the correction of certain erroneous entries in the tribal roll.

The committee, after giving the measure consideration, felt that it was entirely justified, and there were no indications of opposition by anyone. The enactment of the bill will not involve any expense to the Government itself. It is simply to correct erroneous entries on the tribal rolls and to accomplish the other results which I have already suggested.

Mr. KING. I have no objection.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the third reading and passage of the bill.

The bill was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

AMENDMENT OF EMPLOYEES' COMPENSATION ACT

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 607) to amend section 40 of the act entitled "An act to provide compensation for employees of the United States suffering injuries while in the performance of their duties, and for other purposes," approved September 7, 1916, as amended, which had been reported from the Committee on Indian Affairs with an amendment, on page 2, line 6, after the word "amended" to insert "or any other act relating to tribal timber and logging operations on the Menominee Reservation", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 40 of the act entitled "An act to provide compensation for employees of the United States suffering injuries while in the performance of their duties, and for other purposes", approved September 7, 1916, as amended, is amended by inserting after the words "Panama Railroad Co." the following: "and all persons, other than independent contractors and their employees, employed on the Menominee Indian Reservation in the State of Wisconsin, subsequent to September 7, 1916, in operations conducted pursuant to the act entitled 'An act to authorize the cutting of timber, the manufacture and sale of lumber, and the preservation of the forests on the Menominee Indian Reservation in the State of Wisconsin', approved March 28, 1908, as amended, or any other act relating to tribal timber and logging operations on the Menominee Reservation."

Sec. 2. Any award heretofore made by the United States Employees' Compensation Commission under such act of September 7, 1916, to persons coming within the purview of the first section hereof, for disability or death resulting from a personal injury sustained prior to the enactment of this act, shall be valid, if such award would be valid if made in respect to an injury or death sustained after the enactment of this act. Any claim for disability or death to any person coming within the purview of the first section hereof, if such disability or death occurred prior to the enactment of this act, may be filed at any time within 1 year after the enactment hereof.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I note that the Acting Secretary of the Interior is opposed to this bill.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, that is not my understanding. The bill has been amended in accordance with the suggestions made by the Acting Secretary of the Interior.

I may say to the Senator that for 20 years prior to 1936 the employees on the Menominee Indian Reservation—and, as the Senator from Utah and other Senators know, they have a mill in operation there—were held by the United States Employees' Compensation Commission to be civilian employees of the Government. In 1936 the Commission reversed its ruling. It seems in all justice that the status of the employees has not changed, and that they are entitled to come under the United States Employees' Compensation Act.

The Committee on Indian Affairs has incorporated in the bill the amendments suggested by the Acting Secretary of the Interior; and it is my understanding that with these amendments the bill meets the approval of the Secretary.

Mr. KING. Does it deal exclusively with the Indians upon the reservation?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Exclusively with those upon the Menominee Reservation. I desire further to reassure the Senator by stating that a similar measure had consideration in a previous session of Congress, was favorably reported and passed the Senate, but did not reach the House of Representatives in time to be acted upon in that session of Congress.

Mr. KING. The Senator, then, gives us the assurance that the objection made by the Acting Secretary of the Interior has been met by the amendments?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. That is my understanding.

Mr. KING. I have no objection.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WILLIAM F. PACK

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1618) granting an annuity to William F. Pack, which had been reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with an amendment, on page 2, line 2, after the words "rate of", to strike out "$1,800" and insert "$1,200", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That in recognition of the years of distinguished and conspicuous service of William F. Pack to the United States in the Philippine Islands as Governor of Benguet Province from November 15, 1901, to March 15, 1909, and as Governor of the Mountain Province from March 15, 1909, to December 31, 1912, and in further recognition of the fact that as the result of his unselfish devotion to duty under most trying and dangerous conditions during such years caused him to be permanently and totally disabled, the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to the said William F. Pack, an annuity at the rate of $1,200 per annum, in monthly installments, the first installment to be due and payable on the 1st day of the month following the date of enactment of this act.

Sec. 2. The annuity provided for by this act shall be in addition to any pension, compensation, or disability benefits payable to the said William F. Pack on account of services in the military or naval forces of the United States.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

LANDS IN WEST VIRGINIA

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1750) authorizing the Secretary of War to convey to the town of Marmet, W. Va., two tracts of land to be used for municipal purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with amendments, on page 1, line 5, after the word "Virginia", to insert "subject to the reservations and conditions hereinafter contained, all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to"; on page 4, line 16, after the word "on", to strike out "such" and insert "said"; in line 17, after "3-A", to insert: "There is expressly excepted and reserved to the United States of America an easement of way for all right-of-way purposes whenever the same may be required, on, over, in, and across each of the two tracts hereinabove described, for the use and benefit of the United States of America, its successors and assigns, and there is likewise hereby excepted and reserved to the United States of America the perpetual easement and right to flood such part or parts of each of the two tracts of land hereinabove described as may be necessary so to do, from time to time, in the interests of navigation or flood control"; on page 5, line 5, after the words "nine and", to strike out "fifty" and insert "fifty-one"; in line 23, after the word "to", to strike out "(1)"; and on page 6, line 2, after the word "them", to strike out "(2) make such conveyance subject to the reservations and exceptions contained in subparagraphs (a), (b), (c), (d), and (e) of the decree title obtained by the United States in the condemnation proceeding referred to in subsection (b) of the first section of this act, but only to the extent that such reservations and exceptions are applicable to or affect such tracts of land; (3) reserve to the United States an easement to maintain a right-of-way over such tract No. 1; and (4) reserve to the United States the right to flood such tracts of land, from time to time, in the interests of navigation", so as to make the bill read:

Tract No. 1. Beginning at an iron pin in the eastern right-of-way line of the old county road at the southwest corner of the A. J. Baker land (now the property of the United States); thence from said point of beginning and running along and with said eastern right-of-way line north twenty-six degrees fifty-seven minutes west one hundred and seventy-one feet to an iron pin in said line; thence continuing along and with said eastern right-of-way line north twenty-three degrees fifty-eight minutes west two hundred and eleven and five one-hundredths feet to an iron pin in said right-of-way line at the southerly corner of the lands of Mary B. Meyers and the northwest corner of the said A. J. Baker land; thence, along and with the Meyers-Baker boundary line, north sixty degrees thirty-two minutes east one hundred and twenty-one and eighteen one-hundredths feet to an iron pin in the intersection of the westerly right-of-way boundary line of the Charleston Interurban Railroad Co.; thence, and running with and along the said Charleston Interurban Railroad right-of-way line, south twenty-four degrees thirty-two minutes east two hundred and sixteen and thirty one-hundredths feet to an iron pin in said right-of-way line; thence, continuing with and along said right-of-way line, south twenty-seven degrees east one hundred and sixty-six and fifty-two one-hundredths feet to the point of intersection with the boundary line between the said A. J. Baker land and the H. H. Smallridge and Industrial Center subdivision of the town of Marmet; thence, with and along said Baker-Industrial Center boundary line, south sixty-one degrees twenty-three minutes west one hundred and twenty-three and eighteen one-hundredths feet to the point of beginning, containing one and seven one-hundredths acres, more or less, and designated on United States Army engineer's plat, "Kanawha River Locks & Dam No. 2, Real Estate, U. S. Engineer Office, Huntington, W. Va., March 1935 (File No. 023-L2-11/1)", as "3-B."

Tract No. 2. Beginning at the point of intersection of the eastern boundary right-of-way line of the Charleston Interurban Railroad Co. and the northerly boundary line of the A. J. Baker land, and on the right-of-way line between said Charleston Interurban Railroad and the West Virginia State Highway Route No. 61; thence from said point of beginning, and along and with said Baker line, north sixty degrees thirty-two minutes east four hundred and twenty and sixty-nine one-hundredths feet to a point in said Baker line; thence south twenty-nine degrees twenty-eight minutes east three hundred and thirty-eight and ninety-one one-hundredths feet to the intersection of the north line of a fifty-foot street (now unnamed); thence, with the line of said street, south sixty-one degrees twenty-three minutes west three hundred and seventy-nine and thirty-nine one-hundredths feet to a point in said street line; thence north eighty-seven degrees thirteen minutes west seventy-four and eighty-eight one-hundredths feet to a point in the right-of-way boundary line between the said Charleston Interurban Railroad Co. and the West Virginia State Highway Route No. 61, said point being eighty-nine and seven one-hundredths feet distant, in a northerly direction, from the southerly boundary line of the A. J. Baker land; thence, running with and along said right-of-way boundary line, north twenty-seven degrees west seventy-seven and forty-five one-hundredths feet to a point in said boundary line; thence, continuing with said right-of-way boundary line, north twenty-four degrees thirty-two minutes west two hundred and sixteen and seventy-five one-hundredths feet to the point of beginning, containing three and three hundred seventeen one-thousandths acres, more or less, and being a part of the portion of the nine-acre Baker tract designated on said United States Army Engineers' plat as "3-A." There is expressly excepted and reserved to the United States of America an easement of way for all right-of-way purposes whenever the same may be required on, over, in, and across each of the two tracts hereinabove described, for the use and benefit of the United States of America, its successors and assigns, and there is likewise hereby excepted and reserved to the United States of America the perpetual easement and right to flood such part or parts of each of the two tracts of land hereinabove described as may be necessary so to do, from time to time, in the interests of navigation or flood control.

(b) The two tracts of land described in subsection (a) of this section are parts, and come out of, that certain lot, piece, and parcel of land containing nine and fifty-one one-hundredths acres, more or less, which was acquired by the United States through a condemnation proceeding had in the United States District Court for the Southern District of West Virginia, sitting in the city of Charleston, W. Va., on November 9, 1933, and styled United States of America against A. J. Baker and others, a copy of the final decree in such proceeding being recorded on November 18, 1933, in the office of the clerk of the county court of Kanawha County, W. Va., in Deed Book No. 390, at page 527 thereof, to which reference is made for a more complete description.

SEC. 2. The two tracts of land, the conveyance of which is authorized by the first section of this act, shall be held and used by the grantee for the purposes of a public park and recreational site and for similar and related municipal purposes. The deed of conveyance of such tracts of land to be executed by the Secretary of War shall contain appropriate provisions to provide for a reversion of such tracts of land to the United States in the event the grantee shall fail to use, or shall cease using, them for such purposes, or shall alienate, or attempt to alienate, any part of them.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MICHAEL J. QUINN

The bill (S. 2031) authorizing the Secretary of War to bestow the Silver Star upon Michael J. Quinn was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That notwithstanding the provisions of the act of May 26, 1928, the Secretary of War is authorized to pass upon the recommendations now in the War Department for the award of the Silver Star citation to Michael J. Quinn, late of Battery B, Seventh Regiment United States Field Artillery, and, if such recommendations are found sufficient under the law governing the award of the Silver Star to award such decoration to Michael J. Quinn.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 1836) to promote farm ownership by amending the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act to provide for Government-insured loans to farmers; to encourage sale of farms held by absentee owners to farm tenants; and to enable tenant farmers to become owners of farm homes through long-term low-interest-rate loans on farms, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. This bill, being the unfinished business, will be passed over.

WIDOW AND CHILDREN OF DR. JOE M. FERGUSON

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 753) for the relief of the widow and children of Dr. Joe M. Ferguson, which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment, to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That the Veterans' Administration is hereby authorized and directed to cancel an alleged overpayment in the sum of $7,051.94 charged against Dr. Joe M. Ferguson for disabled emergency officers' retirement payments received by him and to pay to the widow and children of Dr. Ferguson the sum of $7,666.21, representing the net balance payable of the proceeds of insurance policy K-18334 issued to Dr. Ferguson, and the civil-service retirement fund credited to Dr. Ferguson at the time of his death on September 21, 1938: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I observe that Mr. Hines, the Administrator, reports adversely on this bill. In view of his adverse report, I should like an explanation of the bill.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. Mr. President, I will make a brief explanation of the bill.

The bill is entitled "A bill for the relief of the widow and children of Dr. Joe M. Ferguson." When Dr. Ferguson died, he had a war-risk insurance policy of some ten-thousand-and-odd dollars. Dr. Ferguson was found by an investigating committee to have filed a certain false affidavit in aid of his claim for compensation under the World War Veterans' Act of 1924. For that reason he was charged with the sum of $2,983.82, which had been paid to him, and which was forfeited under the provisions of section 504 of the World War Veterans' Act.

The doctor filed an affidavit signed by the name of another physician, and there was a controversy as to how that affidavit came into existence. It was the doctor's contention that he had prepared an affidavit for the other physician stating that his first treatment of the doctor was in January 1920, and that he had left it with the doctor or with the notary for the doctor's signature. Dr. Ferguson was called away and was not present when the affidavit was executed. He says in his own defense that he prepared this form of affidavit for the doctor to sign—I do not recall the other doctor's name—and that the other doctor prepared an affidavit and signed it, which changed the dates, or some of them, but for some reason or other the notary public who had the two affidavits attached his jurat to the one which had been prepared as a form, according to Dr. Ferguson. However that may be, the committee has recommended that the $2,983.82 that was paid to Dr. Ferguson under the World War Veterans' Act should be deducted from the insurance.

Under the act of March 24, 1928, which was the Emergency Officers' Retirement Act, Dr. Ferguson again submitted an application. In the meantime he had been from time to time examined by various physicians in the Veterans' Administration, and there was no doubt of his disability, and no doubt of the extent of his disability. Under the Emergency Officers' Retirement Act he received a total, prior to his death, of $7,051.94.

The difference between the committee and the Veterans' Administration is that the Administration appears to be of opinion that, notwithstanding the fact that there is no penalty provision in the Emergency Officers' Retirement Act, still the fact that the doctor was found guilty of having submitted a false affidavit under the World War Veterans' Act presented a difficulty which followed the doctor into the subsequent legislation of March 24, 1928.

The committee is of opinion that that holding is not correct, that there is no provision in the Emergency Officers' Retirement Act such as section 504 of the World War Veterans' Act, and that the doctor's prior delinquency, or wrongful act, under the World War Veterans' Act, should not be carried along and follow him into the Emergency Officers' Retirement Act.

In view of these matters the committee was of opinion, and so recommended, that of the total credits due Dr. Ferguson's heirs, his wife, and his two children, $10,699.03, there should be deducted the $2,983.82 and the pension of $49, leaving a net balance to which they are entitled of $7,666.21. After consideration, the committee has so reported.

Mr. KING. I have no objection.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill for the relief of the widow and children of Dr. Jo M. Ferguson."

BARNET WARREN

The bill (S. 2271) for the relief of Barnet Warren was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let the bill go over.

Mr. LOGAN. Mr. President, will not the Senator withhold his objection for a moment so that I may explain the bill?

Mr. KING. I am very glad to do so.

Mr. LOGAN. I may say that this is an emergency case, and that is why I make the request. I never object to a bill in which I am interested going over.

Mr. President, this is a case where negligence has been admitted. The young man involved has been so seriously injured that he has been in the hospital for several months. His sister, whom I happen to know very well, spent all the money she had, some $2,500 or $3,000, having her brother treated. It is necessary that he leave the hospital, because his sister cannot pay any more money.

The negligence is admitted. The Senator from Wyoming [Mr. SCHWARTZ], one of the most careful members we have on the committee, went into this matter most carefully, and made the recommendation which appears in the report.

Mr. KING. I assumed we were considering Calendar No. 703. I have no objection to this bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2271) for the relief of Barnet Warren, which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment, to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Barnet Warren the sum of $2,459.34, and the additional sum of $100 per month in an amount not to exceed $5,000, in full settlement of all his claims against the United States growing out of any damages or personal injuries suffered by him when a Civilian Conservation Corps truck, operated at the time by the National Park Service, collided with the said Barnet Warren, who was riding a bicycle north on United States Highway No. 1 near Ojus, Fla., on March 17, 1939: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WALTER PETERSEN

The bill (S. 2156) for the relief of Walter Petersen was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, Mr. Hanes, the Acting Secretary of the Treasury, has voiced his opposition to this bill, and I ask that it go over.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. I did not hear what the Senator had to say.

Mr. KING. I called attention to the fact that the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Hanes, did not approve the bill, and suggested that this man be remitted to his action in the courts. In view of that recommendation, I think the bill ought to go over.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. I think possibly a short explanation might meet the objection the Senator has in mind.

Mr. KING. I am merely relying on Secretary Hanes.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. Let us assume for a moment that the bill is meritorious except for the fact that the Department was of opinion that the claimant had not exhausted all his legal remedies before coming to Congress.

The fact is that this claimant was denied relief below, and referred to the Comptroller's office. The record shows that the Comptroller's office has held that there is no power in the War Department to pay for damages incident to delay.

Mr. KING. I call the Senator's attention to the statement of Mr. Hanes, Acting Secretary of the Treasury, a man of very great courage and very great devotion to his duty, as follows:

The contractor's failure to present any claim also leaves the Department without information to verify the correctness of the amount claimed. It seems probable that the alleged losses of $5,300 are excessive, and it would be necessary for the contractor to submit detailed information and evidence before the Department could approve any amount in settlement of the claim.

For these reasons the Department feels that the contractor should be left to the pursuit of his existing remedies and does not recommend the enactment of this bill.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. Reading further from the same report, we find that the Acting Secretary of the Treasury says:

It appears to the Department that the contractor is entitled to an "equitable adjustment" of the contract price pursuant to article 3, above quoted, to compensate for any expense incident to delay in connection with the changes here in question.

All the changes being made by the Government.

Although further action by the Department is precluded by the final settlement of the contract, claims of this type have been allowed by the General Accounting Office, and it appears that the claimant's existing remedies have not been exhausted.

Following that the claimant went to the General Accounting Office, and he was advised there that—

While the act of June 6, 1902, applicable to Treasury Department contracts, provides for the remission, under certain conditions, of liquidated damages for delays from whatever cause, there is no statute providing for payment by the United States to the contractor of losses by reason of delays.

There is more to the same effect. So, as a practical matter, the claimant has no further remedy, he has exhausted all remedies available to him below, and it seems to me that the sole question, under the circumstances, is as to the merit of his claim.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I think we had better have further explanation from the Secretary.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

LE ROY BREITHAUP

The bill (S. 1839) for the relief of Le Roy Breithaupt was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Comptroller General is authorized and directed to cancel the charges against Le Roy Breithaupt, of Corvallis, Oreg., in the sum of $1,302.78, representing the unpaid balance of the claim of the United States against said Le Roy Breithaupt (U. S. claim No. COL-0665045) for refund of sums received by him from the United States as compensation for services as an agent in the Oregon Cooperative Extension Service during the period he was employed upon a per diem basis by the Farm Credit Administration.

ALLEGHENY FORGING CO.

The bill (H. R. 3673) for the relief of the Allegheny Forging Co. was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let the bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

BRUNO ARENA

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1445) for the relief of Bruno Arena, which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with amendments, on page 1, line 6, to strike out "$5,000" and insert "$2,112.40"; and on page 2, line 2, to strike out "That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000"; and to insert "That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Bruno Arena, of Providence, R. I., the sum of $2,112.40, in full satisfaction of all claims against the United States for damages for personal injuries and medical expenses sustained by him when he was struck by a United States mail truck in the service of the United States Post Office Department, operated by William Conlon, an employee of the United States Post Office Department, on Promenade Street, Providence, R. I., on February 20, 1933: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

EDITH EASTON AND ALMA E. GATES

The bill (S. 2607) authorizing the Comptroller General of the United States to settle and adjust the claim of Edith Easton and Alma E. Gates was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Comptroller General of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to settle and adjust the claim of Edith Easton and Alma E. Gates, of Sacramento, Calif., for $250, as the reasonable value of 25,000 board feet of lumber removed without authority from their land in Calaveras County, Calif., during July and August 1933, by members of the Civilian Conservation Corps, camp F-88, Dorrington, Calif., and to allow in full and final settlement of the claim the sum of not to exceed $250. There is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $250, or so much thereof as may be necessary, for payment of the claim: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

CITIZENS STATE BANK OF MARIANNA, FLA.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1810) for the relief of the Citizens State Bank of Marianna, Fla., which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment, on page 1, line 11, to insert "Provided, That the Comptroller General of the United States is authorized and directed to credit the account of the Treasurer of the United States with the sum of $692.09, representing the total amount of checks numbered 35862, 37109, 41815, 5829, and 28808," so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That all claims of the United States against the Citizens State Bank of Marianna, Fla., in the amount of $692.09, such sum representing five checks fraudulently negotiated by forged endorsements to such Citizens State Bank by an agent of the United States Seed Loan Department, and such checks having been cleared through the usual channels and charged back to the Treasurer of the United States by the General Accounting Office, shall be held and considered to have been satisfied as of the date of the enactment of this act: Provided, That the Comptroller General of the United States is authorized and directed to credit the account of the Treasurer of the United States with the sum of $692.09, representing the total amount of checks Nos. 35862, 37109, 41815, 5829, and 28808.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 1989) to provide for the alteration of certain bridges over navigable waters of the United States for the apportionment of the cost of such alterations between the United States and the owners of such bridges, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. HATCH. I ask that the bill be passed over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

GEORGE H. EISWALD

The bill (S. 2157) for the relief of George H. Eiswald was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in the administration of the pension laws or any laws conferring rights, privileges, or benefits upon persons honorably discharged from the United States Navy, George H. Eiswald (C-2317652) shall be held and considered to have served for 90 days, between the dates of April 21, 1898, and July 4, 1902, in the United States Navy during the War with Spain and to have been honorably discharged from such service: Provided, That no pension, pay, or bounty shall be held to have accrued by reason of this act prior to its enactment.

SGT. MAJ. EDWIN O. SWIFT

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 4511) to extend to Sgt. Maj. Edwin O. Swift, United States Marine Corps (retired), the benefits of the act of May 7, 1932, providing highest World War rank to retired enlisted men.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, may we have an explanation of the bill?

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, Sgt. Maj. Edwin O. Swift served 30 years in the Marine Corps, and retired with the rank of sergeant major. There is a general law which provides that an officer in the Navy, Marine Corps, or the Army, may retire at the highest rank he has at any time held. Sergeant Major Swift for a few months during the World War held the rank of second lieutenant in the Marine Corps. The bill provides that he may be considered to have retired with that rank. It does not increase his retirement pay or his allowances, and results in no extra cost to the Government. The passage of the measure is recommended by the Navy Department.

Mr. KING. I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 1708) to amend section 51 of chapter 2, title 45, of the Code of Laws of the United States of America, was announced as next in order.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I ask for an explanation of the bill. If we can have no explanation at this time, I ask that the bill be passed over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

HOURS OF EMPLOYMENT ON WIOTA-FORT PECK RAILROAD

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2639) relating to the hours of service of persons employed upon the Government-owned Wiota-Fort Peck Railroad in the State of Montana, which was read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the provisions of the act entitled "An act relating to the limitation of the hours of daily service of laborers and mechanics employed upon the public works of the United States and of the District of Columbia," approved August 1, 1892, as amended, shall not be applicable with respect to the service and employment of persons employed in connection with the operation or maintenance of the Government-owned Wiota-Fort Peck Railroad in the State of Montana; but the hours of labor or service of such persons shall be limited to the same extent that such hours of labor or service would be limited, if the United States in the operation of such railroad were a common carrier subject to the provisions of the act entitled "An act to promote the safety of employees and travelers upon railroads by limiting the hours of service of employees thereon," approved March 4, 1907, as amended.

SEC. 2. Any officer or agent of the United States whose duty it shall be to employ, direct, or control any person employed in connection with the operation or maintenance of such railroad who shall intentionally require or permit such person to be employed for hours of labor or service in violation of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and for each and every such offense shall, upon conviction, be punished by a fine of not to exceed $1,000 or by imprisonment for not more than 6 months, or by both such fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court having jurisdiction thereof.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, let the bill be passed over.

Mr. MURRAY. Mr. President, will the Senator withhold his request in order that I may make an explanation of the bill?

Mr. KING. I withhold my request.

Mr. MURRAY. The bill is intended to relieve a very embarrassing situation in connection with the construction work going on at Fort Peck Dam, Mont. The Government operates a small railroad there in connection with the work. The railroad is used in connection with the construction work and also for the purpose of carrying materials and supplies to the site of the dam. The Attorney General has issued an opinion to the effect that the railroad in question is not a common carrier, and therefore the Federal law limiting the hours of work for the men employed on this railroad to 8 hours a day is applicable. The bill is intended to relieve the railroad from the provisions of that act, and to make it possible for the men to work longer than 8 hours a day in order to transact the business in connection with the construction of the dam.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MURRAY. I yield.

Mr. KING. Does the measure extend the principle indefinitely?

Mr. MURRAY. No; it is only intended to apply to the work on the dam during the time the railroad will be in operation. It allows the men to work more than 8 hours a day in order to expedite the work of the dam.

Mr. KING. Who is constructing the dam?

Mr. MURRAY. Private contractors, but the Government owns the line and is operating it as a Government line. The railroad performs work in connection with the construction of the dam, and also carries the materials and supplies to the site of the dam.

Mr. KING. Would these employees be the employees of the Government?

Mr. MURRAY. And the Government has wholly limited the hours of employment to 8 hours. The pending measure will permit the men to work longer than 8 hours, just as on a common carrier.

Mr. KING. Very well.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

RIGHT-OF-WAY FOR BONNEVILLE PROJECT

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2634) to reserve to the United States for the Bonneville project a right-of-way across certain Indian lands in the State of Washington, subject to the consent of the individual allottees and the payment of compensation, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Indian Affairs, with an amendment, on page 2, line 2, after the word "tribal" to strike out "council" and insert "council," so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby reserved to the United States for the Bonneville project a right-of-way in the nature of an easement not to exceed 300 feet in width across allotted and tribal lands on the Yakima Indian Reservation, in the State of Washington, for the construction, operation, and maintenance of electric transmission lines, with the right of ingress and egress, and such additional area as may be necessary for a substation.

SEC. 2. This reservation is subject to the consent of the individual allottees and the tribal council, to the approval of a map of definite location by the Secretary of the Interior, and to the payment of such compensation as he may determine. Should any allottee refuse to give his consent, condemnation under the provisions of the act of August 1, 1888 (25 Stat. 357), is hereby authorized. The right is reserved to the Indians to cultivate or otherwise utilize the right-of-way in such manner as will not be inconsistent with the use thereof for transmission-line purposes.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like to inquire whether or not the Indian tribe or representatives of the tribe have assented to the measure, and whether they are to be paid for any damage to their land? We want to take care of the Indians.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, I may explain the measure to the Senator from Utah and to other Senators. All the negotiations for the easements across the land have been concluded and the price agreed on. It so happens that the statute authorized other forms of private utilities to pass over the land, but by a peculiar construction of the statute it does not authorize the Bonneville line to go across the land. All the arrangements have been made, all the contracts with the Indians have been closed for other lines. The Indians are satisfied with the payments which have been negotiated through the proper officials.

Mr. KING. I have no objection if the Indians are properly protected and paid for the lands which are being taken.

Mr. BONE. As a matter of fact some of them have almost obtained their money. Agreements have been made which are satisfactory to all.

Mr. KING. I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 2185) to provide for the appointment of additional district and circuit judges was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, it will take some time to consider that bill. I object to its consideration today.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

ACQUISITION OF ADDITIONAL LANDS FOR MILITARY PURPOSES

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2586) to authorize the acquisition of additional land for military purposes, which was read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War is hereby authorized to acquire, in such order or priority as he may determine, title to additional land, or interest therein, or right pertaining thereto, to the extent of the approximate areas hereinafter set forth, for the establishment, enlargement, and essential improvement of the following military reservations, posts, and facilities:

Fort Ethan Allen Artillery Range, Vt., 4,451 acres, more or less.
Antiaircraft Firing Range, Mohave Desert, north of Barstow and Baker, Calif., 749,440 acres, more or less.
Fort Bliss, Tex., 51,300 acres, more or less.
Fort Devens, Mass., 6,448 acres, more or less.
Fort Dix, N. J., 1,750 acres, more or less.
Fort Knox, Ky., 51,342 acres, more or less.
Leon Springs, Tex., 13,253 acres, more or less.
Camp McCoy, Wis., 1,000 acres, more or less.
Fort George G. Meade, Md., 10,000 acres, more or less.
Pine Camp, N. Y., 1,670 acres, more or less.
Seventh Corps Area Training Center, south central Iowa, 40,000 acres, more or less.

Fort Meade, S. Dak., 7,680 acres, more or less.
 Fort Lewis, Wash., 2,830 acres, more or less.
 Maxwell Field, Ala., 100 acres, more or less.

Sec. 2. In order to accomplish the purposes of this act there is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of War, the sum of $5,000,000, approximately one-half of which is authorized to be appropriated in each of the fiscal years 1941 and 1942.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like to inquire whether the War Department approves of the bill, and whether provision can be made for the payment.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, this is an authorization bill.

Mr. KING. How much will it cost?

Mr. SHEPPARD. The total authorization is $5,000,000, but the money will be appropriated as the Appropriations Committee considers each particular project and passes upon it. The War Department favors most of the projects contained in the bill.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, we have now passed bills for the War Department appropriating $1,000,000,000. One bill carried $165,000,000, and my understanding is that provision was made in it for the acquisition of land. Then we passed a bill carrying sixty-odd million dollars.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Those bills related mainly to construction. I shall be glad to give the Senate a brief explanation of the measure under consideration.

Mr. KING. I think the bill had better go over in view of the enormous appropriation we have already made for the War Department. The bill calls for $5,000,000 more.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I think it is due to the committee that I be given an opportunity to explain why the committee favorably reported the bill.

Mr. KING. I have no objection.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, the War Department requested authorization of $5,000,000 to acquire additional land at 11 military reservations for training purposes. In detail the reasons for this land acquisition are:

First. Advances in mechanization and motorization require additional maneuver areas.

Second. Increased ranges of modern weapons and ammunition demand the expansion of existing target ranges in order to safeguard life and property.

Third. Existing antiaircraft target ranges are makeshift in character and entirely inadequate for tactical training since firing is limited to small arcs over land and water.

The War Department states in its report that additional land is required at many other military posts but has refrained from requesting authorization for all the land needed at all posts because of budgetary restrictions.

The committee has added in the bill additional land for three other posts, viz:

Cost

Fort Meade, S. Dak., 7,680 acres	$12,000
Fort Lewis, Wash., 2,830 acres	100,000
Maxwell Field, Ala., 100 acres	100,000

The additional land for Fort Mead, S. Dak., is needed to provide for training activities of the South Dakota National Guard. The guard of the State is without a permanent State camp. The most economical solution is to provide a suitable maneuver area at Fort Meade.

Fort Lewis, Wash., requires additional land for the improvement of range facilities and expansion of maneuver areas. The troops at this post are handicapped for range facilities because of excepted tracts of land inside the present reservation owned and operated by farmers, and it is to relieve this condition that 2,830 acres are desired.

Maxwell Field, Ala., requires about 100 acres of additional land in order to improve sanitary conditions at this reservation. This land is occupied by dwellings which have no sewage or plumbing facilities.

The bill carries the authorization desired by the Department and the additional items inserted by the committee. The measure meets fundamental and immediate needs. I hope the Senator will permit the bill to pass.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. SHEPPARD. I yield.

Mr. HILL. Are we not confronted with the situation that it is costing the Government money not to purchase this land for the reason that it is absolutely necessary that the troops have a certain amount of training and carry on a certain number of maneuvers each year, as well as target practice, and today we are being forced to spend a great deal of money in transporting and moving troops over great areas so that they may have the necessary training and target practices, whereas if we bought this land we would save great transportation costs? In other instances we are being forced to rent land. Those rentals run into high figures. They would be saved by the purchase of the land in question. Is it not true that the War Department went over the question of the need for land and combed it and recombined it, and has sent these items here after exhaustive study; that the sum of $5,000,000 provided in the bill was approved by the Bureau of the Budget; and that the bill is only an authorization bill, and no money is being appropriated at the present time?

Mr. SHEPPARD. The Senator from Alabama is quite correct. I hope the Senator from Utah will allow the bill to pass.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, any appeal which may be made to the Senate or the House for that matter—if I may be permitted to refer to the House—for larger appropriations for military purposes, or for naval purposes, meets with most generous response. There seems to be no opposition to such appeals. Before we adjourn we shall have provided more than $2,000,000,000 for military and naval purposes for the next fiscal year. Perhaps we may appropriate as much as two and one-half billion dollars. Therefore, $5,000,000 seems to be quite an insignificant sum. It would appear unimportant when compared with the $2,000,000,000 plus which we have already appropriated or authorized. I suppose in view of the enormous spending spree indulged in both by the Army and the Navy we had better let the measure pass.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I thank the Senator.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CONSTRUCTION WORK FOR THE ARMY

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2562) to facilitate certain construction work for the Army, and for other purposes, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That to enable the Secretary of War to accomplish without delay or excessive cost those public-works projects for which appropriations are available or may become available, to be located outside the continental limits of the United States, he is hereby authorized to enter into contracts upon a cost-plus-a-fixed-fee basis after such negotiations as he may authorize and approve and without advertising for proposals with reference thereto. Approval by the President shall be necessary to the validity of any contract entered into under authority of this section. The fixed fee to be paid the contractor as a result of any contract entered into under authority of this section shall be determined at or before the time such contract is made, and shall be set forth in such contract. Such fee shall not exceed 10 percent of the estimated cost of the contract, exclusive of the fee, as determined by the Secretary of War. Changes in the amount of the fee shall be made only upon material changes in the scope of the work concerned as determined by the Secretary of War, whose determination shall be conclusive.

(b) Negotiations under this section shall be between the Secretary of War, or a duly authorized representative, and three or more reputable and qualified contracting individuals, firms, or corporations regularly engaged in work of comparable magnitude and class to that contemplated by the negotiations, as determined by the Secretary of War, and contracts may be made with any such individual, firm, or corporation, or with any two or more of them jointly, upon such terms and conditions as the Secretary of War may determine to be fair and equitable and in the interests of the national defense. For each contract entered into under authority of this section the Secretary of War may detail an Army officer to duty, without additional compensation, as an executive representative of the contracting officer. The contract shall provide that the officer so detailed shall have the right to attend any meetings of the board of directors or other executive or administrative board or committee of any corporation, partnership, firm, or syndicate which is or may become a party thereto for the purpose of submitting propositions, propounding questions, and receiving information relative to any matter within the purview of the contract with the intent and for the purpose of safeguarding the interests of the United States, coordinating efforts, and promoting mutually beneficial relationships, and making decisions within the scope of his delegated authority and not in conflict with any provision of the contract.

(c) In any project the contract for which is negotiated under authority of this section, the Secretary of War may waive the requirement of a performance and a payment bond and may accept materials required for any such project at such place or places as he may deem necessary to minimize insurance costs.

(d) The Secretary of War shall report annually to the Congress all contracts entered into under authority of this section, including the names of the contractors and copies of the contracts concerned, together with the amounts thereof.

SEC. 2. Whenever deemed by him to be advantageous to the national defense, and providing that in the opinion of the Secretary of War the existing facilities of the War Department are inadequate, the Secretary of War is hereby authorized to employ, by contract or otherwise, outside architectural or engineering corporations, firms, or individuals for the production and delivery of the designs, plans, drawings, and specifications required for the accomplishment of any public-works or utilities project of the War Department without reference to the Classification Act of 1923 (42 Stat. 1488), as amended (5 U. S. C., ch. 13), or to section 3709 of the Revised Statutes of the United States (41 U. S. C. 5). In no case shall the fee paid for any service authorized by this section exceed 6 percent of the estimated cost, as determined by the Secretary of War, of the project to which such fee is applicable.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, let us have an explanation of that measure.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, this is a bill, first, to authorize the Secretary of War to make contracts for the execution of construction projects in foreign possessions under terms at variance with the usual procedure followed in making contracts for work of a similar nature in the continental United States. Second, to authorize the Secretary of War, whenever deemed by him to be advantageous to national defense, to contract with or employ individuals, firms, or corporations for the production of designs, plans, drawings, and specifications for construction of public works without reference to the Classification Act of 1923 or to section 3709, Revised Statutes of the United States.

Very material speeding up of all public works in foreign possessions in planning and execution when the interests of national defense require such expedition.

Section 1 of the bill would permit cost-plus-fixed-fee contracts beyond the continental limits of the United States, and this authority would serve four purposes:

(a) It would permit initiating the work at the earliest practicable date, since complete plans and specifications would not be necessary under such an arrangement.

(b) It would permit the work to be carried on at a faster rate, since necessary changes in the design and construction procedures which are inevitable in work of this character would be made with a minimum of delay.

(c) It would result in lower ultimate cost to the Government.

(d) It would permit a much greater degree of secrecy as to the details of the improvements constructed, since public advertising for bids would not be necessary.

Section 2 of the bill would give authority to contract with or employ individuals, firms, or corporations for the production of designs, plans, drawings, and specifications of public works or utilities without reference to the law which requires advertising and competitive bidding whenever in the opinion of the Secretary of War such procedure would be advantageous to national defense.

The experience of the War Department has shown that it is impracticable to obtain competitive bids from reliable and experienced contractors on work at outlying stations except at substantially increased prices. This arises from the fact that unusual hazards, the uncertainty of weather conditions, the distance from material and labor markets, and the cost of overcoming unforeseen construction difficulties all contribute to the element of uncertainty which requires that a prudent bidder include in his bid a very large item for contingencies. If these contingencies do not arise the Government will pay an excessive profit to the contractor.

The principle of noninsurance of Government property is firmly established. The procedure embodied in section 1 represents no more than an extension of that principle, in that the Government in effect carries the insurance for contingencies which, under ordinary circumstances, would be carried by the contractor and indirectly paid for by the Government.

For work within the continental limits of the United States, where it is practicable to obtain competitive bids and where the contingency item is not large, the usual procedure of competitive bidding is to be preferred. However, in the case of work at outlying stations the procedure recommended in section 1 would be more advantageous to the Government.

Expansion of the Army in an emergency must of necessity be preceded by field investigations and the preparation of plans and specifications for the erection of structures and the provision of public utilities.

Past experience has shown that to achieve such expansion the War Department must avail itself of the services of private individuals and organizations. Thus expansion of the professional and engineering forces within the War Department cannot be accomplished expeditiously. The current emergency-construction program has demonstrated that neither the personnel nor the space required for their work can be obtained quickly.

The obvious alternative is to engage the services of private engineering and architectural firms or individuals to supplement the work of the War Department. In such manner the War Department could not only expedite the preparation of plans and specifications for important construction work, but could also obtain the services of the country's outstanding specialists.

It is desired to eliminate advertising for engineering and architectural services, as is required by section 3709 of the Revised Statutes, for two reasons: First, because such advertising would delay the initiation of the work; and, second, because responding to advertising for professional services of this character is considered to be unethical. The American Society of Civil Engineers and the American Institute of Consulting Engineers have gone on record as being opposed to this practice.

Furthermore, it is as illogical to advertise for the services of an architect or engineering specialist as it would be to advertise for the services of a medical specialist. Standard fees have been established by reputable professional societies for various kinds of engineering and architectural work; so the question of the magnitude of the fee does not enter into the selection of an engineering or architectural firm. The question in each case should be decided upon the special qualifications of the firms under consideration.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MURRAY in the chair). Does the Senator from Texas yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. SHEPPARD. I yield.

Mr. KING. Does the bill contain an authorization for the purchase of land?

Mr. SHEPPARD. None at all.

Mr. KING. However, there is no limitation upon the amount which may be expended under the contracts which may be entered into.

Mr. SHEPPARD. That would depend upon the appropriations made and the authority given.

Mr. KING. Then the bill would not increase the authority of the Government other than to employ specialists outside of continental United States?

Mr. SHEPPARD. That is the point exactly.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

FOREIGN BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATIONS IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

The bill (H. R. 5288) to amend section 691-a of the Code of Law of the District of Columbia, approved March 3, 1901, and of any act or acts amendatory thereof relating to foreign building and loan associations doing business in the District of Columbia was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Calendar No. 642, being Senate bill 1908, is an identical bill. Without objection, Senate bill 1908 will be indefinitely postponed.

DR. ANITA NEWCOMB MCGEE—CONGRESSIONAL MEDAL OF HONOR

The Senate proceeded to consider the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 107) authorizing the President of the United States to award the Congressional Medal of Honor to Dr. Anita Newcomb McGee, which had been reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with amendments, on page 1, line 4, after the words "award a" to strike out "Congressional Medal of Honor in the name of the Congress of the United States" and insert in lieu thereof "gold medal of appropriate design"; and at the top of page 2 to insert:

There is hereby authorized to be appropriated such sum as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this joint resolution.

So as to make the joint resolution read:

Resolved, etc., That the President of the United States is authorized to award a gold medal of appropriate design to Dr. Anita Newcomb McGee in recognition of her splendid service to the United States in organizing a corps of trained nurses for the United States Army during the period of the Spanish-American War and the Philippine Insurrection.

There is hereby authorized to be appropriated such sum as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this joint resolution.

The amendments were agreed to.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "Joint resolution authorizing the President of the United States to award a gold medal of appropriate design to Dr. Anita Newcomb McGee."

OHIO RIVER BRIDGE, SHAWNEETOWN, ILL.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 4499) authorizing the county of Gallatin, State of Illinois, its successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Ohio River at or near the city of Shawneetown, Gallatin County, Ill., to a point opposite thereto in the county of Union, State of Kentucky, which had been reported from the Committee on Commerce with an amendment, in section 4, page 3, line 15, after the word "including", to strike out "reasonable interest and" and insert in lieu thereof: "interest at a rate of not to exceed 5 percent and reasonable", so as to make the section read:

SEC. 4. In fixing the rates of toll to be charged for the use of such bridge the same shall be so adjusted as to provide a fund sufficient to pay for the reasonable cost of maintaining, repairing, and operating the bridge and its approaches under economical management, and to provide a sinking fund sufficient to amortize the cost of such bridge and its approaches, including interest at a rate of not to exceed 5 percent and reasonable financing cost, and the cost of the acquisition of any ferries as hereinabove provided, as soon as possible, under reasonable charges, but within a period of not to exceed 20 years from the completion thereof. After a sinking fund sufficient for such amortization shall have been so provided, such bridge shall thereafter be maintained and operated free of tolls. An accurate record of the cost of the bridge and its approaches, the expenditures for maintaining, repairing, and operating the same, and of the daily tolls collected shall be kept and shall be available for the information of all persons interested.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I am wondering about the question of interest. Why should the Government be concerned with that question?

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, I shall be glad to answer the question. I did not quite understand the Senator's question with regard to the bill.

Mr. KING. Is the bridge to be merely a private bridge, involving no obligation on the part of the Government?

Mr. LUCAS. The Senator is correct. The bridge is being constructed by the county of Gallatin in the State of Illinois, at the Shawneetown, across from Union County, Ky.; and the Government is not financially involved in any way whatsoever.

Mr. KING. Why should there be a provision relating to interest, if interest on the bonds is chargeable only to the county and not to the Government? I ask for information. Why should the Government be interested in determining the rate of interest which the county must pay?

Mr. LUCAS. I will say to the Senator that I cannot answer that question. The amendment was inserted by the Committee on Commerce of the Senate. I have no way of knowing why the Committee on Commerce inserted the amendment.

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President, as a member of the Senate Committee on Commerce I can offer an explanation. The purpose of lowering the rate of interest on the bonds is to do away as rapidly as possible with toll bridges. The bridge is to remain a toll bridge until a sufficient amount has been collected from the tolls to retire the bonded indebtedness, principal, and interest. If the rate of interest is high, either the tolls must be too high or else the toll program must continue for too long a time. The purpose of reducing the rate of interest is to keep down the tolls and retire the debt as rapidly as possible.

Mr. KING. Does the county object to the bill?

Mr. OVERTON. There is no objection on the part of the county.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. OVERTON. I shall be very glad to yield.

Mr. LUCAS. Does the evidence before the Senator's committee disclose what rate of interest was to be charged upon the bonded indebtedness?

Mr. OVERTON. No. We have adopted a uniform policy in the Commerce Committee of providing that the rate of interest on all toll-bridge bonds shall not exceed 5 percent per annum.

Mr. LUCAS. That is the uniform rate?

Mr. OVERTON. That is the uniform rate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

MEMPHIS AND LITTLE ROCK BRIDGE COMMISSION

The bill (S. 2242) creating the Memphis and Little Rock Bridge Commission; defining the authority, power, and duties of said commission; and authorizing said commission and its successors and assigns to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Mississippi River at or near Memphis, Tenn.; and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I should like to inquire if those who have sponsored this bill can answer whether it involves any financial obligation on the part of the Federal Government?

Mr. LEE. Mr. President, is the Senator addressing his remarks to me?

Mr. AUSTIN. I cannot hear what is said; I cannot even identify who is speaking.

Mr. LEE. I cannot hear the Senator either. If he will repeat his question, I will try to catch it this time.

Mr. AUSTIN. The question is whether Calendar No. 723, Senate bill 2242, carries any financial obligation on the part of the Federal Government?

Mr. LEE. No.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator whether or not the language on page 15, "but shall be chargeable solely to the funds herein provided," refers to funds which are to be provided by the Congress?

Mr. LEE. I will ask the Senator please to repeat his question. I could not hear it.

Mr. DANAHER. On page 15 of the bill, in lines 11 and 12, the Senator will find that the words "the funds herein provided" are used. Does that language refer to funds which the Congress is to be called upon to provide?

Mr. MILLER. Mr. President, will the Senator from Oklahoma yield to me?

Mr. LEE. I yield to the Senator from Arkansas.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. President, answering the question of the Senator from Connecticut, in all probability those words should be stricken out. The bill has been materially amended since it was originally introduced. It originally provided for the issuance of bonds and to secure payment of the bonds tolls to be collected were pledged. Under the amendments offered by the Senator from Tennessee and adopted by the committee the provision for tolls and the provision for the issuance of bonds by the Bridge Commission have been eliminated from the bill. So the bill as it now stands merely gives authority to the Bridge Commission to erect a bridge across the Mississippi River, without providing any funds from any source, except it does provide that Federal aid may be extended out of money allocated to the State of Tennessee and to the State of Arkansas, with the consent of the highway commissions of those States. So I think the point made by the Senator is a perfectly valid one, and that those words should be stricken from the bill, because no funds are provided by it.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MILLER. I yield.

Mr. DANAHER. I inquire if the Senator has the bill before him.

Mr. MILLER. I have.

Mr. DANAHER. Will the Senator not amend it by striking out the language commencing in line 11 "but shall be chargeable solely to the funds herein provided"?

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I suggest that the bill go over. There are other points of inquiry involved.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection being made, the bill will be passed over.

BILLS PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 2110) to provide for purchase of fish (including shellfish) and products thereof by the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. I ask that the bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (H. R. 1996) to amend the National Stolen Property Act was announced as next in order.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Let that bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

TRANSMISSION OF FRANKABLE MATTER THROUGH THE MAILS

The Senate proceeded to consider the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 134) to amend section 6 of the Post Office Department Appropriation Act, 1940, approved May 6, 1939, relative to the transmission of certain matter through the mails free of postage, which had been reported from the Committee on Appropriations, with amendments, on page 1, line 6, after the word "amended" to strike out "by adding after the last word thereof the words 'or to the Federal, State, or other public authorities', so as to make the entire section, as amended, read", and inserting "to read as follows":; on page 2, line 3, after the word "correspondence", to insert "including such enclosures as are reasonably related to the subject matter of the correspondence; informational releases in connection with the decennial census of the United States"; on line 8, after the word "blanks", to insert "and copies of statutes, rules, regulations, and instructions and administrative orders and interpretations"; in line 12, after the word "independent", to strike out "establishment" and insert "establishment"; in line 14, after the word "law", to insert "or such document is transmitted to inform the recipient thereof of the adoption, amendment, or interpretation of a statute, rule, regulation, or order to which he is subject."; on page 3, line 5, after the word "agricultural", to strike out "bulletins or of" and insert "bulletins"; and, on line 7, after the word "Documents", to insert "or of announcements of publications of maps, atlases, statistical, and other reports offered for sale by the Federal Power Commission as authorized by section 312 of the Federal Power Act", so as to make the joint resolution read:

Resolved, etc., That section 6 of the Treasury and Post Office Departments Appropriation Act, fiscal year 1940 (Public, No. 65, 76th Cong.), approved May 6, 1939, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 6. On and after July 1, 1939, no executive department or independent establishment of the Government shall transmit through the mail free of postage, any book, report, periodical, bulletin, pamphlet, list, or other article or document (except official letter correspondence, including such enclosures as are reasonably related to the subject matter of the correspondence; informational releases in connection with the decennial census of the United States, mail concerning the sale of Government securities, and all forms and blanks and copies of statutes, rules, regulations, and instructions and administrative orders and interpretations necessary in the administration of such departments and establishments), unless a request therefor has been previously received by such department or independent establishment; or such transmission is required by law; or such document is transmitted to inform the recipient thereof of the adoption, amendment, or interpretation of a statute, rule, regulation, or order to which he is subject. For each quarter, beginning with the quarter commencing July 1, 1939, the head of each independent establishment and executive department (other than the Post Office Department) shall submit to the Postmaster General, within 30 days after the close of the quarter, a statement of the weight of the mail matter by classes of mail that the independent establishment or department has transmitted free of postage during such quarter, and he shall also certify to the Postmaster General at the end of each such quarter that nothing was transmitted through the mail free of postage by the independent establishment or department in violation of the provisions of this section: Provided, That nothing herein shall be construed to prohibit the mailing free of postage of lists of agricultural bulletins, lists of public documents which are offered for sale by the Superintendent of Documents, or of announcements of publications of maps, atlases, statistical, and other reports offered for sale by the Federal Power Commission as authorized by section 312 of the Federal Power Act: Provided further, That this prohibition shall not apply to the transmission of such books, reports, periodicals, bulletins, pamphlets, lists, articles, or documents to educational institutions or public libraries, or to Federal, State, or other public authorities."

The amendments were agreed to.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILLS PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 2259) to amend laws for preventing collisions of vessels, to regulate equipment of certain motorboats on the navigable waters of the United States, and for other purposes was announced as next in order.

Mr. WHITE. I ask that the bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

OFFICERS' COMPETENCY CERTIFICATES CONVENTION

The bill (H. R. 3576) to make effective the provisions of the Officers' Competency Certificates Convention, 1936, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That title 52 of the Revised Statutes is amended by inserting after section 4438 thereof a new section designated section 4438a, to read as follows:

"Sec. 4438a. (1) That the Officers' Competency Certificates Convention, 1936 (International Labor Organization Draft Convention No. 53, 'concerning the minimum requirement of professional capacity for masters and officers on board merchant ships'), as ratified by the President on September 1, 1938, with understandings appended, and this section shall apply to all vessels, however propelled, navigating on the high seas, which are registered, enrolled, and licensed, or licensed under the laws of the United States, whether permanently, temporarily, or provisionally, including yachts enrolled and licensed, or licensed, with the exception of—

"(a) Ships of war;

"(b) Government vessels, or vessels in the service of a public authority, which are not engaged in trade;

"(c) Wooden ships of primitive build, such as dhows and junks;

"(d) Unrigged vessels;

"(e) All vessels of less than 200 gross tons.

"(2) All laws in effect on the effective date of this section covering the issuance, duration, renewal, suspension, and revocation of licenses of masters, mates, chief engineers, and assistant engineers be, and they are hereby, made applicable to the issuance, duration, renewal, suspension, or revocation of licenses of masters, mates, chief engineers, and assistant engineers of all vessels to which the Officers' Competency Certificates Convention, 1936, and this section apply, to such extent and upon such conditions as may be required by the regulations of the Board of Supervising Inspectors with the approval of the Secretary of Commerce: Provided, That examinations for licenses of masters, mates, chief engineers, and assistant engineers of fishing vessels, not subject to the inspection laws of the United States, shall be oral: Provided further, That applicants for licenses as masters, mates, chief engineers, and assistant engineers of fishing vessels not subject to the inspection laws of the United States shall not be required to obtain a certificate from the United States Public Health Service based upon the subject of ship sanitation, and first aid.

"(3) Any license issued (whether before, or on, or after the effective date of this section) to a master, mate, chief engineer, or assistant engineer of a vessel to which this section applies shall be deemed to be a certificate of competency for a master or skipper, navigating officer in charge of a watch, chief engineer, or engineer in charge of a watch, respectively.

"(4) No person shall be engaged to perform, or shall perform on board any vessel to which this section applies, the duties of master, mate, chief engineer, or assistant engineer unless he holds a license to perform such duties, issued in accordance with the provisions of subsection 2 of this section: Provided, That a license as master, mate, chief engineer, or assistant engineer of vessels subject to this section may be issued without examination at any time prior to October 29, 1941, to any applicant who has had sufficient practical experience in the position for which he applies to be licensed and has no record of any serious technical error against him: Provided further, That no person to whom a license as master, mate, chief engineer, or assistant engineer is issued without examination may serve under authority of that license as master, mate, chief engineer, or assistant engineer on any vessel subject to the inspection laws of the United States.

"(5) It shall be unlawful to engage or employ any person or for any person to serve as a master, mate or engineer on any such vessel who is not licensed by the inspectors; and anyone violating this section shall be liable to a penalty of $100 for each offense.

"(6) If any collector of customs has reason to believe, on complaint or otherwise, that a vessel subject to this section and to the regulations established thereunder is about to proceed to the high seas from a port in the United States or any Territory over which the United States exercises jurisdiction, except the Philippine Islands and the Panama Canal Zone, in violation of any provision of this section or of any provision of the Officers' Competency Certificates Convention, 1936, he may, by written order served on the master or officer in charge of such vessel, detain her until such time as this section shall have been complied with. Clearance shall be refused to any vessel which shall have been ordered detained. If the vessel be ordered detained the master may, within 5 days, appeal to the Secretary of Commerce, who may, after investigation, affirm, set aside, or modify the order of the collector.

"(7) Foreign vessels to which the Officers' Competency Certificates Convention, 1936, applies shall be subject to such inspection, within the jurisdiction of the United States, except the Philippine Islands and the Panama Canal Zone, as may be necessary to determine that there has been a compliance with the terms of the convention, and in case of any breach of the provisions of the convention by such vessel the collector of customs may, by written order served on the master or officer in charge of such vessel, detain her and refuse clearance to her until such time as the convention shall have been complied with; the collector shall also immediately notify the consul of the country in which the vessel is registered. If the vessel be ordered detained, the master may, within 5 days, appeal to the Secretary of Commerce, who may, after investigation, affirm, set aside, or modify the order of the collector.

"(8) No provision of the Officers' Competency Certificates Convention, 1936, or of this section, shall apply to any vessel of the United States of less than 200 gross tons, nor shall any provision of that convention or this section be deemed to alter, amend, or repeal any statute of the United States in effect on the effective date of this section with regard to any such vessel.

"(9) The Secretary of Commerce shall establish such regulations as may be necessary to secure the enforcement of the provisions of this section by any officer of the United States authorized to enforce the navigation or inspection laws of the United States.

"(10) The Secretary of Commerce or any officer of the Department of Commerce authorized by the Secretary of Commerce may, upon application therefor, remit or mitigate any fine or penalty incurred under this section or any regulation thereunder.

"(11) No provision of the Officers' Competency Certificates Convention, 1936, nor of this section, shall apply to any vessel, however propelled, navigating on the Great Lakes.

"(12) Where used in this section—

"(a) The term 'high seas' means all waters outside the line dividing the inland waters from the high seas, as defined in section 2 of the act of February 19, 1895.

"(b) The term 'unrigged vessel' means any vessel that is not self-propelled.

"(13) Nothing contained in the Officers' Competency Certificates Convention, 1936, nor in this section, shall be deemed to extend any provision of section 2 of the act of March 4, 1915, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 ed., Supp. IV, title 46, sec. 673), or to alter, modify, or repeal any statute of the United States in effect on the effective date of this section, except as hereinbefore provided.

"(14) This section shall become effective on October 29, 1939: Provided, That licenses may be issued by boards of local inspectors in accordance with the provisions of this section at any time prior to such date.

"(15) There are hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this section."

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (H. R. 4983) an act to amend sections 712, 802, and 902 of the Merchant Marine Act, 1936, as amended, relative to the requisition of vessels, was announced as next in order.

Mr. WHITE. Let that bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

INVESTIGATION OF METHODS OF HANDLING EXPRESS AND FREIGHT TRAFFIC

The resolution (S. Res. 146) submitted by Mr. WHEELER and Mr. REED on June 19, 1939, was considered and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Interstate Commerce, or any duly authorized subcommittee thereof, is authorized and directed to make a full and complete investigation and study with respect to (1) the nature and legality of the methods now employed by common carriers by railroad subject to the Interstate Commerce Act for the handling of their express traffic, their forwarder or consolidated carload freight traffic, and their freight traffic in less-than-carload lots; and (2) the possibility of improving the methods of handling such classes of traffic in the interest of economy and of better service to the public. The committee shall report to the Senate, at the beginning of the next regular session of the Congress, the results of its investigation and study, together with its recommendations, if any, for legislation.

For the purposes of this resolution the committee, or any duly authorized subcommittee thereof, is authorized to request the Interstate Commerce Commission and any of the executive departments or other agencies of the Government to furnish to it clerical and expert assistance in the conduct of, and any information in their possession with respect to matters within the scope of, such investigation and study.

BILLS PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 2611) authorizing the purchase of a site and the erection of a building in the State of Massachusetts for use as a radio-monitoring station, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let the bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 2635) to amend the Federal Crop Insurance Act was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let the bill go over.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, may we have an explanation of the bill?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah has asked that the bill go over.

Mr. KING. Let the request of the Senator from Vermont be complied with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Vermont has requested an explanation of the bill.

Mr. AUSTIN. In the absence of an explanation, I ask that the bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 577) extending civil service to certain postmasters was announced as next in order.

Mr. AUSTIN. Let the bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

PROCUREMENT OF DIVORCES BY MAIL SOLICITATION

The bill (S. 2245) to prohibit the use of the mails for the solicitation of the procurement of divorces in foreign countries was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That every written or printed card, circular, letter, book, pamphlet, advertisement, or notice of any kind, giving or offering to give information concerning where or how or through whom a divorce may be secured in a foreign country, and designed to solicit business in connection with the procurement thereof, is hereby declared to be nonmailable matter and shall not be conveyed in the mails or delivered from any post office or by any letter carrier. Whoever shall knowingly deposit, or cause to be deposited, for mailing or delivery, anything declared by this section to be nonmailable, or shall knowingly take or cause the same to be taken from the mails for the purpose of circulating or disposing thereof, shall be fined not more than $5,000 or imprisoned for not more than 5 years, or both.

SEC. 2. Nothing herein contained shall be construed to preclude criminal prosecution under the provisions of section 338, title 18, United States Code (Criminal Code, sec. 215), in any case in which the mails are used by any person in furtherance of any scheme or artifice to defraud, or for obtaining money or property by means of false or fraudulent pretenses, representations, or promises.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 2246) to amend section 194 of an act entitled "An act to codify, revise, and amend the penal laws of the United States," approved March 4, 1909, was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let us have an explanation of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah requests an explanation of this bill.

Mr. KING. Let the bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

ANNUAL AND SICK LEAVE FOR POSTAL SUBSTITUTES

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 5479) granting annual and sick leave with pay to substitutes in the Postal Service which had been reported from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads with amendments at the top of page 2 to insert three new sections, as follows:

SEC. 2. No substitute shall be entitled to sick leave for an illness or disability incurred while such substitute is not on active duty or on annual leave.

SEC. 3. In no event shall a substitute employee be granted more than 15 days' annual and 10 days' sick leave allowed by existing law to regular employees.

SEC. 4. No substitute shall be entitled to the benefits of this act until he has served 2,448 hours.

And on page 2, line 10, to change the section number from "2" to "5"; so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That hereafter substitutes in the Postal Service shall be rated as employees and each substitute postal employee in the classified civil service shall be granted the same rights and benefits with respect to annual and sick leave that accrue to regular employees in proportion to the time actually employed. Sick leave shall be computed on the basis of illness or disability incurred during the period of actual employment in the Postal Service.

SEC. 2. No substitute shall be entitled to sick leave for an illness or disability incurred while such substitute is not on active duty or on annual leave.

SEC. 3. In no event shall a substitute employee be granted more than 15 days' annual and ten days' sick leave allowed by existing law to regular employees.

SEC. 4. No substitute shall be entitled to the benefits of this act until he has served 2,448 hours.

SEC. 5. The Postmaster General is authorized and directed to prescribe such rules and regulations as may be necessary or appropriate to carry out the provisions of this act.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I notice that the Bureau of the Budget states that this bill is not in accord with the program of the President.

Mr. MEAD. Mr. President, I will be glad to answer any question.

Mr. KING. I called attention to the fact that the Acting Postmaster General apparently reports unfavorably on the bill.

Mr. MEAD. The Postmaster General reported unfavorably on the House bill. The Senate committee considered and approved three amendments, one of them specifically recommended by the Postmaster General. All three of them, in the opinion of the Senate committee, will receive the approval of the Post Office Department.

The bill as it passed the House of Representatives would give to postal substitutes sick leave and vacation allowance from the time they were originally appointed as substitutes. The bill as reported to the Senate requires that they shall put in 2,448 hours before they shall be entitled to any consideration so far as sick leave and vacation allowance is concerned. The Senate bill further provides that no sick-leave time shall be credited to them unless the sickness or illness or disability occurred while in the active performance of their duties.

The third amendment was suggested by the Department itself. It provides that under no circumstances shall a substitute receive in excess of 15 days' vacation or 10 days' sick leave in any one year.

So the Senate Post Office Committee believe their amendments will receive the approval of the Post Office Department. The Senate committee also believe that these faithful employees of the Postal Service—some of them with 8, 9, and 10 years of service—are really postal employees. The bill is designed to get around a decision of the Comptroller General which holds that substitutes are not postal employees but are employees of the postmaster. As the result of a decision of the Comptroller General, the legislative efforts of the Congress over a period of 10 years on many occasions, aimed to benefit the substitutes' condition of employment, have been nullified.

The bill will make these substitutes bona fide postal employees and will give them the benefits of sick leave and vacation time in proportion to the amount of time put in by them in actual service, and no more. We give the same consideration to W. P. A. employees and to the emergency employees of the various bureaus. I believe these postal employees are entitled to equal consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendments reported by the committee.

LXXXIV—546

The amendments were agreed to.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

S. A. ROURKE

The bill (S. 324) for the relief of S. A. Rourke was announced as next in order.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, on yesterday the House of Representatives passed an identical bill, House bill 733. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate consider the House bill instead of the Senate bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk informs the chair that the House has not yet sent the bill to the Senate.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Under those conditions, I presume it would not be proper to ask for consideration of the Senate bill, because efficiency would dictate that this body consider the House bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill may go over until the Senate receives a message from the House transmitting the House bill.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. It may be that the House bill will be messaged over before the present session adjourns. If so, I reserve the right to call up the bill at that time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be temporarily passed over.

HELEN M. CROWLEY

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 119) for the relief of Helen M. Crowley, which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment, to strike out all after the enacting clause and to insert:

That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Helen M. Crowley, of Waterbury, Conn., the sum of $2,000, in full settlement of all her claims against the United States for the death of her husband, Ralph L. Crowley, late electrician's mate, first-class, United States Coast Guard, who died March 28, 1930, as a result of injuries sustained in line of duty: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, let the bill go over. I see that there is an adverse report, as I interpret it, from the late Secretary of the Treasury on the bill.

Mr. MALONEY. Mr. President, did the Senator from Utah ask for an explanation of the bill or request that it go over?

Mr. KING. I just happened to pick up the report of the late Secretary of the Treasury in opposition to the bill.

Mr. MALONEY. I call the attention of the Senator, if I may, to the fact that the report of the then Secretary of the Treasury admits the finding of the Claims Committee that the man was killed while in active service and in the line of duty. The Secretary of the Treasury found that the condition claimed was true, that the man lost his life as the result of a situation for which the Department was at fault. I call the Senator's further attention to the fact that the recommendation of the Department against the passage of the bill is routine and customary. It admits that everything claimed is true; that the man did lose his life in active service as a result of negligence on the part of the Government; and, of course, the Claims Committee unanimously reported the bill. If we are to follow the recommendations of the Treasury Department or other Departments on bills of this sort we shall never have them passed, because the Departments always, as a matter of procedure, simply on the ground that the bills establish a precedent, recommend against their passage.

Mr. KING. Under the Senator's statement I have no objection to the consideration of this bill, but if he will pardon me, an examination of hundreds of reports convinces me that the Departments are pretty generous in some of their recommendations.

Mr. MALONEY. I thank the Senator for his willingness to see the bill passed, or for withdrawing his objection; but the Department has not been so generous in this instance. The Claims Committee cut down considerably the amount appropriated by the bill; and the finding of the then Secretary of the Treasury is in accord with the finding of the Claims Committee.

I thank the Senator.

Mr. KING. I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the committee.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, if the Senator from Connecticut will pardon me, in corroboration of my statement a moment ago, I desire to say that I have before me two reports, one with respect to Senate bill 2491, Calendar No. 743, in which the Department recommends enactment of the bill, and one with respect to Senate bill 1953, Calendar No. 744, in which the Department recommends enactment of the bill. So I think I am correct in stating that the departments are sometimes pretty generous.

Mr. MALONEY. I will not say that the departments are not sometimes pretty generous, but in connection with this bill I do not think anybody has been generous.

Mr. KING. I understood the Senator's statement to be a little too broad—that the departments, because enactment of the bills might establish a precedent, always report adversely. I note by examination of hundreds of reports that they make many favorable recommendations.

Mr. MALONEY. If I said "always," I meant to say "customarily."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

EDWARD J. GEBHART

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2491) for the relief of Edward J. Gebhart, which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with amendments, on page 2, line 3, after the word "disability", to insert "alleged to have been", and at the end of the bill to add a proviso, so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the provisions and limitations of sections 15 to 20, both inclusive, of the act entitled "An act to provide compensation for employees of the United States suffering injuries while in the performance of their duties, and for other purposes," approved September 7, 1916, as amended and supplemented, are hereby waived in the case of Edward J. Gebhart, of Orient, S. Dak.; and the United States Employees' Compensation Commission is authorized and directed to consider and act upon any claim filed with the Commission, within 1 year after the date of enactment of this act, by the said Edward J. Gebhart for compensation under the provisions of such act of September 7, 1916, as amended and supplemented, for disability alleged to have been due to injuries sustained by him on February 6, 1937, in the performance of his duties as a rural carrier at Orient, S. Dak.: Provided, That no benefits shall accrue prior to the approval of this act.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, this bill has the favorable recommendation of the Department. Let it go through.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendments reported by the committee.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MRS. A. R. BARNARD AND OTHERS

The bill (S. 1953) for the relief of Mrs. A. R. Barnard, Charles A. Stephens, Donald W. Prairie, and Mrs. Vern A. Needles was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Mrs. A. R. Barnard, Portland, Oreg., the sum of $672.80; to Charles A. Stephens, Newport, Oreg., the sum of $352; and to Donald W. Prairie, Portland, Oreg., the sum of $300; in all, $1,324.80, in full settlement of all their claims against the United States for loss of the motorboat M. W. Sloan, which was capsized and destroyed while rendering assistance to the disabled Coast Guard motor lifeboat No. 4473 and crew of the Siuslaw Station, Florence, Oreg., on March 7, 1938; and to Mrs. Vern A. Needles, Newport, Oreg., widow of Vern A. Needles, the sum of $5,000, in full satisfaction of her claim against the United States for the death of her husband who, as a member of the crew of the motorboat M. W. Sloan, was drowned when such motorboat was capsized and destroyed as aforesaid: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with these claims, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

The PRESIDING OFFICER subsequently said: The Chair is informed that the Senate, during the call of the calendar today, passed Senate bill 1953, for the relief of Mrs. A. R. Barnard and others. Subsequently, the House transmitted to the Senate an identical bill, House bill 5346, passed by it on yesterday. Without objection, the House bill will be considered as having passed in lieu of the Senate bill, and the vote on the passage of the Senate bill will be reconsidered, and the bill indefinitely postponed. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

JOHN CHASTAIN AND MOLLIE CHASTAIN

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 3541) for the relief of John Chastain and Mollie Chastain, his wife, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to John Chastain and Mollie Chastain, his wife, of Soledad, Monterey County, Calif., the sum of $3,500. The payment of such sum shall be in full settlement of all claims of the said John Chastain and Mollie Chastain, his wife, against the United States for the death of their minor son, Thomas Chastain, on August 11, 1937, when he was struck down and killed by a truck, the property of the United States, in the service of the Civilian Conservation Corps, on the Salinas River Bridge on Highway No. 101, 1 mile south of Soledad, Monterey County, Calif.: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, this bill also has a favorable recommendation from the Department.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the third reading and passage of the bill.

The bill was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PARKER M'KEE, SR., AND LOUISE M'KEE

The bill (S. 2083) conferring jurisdiction upon the United States District Court for the District of New Jersey to hear, determine, and render judgment upon the claims of Parker McKee, Sr., and Louise McKee was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That jurisdiction is hereby conferred upon the United States District Court for the District of New Jersey to hear, determine, and render judgment upon the claims of Parker McKee, Sr., and Louise McKee, of Woodbury, N. J., against the United States for damages for the death of their son, Parker McKee, Jr., as the result of a landslide which occurred at official project No. 165-22-3018 of the Works Progress Administration, in Woodbury, N. J., on April 7, 1937.

SEC. 2. In the determination of such claims the United States shall be held liable for the acts of its officers and employees to the same extent as if it were a private person, except that any judgment rendered on such claims shall not be for any amount in excess of $5,000.

SEC. 3. Suit upon such claims may be instituted at any time within 1 year after the date of enactment of this act, notwithstanding the lapse of time or any statute of limitations. Proceedings for the determination of such claims, and appeals from and payment of, any judgment thereon shall be in the same manner as in the case of claims over which such court has jurisdiction under the provisions of paragraph "Twentieth" of section 24 of the Judicial Code, as amended.

CITY OF LEAVENWORTH, KANS.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1289) for the relief of the city of Leavenworth, Kans., which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with amendments, on page 1, line 6, after the word "of", to strike out "$66,552.30. Such sum represents the actual contract cost to the city of Leavenworth, Kans." and insert "$14,000, in full settlement of all claims against the United States growing out", and at the end of the bill to insert a proviso, so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to the city of Leavenworth, Kans., the sum of $14,000, in full settlement of all claims against the United States growing out of the construction during 1938 of a new intake from the Missouri River and of certain sewer extension work made necessary by such new intake. Such new intake was made necessary by the diversion of the water of the river from the old intake in the carrying out of a Federal project to make the river a navigable stream: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, let us have an explanation of this bill.

Mr. CAPPER. Mr. President, I read from the report of the committee. The committee went very thoroughly into the merits of the measure:

The bill, as amended, provides for the payment of $14,000 to the city of Leavenworth, Kans., in full settlement of all claims against the United States growing out of the construction during 1938 of a new intake from the Missouri River and of certain sewer extension work made necessary by such new intake. Such new intake was made necessary by the diversion of the water of the river from the old intake in the carrying out of a Federal project to make the river a navigable stream.

On March 25, 1938, a resolution was adopted by the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, House of Representatives, requesting the Board of Engineers for Rivers and Harbors to review the reports on the Missouri River from Kansas City, Mo., to Sioux City, Iowa, with a view to determining whether the waterworks improvements at the city of Leavenworth had been damaged by navigation improvements, the extent of such damages, and the advisability of taking remedial action or of making reimbursement therefor.

The views and recommendations of the Board of Engineers for Rivers and Harbors, are as follows:

"The Board concurs with the division engineer that the damage to the water intake at Leavenworth, Kans., traceable to navigation improvements, is $14,000. The Board invites attention to the navigable status of the Missouri River. Structures built in a navigable river are subject to the paramount right of the Federal Government to improve navigation. The intake has been in operation since 1883 and is reported to have functioned properly until the dikes were built. These navigation-improvement works were necessary and have been prosecuted under authority of acts of Congress. The damages are incident to the legitimate and proper exercise of governmental powers for the improvement of navigation. There is no legal liability upon the Government to make reimbursement for the damage. The Board therefore reports, in response to the committee resolution, that the waterworks improvement at the city of Leavenworth, Kans., has been damaged by navigation improvements; that the extent of such damage is $14,000; and that in view of long-established precedents and practices in like cases it is unable to recommend remedial action or reimbursement therefor."

The Board of Engineers admit that the waterworks improvement at the city of Leavenworth has been damaged by navigation improvements; that the extent of such damage is $14,000, but that there is no legal liability upon the Government to make reimbursement for the damage.

After reviewing all the facts—

And I repeat that the committee went into the merits of the matter very carefully and thoroughly—the judgment of your committee is that the claim contains such elements of equity as to warrant favorable action by the Congress, and it is accordingly recommended that the city of Leavenworth be paid the sum of $14,000, which is the amount of damage as ascertained by the Board of Engineers.

Personally, I think the city should have had the full amount of $66,000; but the Committee on Claims recommended the payment of the reduced amount.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CAPPER. I yield.

Mr. KING. The Acting Secretary of War reports adversely on the bill.

Mr. CAPPER. Only on the ground that there is no legal liability. He does not say that in equity and justice the claimants are not entitled to relief. As a matter of fact, it is a fair and reasonable claim, and the award should have been for the full amount.

Mr. KING. I would have no objection to remitting the matter to the Court of Claims for the establishment of the equitable right to recovery.

Mr. CAPPER. I do not believe there would be any different finding than has been reached by the Committee on Claims.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I have no objection to the bill passing, with the understanding that if, after further communication with the War Department, I desire to do so, I may move to recommit.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

GRADING AND CLASSIFICATION OF FOREIGN-SERVICE CLERKS

The bill (S. 2663) to amend the act entitled "An act for grading and classification of clerks in the Foreign Service of the United States of America and providing compensation therefor," approved February 23, 1931, as amended, was announced as next in order.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, an identical bill passed the House on yesterday, but has not yet been messaged to the Senate. I ask unanimous consent that Senate bill 2663 go over, and that when the message is received from the House of Representatives the bill then be considered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

PRINTING OF EXECUTIVE JOURNALS OF THE SENATE

The resolution (S. Res. 153) authorizing the printing of the Executive Journals of the Senate, was considered and agreed to as follows:

Resolved, That 500 copies of the Executive Journal from the beginning of the Seventy-second Congress up to and including the end of the first session of the Seventy-sixth Congress be printed under the direction of the Secretary of the Senate, with suitable indexes to each volume; and that hereafter the same number of copies of the Executive Journal with proper indexes be printed at the close of each regular and special session of the Senate; and be it further

Resolved, That the Executive Journals herein referred to shall not be made public except by the order of the Senate.

EXCHANGE OF SURPLUS AGRICULTURAL COMMODITIES FOR FOREIGN MATERIALS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2697) to facilitate the execution of arrangements for the exchange of surplus agricultural commodities produced in the United States for reserve stocks of strategic and critical materials produced abroad, which had been reported from the Committee on Banking and Currency with amendments.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I wish to inquire of the Senator from South Carolina concerning two or three provisions of the bill. I do not intend to obstruct its consideration. On page 1, line 5, I find the word "agreement." Why is that word used instead of "treaty"?

Mr. BYRNES. While the instrument is in the form of a treaty it does represent an agreement. Even outside of the language of the treaty there are some agreements to be made which are provided for in the treaty, and the legislative draftsman thought the word "agreement" would be the most comprehensive word.

Mr. AUSTIN. Is it, then, the intention of the Senator that agreements to be entered into in the future shall also have the approval of the Senate?

Mr. BYRNES. It certainly is. So far as any one now in position to answer is concerned, it is the intent to have any agreement in the nature of a treaty approved by the Senate, and I am certainly very strongly of the opinion that that should be done.

Mr. AUSTIN. On page 2, line 5, and surrounding lines, a board is proposed to be set up. I ask the Senator whether he is disposed to coordinate this bill with the bill already enacted into law relating to strategic materials and stock piles.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, the Senator from Vermont inquired of me a few days ago with reference to that matter, and I think he is correct in suggesting that that should be done, and I intend to offer two amendments which will accomplish the purpose he has in mind.

Mr. AUSTIN. My next question is with respect to the agricultural commodities referred to in line 10. Does the Senator intend to limit the power granted by the bill to procure quantities of agricultural commodities for use in exchange for strategic materials?

Mr. BYRNES. It is limited by the language of the bill, but the particular language in line 10 was intended to apply to the purposes set forth in the measure, so that there would be no doubt that it did not have reference to any other agricultural commodity, but only to such commodities as were essential to carry out a treaty between the two countries.

Mr. AUSTIN. I thank the Senator.

Mr. BYRNES. I send to the desk amendments which I ask to have considered in order to perfect the bill as suggested by the Senator from Vermont.

Mr. GURNEY. Mr. President, I have been requested by the junior Senator from Connecticut [Mr. DANAHER] to ask that this bill go over.

Mr. BYRNES. The Senator from Connecticut has requested that it be passed over?

Mr. GURNEY. He has requested that it be passed over; yes.

Mr. BYRNES. There is nothing I can do about it, then.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection being heard, the bill will be passed over.

RESTORATION OF BENEFITS TO WORLD WAR VETERANS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 2296) to restore certain benefits to World War veterans suffering with paralysis, paresis, or blindness, or who are helpless or bedridden, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Finance with amendments, on page 1, line 6, after the word "disability", to insert the words "and who was in receipt of compensation therefor on March 19, 1933"; on page 2, line 3, to strike out "1934" and insert "1934, as amended by section 5 of Public Law No. 304, Seventy-fifth Congress, August 16, 1937"; on line 9, after the words "Provided further," to strike out "That where a World War veteran dies or has died from disease or injury, and service connection for such disease or injury is established under the provisions of this act, the surviving widow, child, or children, and/or dependent parents shall be entitled to receive compensation at the rates prescribed in Veterans Regulation No. 1 (a), part I, paragraph IV, and amendments thereto: Provided further, That for the purposes of awarding compensation under this act, service connection of disability may be determined or redetermined in any cases where claim has been or is filed by the veteran, widow, child, or children and/or dependent parent or parents", and insert "That where a World War veteran dies or has died from disease or injury, service connection of which is or would have been reestablished under the provisions of this act, his surviving widow, child, or children, if otherwise eligible thereto, shall be awarded death compensation under Public Law No. 484, Seventy-third Congress, as amended"; on page 3, after line 2, to strike out section 2, as follows:

Sec. 2. In the administration of the laws granting benefits for service-connected disabilities or deaths, any increase of disability during World War service shall be deemed aggravation in the application of the rules, regulations, and interpretations of the Veterans' Administration.

On page 3, line 8, after the word "Payments", to insert "to veterans restored to the rolls"; on line 10, after the word "act", to insert "and payments to widows or children shall be effective the date of enactment of this act", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That on and after the date of enactment of this act any World War veteran suffering from paralysis, paresis, or blindness, or who is helpless or bedridden, as the result of any disability, and who was in receipt of compensation therefor on March 19, 1933, may be awarded compensation under the laws and interpretations governing this class of cases prior to the enactment of Public Law No. 2, Seventy-third Congress, March 20, 1933, subject, however, to the limitations, except as to misconduct or willful misconduct, contained in sections 27 and 28 of Public Law No. 141, Seventy-third Congress, March 28, 1934, as amended by section 5 of Public Law No. 304, Seventy-fifth Congress, August 16, 1937: Provided, That the language herein contained shall not be construed to reduce or discontinue compensation authorized under the provisions of section 26 of Public Law No. 141, Seventy-third Congress: Provided further, That where a World War veteran dies or has died from disease or injury, service connection of which is or would have been reestablished under the provisions of this act, his surviving widow, child, or children, if otherwise eligible thereto, shall be awarded death compensation under Public Law No. 484, Seventy-third Congress, as amended.

Sec. 2. Payments to veterans restored to the rolls under the provisions of this act shall be effective the date of enactment of this act and payments to widows or children shall be effective the date of enactment of this act or the date of filing claim therefor, whichever is the later.

The amendments were agreed to.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, this is a House bill, and as the bill passed the House it included all cases of the character described in the bill, and all cases where the veteran had sustained disabilities of the character described in the bill. The Senate Committee on Finance has amended the bill so as to restrict its application to those veterans who were on the rolls on March 19, 1933, and who were eliminated from the rolls by the Economy Act. By the language of the amendment it will appear that it is applicable only to those World War veterans "suffering from paralysis, paresis, or blindness, or who is helpless or bedridden, as the result of any disability," and so forth.

The blind veterans have already been restored to the rolls. Their classification is simply repeated here, because they were in the same class with other veterans whose disabilities had progressed to the point where they were totally and permanently disabled as the result of paralysis, paresis, or total blindness, and were bedridden patients.

The bill as amended will apply only to those World War veterans who were on the rolls as of the date stated. It is not as broad as the bill passed by the House. The cost to the Government under the bill, of course, will be considerably reduced.

The payments to veterans whose disabilities are presumptively service-connected will be reduced from what the law formerly provided to 75 percent of the compensation where there is direct proof of service connection.

The bill will apply to approximately 1,100 World War veterans—that is to say, 1,100 World War veterans were cut off the rolls by the Economy Act. Of course, many of them are dead. The rights of the dependents of those who have passed away are preserved, and the dependents will take as the veterans were authorized to take under the law as it stood prior to the enactment of the economy law.

While the bill does not affirmatively carry the approval of the Veterans' Administration, nevertheless the Veterans' Administrator attended the hearings and has been consulted and advised with in the preparation of a bill which it is hoped may meet with the approval of the President if it is passed.

Mr. President, the bill covers the cases which are most appealing in that they are all cases of permanent total disability, and is confined, as I have just stated, by the Senate Finance Committee to those cases which were on the rolls on March 19, 1933.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. GEORGE. I yield.

Mr. KING. Has there been any adverse recommendation by the Administrator, General Hines?

Mr. GEORGE. None has been made to our committee. General Hines, as I understand, stated that he was not in position to give affirmative approval to the bill, but as amended the committee believed, at least, that he would recommend the approval of the bill by the President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the engrossment of the amendments and the third reading of the bill.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

EXTENSION OF CIVIL SERVICE RETIREMENT TO CERTAIN POSTMASTERS

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to revert to Calendar 734, Senate bill 577. The bill was passed over in my absence.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 577) extending civil service to certain postmasters, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 3 of the Civil Service Retirement Act, approved May 29, 1930, as amended, is amended by striking out all of that portion of section 3 beginning with paragraph (g) thereof and continuing to the end of the section, and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

(g) Postmasters of the first, second, and third classes who have been or may be appointed under the provisions of the act of June 25, 1938, and postmasters of the fourth class.

This act shall not apply to such employees of the Lighthouse Service as come within the provisions of section 6 of the act of June 20, 1918, entitled "An act to authorize aids to navigation and for other works in the Lighthouse Service, and for other purposes," nor to members of the police and fire departments of the municipal government of the District of Columbia, nor to such employees or groups of employees as may have been before the effective date of this act excluded by Executive orders from the benefits of the act of May 22, 1920, and amendments thereof.

The provisions of this act may be extended by Executive order upon recommendation of the Civil Service Commission, to apply to any employee or group of employees in the civil service of the United States not included at the time of its passage. The President shall have power, in his discretion, to exclude from the operation of this act any employee or group of employees in the civil service whose tenure of office or employment is intermittent or of uncertain duration.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, the title of the bill is a misnomer. It was amended by the committee to express the purpose of the bill, which is merely to extend the privileges of the Civil Service Retirement Act to all postmasters who may be appointed without term under the provisions of the civil-service law.

As the law now stands, postmasters of the fourth class who are appointed under the civil-service law have the privileges of the Retirement Act. Postmasters of the first, second, and third classes who may be appointed without term in compliance with the civil-service law do not have the privilege of the Retirement Act, and the purpose of the bill is merely to extend that privilege to such postmasters.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I inquire whether the bill has received a unanimously favorable committee report?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. There was no objection. The bill came out of the committee without objection.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I yield.

Mr. WALSH. Will the Senator point out to the Senate what is the length of service required in order that fourth-class postmasters may be entitled to the retirement privileges?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Fourth-class postmasters serve without term.

Mr. WALSH. I know that; but what is the number of years of service required before they are eligible to retirement?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I cannot say as to that.

Mr. WALSH. The Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS] says it depends upon age. In any event, whatever the period may be, under the provisions of the pending bill the retirement privilege is made applicable to postmasters of the first, second, and third class?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Yes.

Mr. WALSH. So all postmasters who have served for a certain number of years and have reached a certain age may retire?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Yes.

Mr. WALSH. Will the Senator from Wyoming place the report of the committee in the RECORD at this point? This proposal is of special public interest.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I shall be glad to ask that that be done. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD at this point the report of the committee on the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The report (No. 682) is as follows:

The Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads of the Senate, to whom was referred the bill (S. 577) extending civil service to certain postmasters, having considered the same, beg leave to report said bill back to the Senate with the recommendation that, upon amending the caption of the bill as hereinafter shown, said bill do pass.

The amendment recommended by your committee is as follows: In the caption of said bill, after the word "service", insert the word "retirement", so that the caption will read "Extending civil-service retirement to certain postmasters".

The purpose of the bill is clearly set out in the report of the Post Office Department, and a letter from the Civil Service Commission, both of which Departments recommend its passage. The letter of the Acting Postmaster General, dated March 3, 1939, and of the President of the United States Civil Service Commission, dated April 14, 1939, recommending said bill, are set out in full as follows:

OFFICE OF THE POSTMASTER GENERAL,
Washington, D. C., March 3, 1939.

HON. KENNETH MCKELLAR,
Chairman, Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads,
United States Senate.

MY DEAR SENATOR: The receipt is acknowledged of your letter of January 14, 1939, requesting a report upon S. 577, a bill extending civil service to certain postmasters.

The act of May 29, 1930, commonly known as the Retirement Act, excludes from the operation thereof all postmasters except postmasters of the first, second, and third classes who have been promoted, appointed, or transferred from the classified civil service.

This bill provides that the act of May 29, 1930, be amended by striking out all of that portion of section 3 beginning with paragraph (g) and inserting in lieu thereof a provision that postmasters of the first, second, and third classes who have been or may be appointed under the provisions of the act of June 25, 1938, and postmasters of the fourth class, be brought under the Retirement Act.

There are approximately 45,000 post offices of which number approximately 30,000 are of the fourth class. The Department feels and so advised the Civil Service Commission some time ago that any amendment to the Retirement Act to include postmasters should include all classes. It is recognized that there will be considerable difficulty in bringing fourth-class postmasters under the provisions of this act in the consideration of deductions, the benefits to be derived under the act, etc., due to the small compensation received by so many of these postmasters. However, there should be no discrimination.

So many of the postmasters at fourth-class offices draw an annual compensation of less than $200 and there is an average turnover in these offices of around $200 per month. It will be an administrative difficulty in handling these fourth-class post offices, but it is noted that in its proposed report on the measure the Civil Service Commission expresses the belief that the situation can be taken care of by Executive order, should such action be necessary. If the Commission has reference to the final sentence of S. 577 reading: "The President shall have power, in his discretion, to exclude from the operation of this act any employee or group of employees in the civil service whose tenure of office or employment is intermittent or of uncertain duration," there would seem to be some doubt as to the legality of applying that authority to a category of employees expressly covered by S. 577. The sentence quoted is a repetition of a provision already incorporated in existing law and it may be that a proper construction of the act would make this power applicable only to classes of employees designated in general terms and not to the specific position of postmaster expressly placed by the bill under the retirement system.

This Department has no objection to the proposed legislation.

It has been ascertained from the Bureau of the Budget that this report is in accord with the program of the President.

Very truly yours,

W. W. HOWES,
Acting Postmaster General.

UNITED STATES CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION,
Washington, D. C., April 14, 1939.

HON. KENNETH MCKELLAR,
Chairman, Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, United States Senate.

DEAR SENATOR MCKELLAR: Further reference is made to your letter of January 14, 1939, transmitting copy of S. 577, a bill to amend the Civil Service Retirement Act of May 29, 1930, as amended.

This bill would extend the provisions of the Civil Service Retirement Act of May 29, 1930, to include postmasters of the first, second, and third classes appointed under the act of June 25, 1938, and postmasters of the fourth class.

Section 3 of the act of May 29, 1930, specifically excludes from the operation of the retirement law all postmasters except those of the first, second, and third classes who have been promoted, appointed, or transferred from the classified civil service. The proposed amendment would not affect the retirement status of such so-called service postmasters, as section 3 (d) of the act of May 29, 1930, would operate to accord a retirement status where continuity of service with classified employment exists.

The Commission feels that the employees covered by this bill should be included within the operation of the Retirement Act and recommends that favorable action be taken thereon. It is anticipated, however, that considerable administrative difficulty will arise in cases of fourth-class postmasters, particularly those whose pay is very small.

The Bureau of the Budget advises that there would be no objection to the presentation of this report to your committee.

Very sincerely yours,

HARRY B. MITCHELL, President.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I ask the Senator from Wyoming if the bill would apply to postmasters who are now serving and who were appointed at the request of a Representative or Senator or the political representative of some political party, and are we now trying to place on the retirement list a number of political officials?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. No, Mr. President, I do not think that would be a correct inference. The measure extends the benefits of the Civil Service Retirement Act only to those postmasters who are appointed under the civil-service law. It is true that postmasters who were originally selected and confirmed by the Senate before the passage of the civil-service law for postmasters may qualify under the civil-service law, but I see no reason why they should not receive the benefits of the retirement act inasmuch as they are appointed without term.

Mr. KING. Will the Senator advise us what would be the retirement benefits, for instance, of the postmaster of Boston or the postmaster of New York, where salaries are very large?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. The bill makes no provision whatsoever with respect to the retirement benefits. It merely brings the postmasters under the general provisions of law in that respect. No change whatever is made and no special privileges are extended.

Mr. KING. Suppose they have made no contribution whatever to the retirement fund?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Oh, they would have to make their contribution exactly as anyone else coming in under it.

Mr. KING. Then, would the services of those who have been serving several years and who have made no contributions, but would now come under the bill, be determined from the date they began making contribution or from the date of their appointment several years ago?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. It is my understanding that they would come in from the date of their qualification under the civil-service law and not from the date of their original appointment. It applies only to those who are appointed under the civil-service law and for the period during which they serve under the civil-service law.

Mr. KING. Have those who have been appointed under civil-service law been making contributions to the fund?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. No. Because under the present law postmasters are excluded.

Mr. KING. Then, they would receive compensation upon retirement for a period when they made no contribution to the funds?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Oh, not at all. They would receive compensation merely for the period during which they serve as civil-service postmasters, and nothing else. They come under the retirement law as any new employees would come under the retirement law.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I yield.

Mr. HUGHES. I understand that fourth-class postmasters have this privilege now?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. That is correct.

Mr. HUGHES. And it is proposed to extend it to first-, second-, and third-class postmasters?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. When they are appointed under the civil-service law, and only then.

Mr. HUGHES. They would have the privilege the fourth-class postmasters now have.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Exactly. The Senator is correct.

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. President, as I understand, the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads unanimously favorably reported the bill?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. The Senator from Pennsylvania is correct.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I yield.

Mr. WALSH. If my information is correct the law now provides for the retirement of postmasters at the age of 68, if they have been certified by the Post Office Department to have rendered faithful and loyal service. A method of claiming the benefits of the retirement law has been resorted to by postmasters who have at one time held a civil-service position as clerk or carrier, by resigning or being demoted, and then obtaining the benefit of the retirement law. I approve of the Senator's bill, for I understand it makes no difference between postmasters and any other Government officials.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Exactly.

Mr. WALSH. It puts them all under the general retirement law.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I may say that the bill was drafted by the experts of the Civil Service Commission.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, the Senator will be interested in an experience I have had recently in connection with a career postmaster who was 66 years of age. Had he been 64 he could have resigned and been appointed clerk. He had worked up in the service, and had been in the service for 48 years. Had he resigned, as I have said, he could have been appointed clerk and retired. But he was 66 years of age. Therefore he could not be appointed clerk. The retirement age is fixed at 68 years. He was between 66 and 68 years, and could not receive the benefits of either law. He could not receive retirement benefits until finally a method was provided of retiring on disability rather than obtaining the benefit under the Retirement Act.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I am very much obliged to the Senator from Massachusetts for his statement.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill extending civil-service retirement to certain postmasters."

BENEFITS TO WORLD WAR VETERANS AND THEIR DEPENDENTS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 5452) to provide certain benefits for World War veterans and their dependents and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Finance with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and to insert the following:

That section 1 of Public Law No. 484, Seventy-third Congress, June 28, 1934, as amended, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"SECTION 1. (a) The surviving widow, child, or children of any deceased person who served in the World War before November 12, 1918, or if the person was serving with the United States military forces in Russia before April 2, 1920, who, while receiving or entitled to receive compensation, pension, or retirement pay for 10 percent disability or more presumptively or directly incurred in or aggravated by service in the World War, dies or has died from a disease or disability not service connected shall, upon filing application and such proofs in the Veterans' Administration as the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs may prescribe, be entitled to receive compensation as provided by this act.

"(b) The surviving widow, child, or children of any deceased person who served in the World War before November 12, 1918, or if the person was serving with the United States military forces in Russia before April 2, 1920, and who was honorably discharged after having served 90 days or more (or who, having served less than 90 days, was discharged for disability incurred in the service in line of duty), who dies or has died from a disease or disability not service connected and at the time of death had a disability directly or presumptively incurred in or aggravated by service in the World War for which compensation would be payable if 10 percent or more in degree, shall, upon filing application and such proofs in the Veterans' Administration as the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs may prescribe, be entitled to receive compensation as provided by this act.

"(c) Payment of compensation under the provisions of this act shall not be made to any widow without child, or a child, whose annual income exceeds $1,000, or to a widow with a child or children whose annual income exceeds $2,500. In determining annual income, payments of war risk term insurance, United States Government life (converted) insurance, and payments under the World War Adjusted Compensation Act, as amended (U. S. C., title 38, ch. 11), and the Adjusted Compensation Payment Act, 1936, as amended, shall not be considered. Except as provided in section 6 of Public Law No. 304, Seventy-fifth Congress, August 16, 1937 (U. S. C., title 38, sec. 472d), compensation authorized by this act shall not be payable effective prior to the receipt of application therefor in the Veterans' Administration; and in no event shall compensation herein authorized be effective prior to the date of enactment of this act."

SEC. 2. Section 2 of Public Law No. 484, Seventy-third Congress, as amended (U. S. C., title 38, sec. 504), is hereby amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 2. (a) The monthly rates of compensation shall be as follows: Widow but no child, $30; widow with one child, $38 (with $4 for each additional child); no widow but one child, $15; no widow but two children, $22 (equally divided); no widow but three children, $30 (equally divided) (with $3 for each additional child; total amount to be equally divided).

"(b) The total compensation payable under this section shall not exceed $64. Where such benefits would otherwise exceed $64, the amount of $64 may be apportioned as the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs may prescribe."

SEC. 3. Section 4 of Public Law No. 484, Seventy-third Congress, June 28, 1934, as amended (U. S. C., title 38, sec. 506), is hereby amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 4. For the purpose of awarding compensation under the provisions of this act, as amended, service connection of a disability at the date of death, and degree thereof where required, may be determined in any case where a claim has been or is filed by the widow, child, or children of a deceased World War veteran. Proof of disability at the date of death, and degree thereof where required, and evidence as to service connection, may be filed at any time after the date of enactment of this act or the date of death. Evidence required in connection with any claim must be submitted in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs."

SEC. 4. In the administration of laws pertaining to veterans, retired officers, and enlisted men of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard who served honorably during a war period as recognized by the Veterans' Administration, shall be, and are, entitled to hospitalization and domiciliary care in Veterans' Administration facilities on parity with other war veterans and subject to those provisions of paragraph VI (A) of Veterans Regulation No. 6 (c), which provide for reduction of monetary benefits to veterans having neither wife, child, nor dependent parent while being furnished hospital treatment, institutional, or domiciliary care.

SEC. 5. Effective on the 1st day of the month next following the date of enactment of this act, the rates of death compensation payable under the provisions of existing laws or veterans' regulations to a surviving widow, child, or children, and/or dependent mother or father now on the rolls or hereafter to be placed on the rolls as the surviving widow, child, or children, and/or dependent mother or father of any World War veteran who died as the result of injury or disease incurred in or aggravated by active military or naval service in the World War, shall be as follows:

Widow, age under 50 years, $38; widow, age 50 years or over, $45; widow with one child, $10 additional for such child up to 10 years of age, increased to $15 from age 10 (with $8 for each additional child up to 10 years of age, increased to $13 from age 10) (subject to apportionment regulations); no widow but one child, $20; no widow but two children, $33 (equally divided); no widow but three children, $46 (equally divided) (with $8 for each additional child, total amount to be equally divided); dependent mother or father, $45 (or both), $25 each. As to the widow, child, or children, the total compensation payable under this section shall not exceed $83. The amount of compensation herein authorized shall be paid in the event the monthly payment of compensation under Veterans' Regulation No. 1 (g) and the monthly payment of yearly renewable term of automatic insurance does not aggregate or exceed the amount of compensation herein authorized.

As to the surviving widow, child, or children, and/or dependent mother or father on the rolls on the date of enactment of this act, any increased award herein authorized shall be effective from the date of enactment of this act and in all other cases, except as provided in section 6 of Public Law No. 304, Seventy-fifth Congress, approved August 16, 1937, effective dates of awards shall be governed by the provisions of veterans' regulations promulgated under Public Law No. 2, Seventy-third Congress, March 20, 1933.

Sec. 6. Subparagraph (k) of paragraph II, part I, of Veterans' Regulation No. 1 (a), promulgated under Public Law No. 2, Seventy-third Congress, March 20, 1933, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"(k) If the disabled person, as the result of service-incurred disability, has suffered the anatomical loss or the loss of the use of only one foot, or one hand, or one eye, the rate of pension provided in part I, paragraph II (a) to (j), shall be increased by $35 per month."

Sec. 7. On and after the date of enactment of this act, the rate of interest charged on any loan secured by a lien on United States Government life (converted) insurance shall not exceed 5 percent per annum.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, this is a House bill. I will state the material changes which it makes in existing law. Under the existing law the widow or children dependents of a World War veteran, who had a service-connected disability amounting to 10 percent or more, are entitled to pensions as provided in the law.

This bill adds another class of widows and dependents. It brings in all widows or dependents of veterans who served prior to November 12, 1918, or who were in the Russian expeditionary force, and in service prior to a specified date in 1920, and who died of any disease, or who had a service-connected disability which, if it had amounted to 10 percent or more, would have been compensable. In other words, the dependents of the World War veterans in all cases where the veterans had disability that was service-connected under the law as it exists, and which would have been compensable if it had amounted to 10 percent or more in degree, are given benefits under this measure but not at the same rate.

The present rate of pension now payable to a widow is $30 per month if she is under 50 years of age. That is raised $8 by the pending measure, and there is a corresponding raise of $7.50 if she is between 50 years and 65 years.

There are also some changes made in behalf of the dependent children.

The widow of a World War veteran who had a service-connected disability, but not compensable, is given a pension at $30 per month and $4 for each child.

There is a difference in the pension allowance. The House bill provided for a pension to the dependent father and mother. Since the House bill practically provided for service pensions, in the opinion of the committee, and since in the case of service pensions provision has not heretofore been made for dependent fathers and mothers, in determining dependents the committee restricted the House bill to the widow and children of the surviving veteran or persons who served in the World War or in Russia prior to March 1920. That is the principal change made in the bill.

A subsequent section of the bill increases the statutory pensions now fixed in the law from $25 to $35 for the anatomical loss of only one foot, one hand, or one eye, or the loss of the use of the foot, hand, or eye. The House bill provided that no veteran who had sustained the anatomical loss of an arm, a foot, or an eye should receive a total compensation of less than $100 per month. The Finance Committee thought it best to preserve the general principle of disability and to compensate for the disability actually existing; so the committee recommended that the statutory allowance in such case be stepped up from $25 to $35. So a veteran who has lost a foot, and who is now rated under the rating schedule at 40-percent disability, I believe, and who under the existing law receives $40 plus $25, or $65 per month, will receive $75 per month under the provisions of the amendment made by the Senate committee.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. GEORGE. I yield.

Mr. AUSTIN. Has any estimate been made of the increased cost to the Government due to this proposed change in the law?

Mr. GEORGE. If the Senator will pardon me and let me explain just one other feature, I will come back to that question.

Another section of the bill, which has been added by the Senate committee and which was not in the House bill, provides for hospitalization and domiciliary care for veterans of the World War, the Spanish-American War, the Boxer Rebellion, and the Philippine Insurrection. That provision was recommended by the Veterans' Administration.

Another section of the bill, which is the same as passed by the House, reduces from 6 percent to 5 percent per annum the interest rate on loans made to veterans on insurance policies. That provision does not affect the Treasury. It merely affects all other veterans who hold like insurance, and is estimated to reduce the total dividend earning approximately $150,000 a year.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. GEORGE. I yield.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Did the Veterans' Administration recommend the reduction in the insurance-loan rate?

Mr. GEORGE. The Veterans' Administration did not make a specific recommendation. It did not interpose any objection. It merely pointed out that the reduction would not affect the Treasury, but would reduce the benefits to veterans who hold insurance and who do not borrow upon their insurance.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Obviously, it is a favor to the borrowing veteran at the expense of the nonborrowing veteran.

Mr. GEORGE. Obviously, that is true; but the House passed it, and the Senate did not make any change.

The Senate's attention should be called to an important provision by the House which has been stricken out by the Senate amendment: Under the terms of the House bill any veteran of the World War who sustained or suffered from any wound, although it was not disabling in any degree, was given a 10-percent-disability rating. That provision was very strongly resisted by the Veterans' Administration. Obviously, such rating does not necessarily relate at all to the disability suffered by the veteran. In that connection, as shown by the report, the Veterans' Administration agreed with the committee to re-rate all the veterans of the World War who suffered wounds during the war, and also agreed to establish, by order, a board out of the Board of Veterans Appeals—a subcommittee of that board, so to speak—so to rate all wound cases that there will be uniformity throughout the country, which does not now exist, inasmuch as a rating board in one State may consider as being 10-percent disabling a wound which would not be regarded as 10-percent disabling by a rating board in another State. Of course, that situation might be corrected if the matter were brought to the Veterans' Administration; but the Veterans' Administrator has announced his purpose to set up a special board in Washington to rate all cases of veterans suffering from any wound. That provision in the House bill was estimated to cost considerably more than the entire cost of the present bill.

The Senate Finance Committee has entirely eliminated that provision, leaving the cases of veterans suffering from wounds to be rated and compensated upon the basis of the degree of disability, as in all other cases.

Coming to the question of additional cost—

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. GEORGE. I yield.

Mr. KING. Before the Senator leaves that point, does not the present law make provision for compensation to all those who are suffering disabilities as a result of their service?

Mr. GEORGE. That is true if the disability is disabling to the extent of 10 percent or more. The House bill would have given all veterans suffering from any wound, however slight, a 10-percent-disability rating, and would have cost the Government about $10,000,000 to $11,000,000 a year, according to the estimates furnished the committee. The Senate committee has eliminated that provision.

Mr. KING. Even though the disabilities were unimportant?

Mr. GEORGE. That is correct.

Mr. President, the total cost of the bill, as estimated by the Veterans' Administration, will be approximately $6,470,000.

Mr. KING. Per annum?

Mr. GEORGE. Yes; for the next fiscal year.

It is believed that the bill as recommended by the Finance Committee meets with the approval of the Veterans' Administration insofar as he is authorized to commit the administration upon legislation.

Mr. KING. What would be the cost per annum of the first bill?

Mr. GEORGE. Less than $1,000,000.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, I commend the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE] for his excellent explanation of the bill. The House bill would, in the opinion of the Senate committee, meet with the disfavor of the Veterans' Administration; and the Senate bill, while restricting some of the broadening features of the House bill, has in other instances made the increased benefits to veterans more equitable, and more likely to receive the approval of the Veterans' Administration.

Mr. GEORGE. The Senator from Massachusetts is quite correct. The committee is authorized to say that the bill will have the favorable recommendation of the Veterans' Administration. We were assured that we could not hope to secure the approval of the bill as it passed the House, carrying with it an increased cost of some $17,000,000 or $18,000,000 a year.

Mr. President, may we have action on the amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the committee.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, on behalf of the committee I move to strike out, in the committee amendment on page 12, at the beginning of line 4, the word "of" and insert in lieu thereof the word "or." It is merely a typographical error.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE], on behalf of the committee, to the amendment reported by the committee.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment, as amended, was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

GRADING AND CLASSIFICATION OF FOREIGN SERVICE CLERKS

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Mr. President, a short time ago the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE] asked that Senate bill 2663 be passed over to await House bill 6836, an identical bill coming over from the House. House bill 6836 has now come over, and I ask unanimous consent that it be substituted for Senate 2663, and that it be given consideration at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Minnesota?

There being no objection, the bill (H. R. 6836) to amend the act entitled "An act for the grading and classification of clerks in the Foreign Service of the United States of America, and providing compensation therefor", approved February 23, 1931, as amended, was read twice by its title, considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That paragraph (n) of section 26 of the act entitled "An act for the grading and classification of clerks in the Foreign Service of the United States of America, and providing compensation therefor," approved February 23, 1931, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"(n) Any diplomatic secretary or consular officer who has been, or any Foreign Service officer who may hereafter be, promoted from the classified service to the grade of Ambassador or Minister, or appointed to a position in the Department of State, shall be entitled to all the benefits of this section in the same manner and under the same conditions as Foreign Service officers: Provided, That any officer now included under the act of May 24, 1924, and the amendment thereto of July 3, 1926, shall be entitled to the benefits of this section: And provided further, That hereafter an Ambassador or Minister, or a former Ambassador or Minister, or a person appointed to a position in the Department of State after serving as Ambassador, Minister, or Foreign Service officer, who is not otherwise entitled to an annuity under this section and who shall have served as such for the period mentioned in the following paragraph (1), shall nevertheless be entitled to the benefits thereof in the same manner and under the same conditions as Foreign Service officers, but subject to the following terms and conditions:

"(1) Any person who has served as Ambassador or Minister, or a person appointed to a position in the Department of State after serving as Ambassador, Minister, or Foreign Service officer, continuously or at different times for an aggregate period of 20 years or more, in which period may be included any periods of service in any of the capacities and as provided in paragraph (o) of this section, may become entitled to the benefits of this section as hereinafter provided by paying into the Foreign Service retirement and disability fund a special contribution equal to 5 percent of his annual salary for each year of such employment subsequent to July 1, 1924, with interest thereon to date of payment compounded annually at 4 percent.

"(2) Any Ambassador or Minister, or a person appointed to a position in the Department of State after serving as Ambassador, Minister, or Foreign Service officer, who becomes entitled to the benefits of this section as provided in the preceding paragraph (1), shall receive an annuity computed in accordance with paragraph (e) of this section, including the right to voluntary retirement as provided by paragraph (d) of this section: Provided, however, That in case any Ambassador or Minister, or a person appointed to a position in the Department of State after serving as Ambassador, Minister, or Foreign Service officer, is retired from active service at less than 65 years of age and with at least 20 but less than 30 years of service, computed in accordance with this section, and assuming that he shall have complied with the requirements of the law entitling him to such annuity, he shall receive an annuity computed in accordance with paragraph (d) of this section on the basis of the total period of service thus computed, including extra service credits as provided in paragraph (k) of this section, the fractional part of a month, if any, to be eliminated from such total period of service; or if he is over 65 years of age (unless he is retained in active service as provided in paragraph (d) of this section), or not in active service, on the effective date of this act such annuity shall begin on the date he complies with all the requirements of law to entitle him to such annuity."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, Senate bill 2663 is indefinitely postponed.

S. A. ROURKE

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, a little while ago there was passed over Calendar No. 741, Senate bill 324, for the reason that the House on yesterday passed an identical bill which had not been messaged to the Senate. I ask unanimous consent to revert to that calendar number, and, as the House bill has now been received, that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the House bill instead of the Senate bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair lays before the Senate a bill coming over from the House of Representatives.

The bill (H. R. 733) for the relief of S. A. Rourke was read the first time by its title and the second time at length, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to S. A. Rourke, of Oklahoma City, Okla., the sum of $1,377.06, in full settlement of all claims against the United States for storage in the Merchants Southwest

Fireproof Warehouse Building, Oklahoma City, Okla., of 800 cases of Old Reserve tonic from May 3, 1921, to July 6, 1923, which said tonic was stored and held in said warehouse by the United States marshal for the United States District Court for the Western District of Oklahoma pending certain proceedings concerning said tonic in said court: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the House bill?

There being no objection, the bill was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. I ask that Senate bill 324 be indefinitely postponed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, Senate bill 324 is indefinitely postponed.

PROMOTION OF FARM OWNERSHIP BY TENANTS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The hour of 2 o'clock having arrived, the Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I ask that the unfinished business be temporarily laid aside, and that the call of the calendar be proceeded with.

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. Does the request of the Senator from South Carolina require unanimous consent?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It requires unanimous consent to lay aside temporarily the unfinished business.

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, I am obliged to object. For 6 months I have been striving in vain to prevail on the Senate to consider S. 280, which is commonly known as the motion-picture anti-block-booking bill. Failure, on my part, to object to the unanimous-consent request of the distinguished and always courteous Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES] would aid the enemies of the bill, by further delaying its consideration. Therefore I insist upon my objection.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES] has the floor.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I inquire what is the unfinished business?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the unfinished business.

The CHIEF CLERK. A bill (S. 1836) to promote farm ownership by amending the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act to provide for Government-insured loans to farmers; to encourage sale of farms held by absentee owners to farm tenants; and to enable tenant farmers to become owners of farm homes through long-term low-interest-rate loans on bonds, and for other purposes.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, the Senator from Alabama not being present at the moment, and the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY] also being out of the Chamber, I make the point of no quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Clark, Idaho	Hatch	Maloney
Ashurst	Clark, Mo.	Hayden	Mead
Austin	Connally	Herring	Miller

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eighty-six Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

The clerk will state the amendment reported by the committee.

The Chief Clerk proceeded to state the amendment.

Mr. LEE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the rest of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Oklahoma? The Chair hears none.

The amendment was to strike out all after the enacting clause and to insert:

That the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act is amended by inserting therein a new title to follow immediately after title I thereof and to read as follows:

"TITLE IA—FARM-TENANT MORTGAGE INSURANCE PROVISIONS

"DEFINITIONS

"SEC. 11. As used in this title—

"(a) The term 'mortgage' means a first mortgage on real estate, in fee simple; and the term 'first mortgage' means such classes of first liens as are commonly given to secure advances on, or the unpaid purchase price of, real estate, under the laws of the State, District, or Territory in which the real estate is located, together with the credit instruments, if any, secured thereby.

"(b) The term 'mortgagee' includes the original lender under a mortgage and his successors and assigns; and the term 'mortgagor' includes the original borrower under a mortgage and his successors and assigns, approved by the Secretary.

"(c) The term 'maturity date' means the date on which the mortgage indebtedness would be extinguished if paid in accordance with periodic payments provided for in the mortgage.

"FARM-TENANT MORTGAGE INSURANCE FUND

"SEC. 12. (a) There is hereby created a farm-tenant mortgage insurance fund (hereinafter referred to as the 'fund'), which shall be used by the Secretary of Agriculture (hereinafter referred to as the 'Secretary') as a revolving fund for carrying out the provisions of this title with respect to mortgages insured under section 13 as hereinafter provided. There shall be covered into such fund not exceeding 5 percent of the sums appropriated for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940, pursuant to the authorizations for appropriations made by section 6, as the Secretary may deem it advisable to cover into such fund.

"(b) Moneys in the fund not needed for current operations shall be deposited with the Treasurer of the United States to the credit of the fund or invested in bonds or other obligations guaranteed as to principal and interest by the United States. The Secretary may, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, purchase in the open market debentures issued under the provisions of section 14. Such purchases shall be made at a purchase price which will provide an investment yield of not less than the yield obtainable from other investments authorized by this section. Debentures so purchased shall be canceled and not reissued.

"(c) All amounts credited to the fund shall be available for making payments required under this title.

"(d) The Secretary shall include in his annual report a complete statement with respect to the status of the fund.

"(e) There are hereby authorized to be appropriated to the fund for each fiscal year, beginning with the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, such sums as when added to the sums covered into the fund under subsection (a) of this section will be adequate to carry out the provisions of this title.

"INSURANCE OF MORTGAGES

"SEC. 13. (a) The Secretary is authorized, upon application by the mortgagee, to insure prior to June 30, 1942, as hereinafter provided, any mortgage offered to him which is eligible for insurance as hereinafter provided and, upon such terms as the Secretary may prescribe, to make commitments for the insuring of such mortgages prior to the date of their execution or disbursement thereon: Provided, That the aggregate amount of principal obligations of all mortgages insured under this title and outstanding at any one time shall not exceed $350,000,000, of which not to exceed $50,000,000 shall be insured and outstanding prior to June 30, 1940, and not to exceed $150,000,000 shall be insured and outstanding prior to June 30, 1941: Provided further, That the aggregate amount of the principal obligations of the mortgages upon property in any State insured under this title shall not be a greater percentage of such $350,000,000 than the number of tenant farmers residing in such State is of the total number of tenant farmers residing in the United States.

"(b) To be eligible for insurance under this section a mortgage shall—

"(1) Have been made by a farmer who owns no interest in any real property (other than that covered by such mortgage or occupied by him as a residence and from which he does not derive any substantial part of his livelihood) (A) as security for the purchase price, or part of the purchase price, of a farm upon which he is conducting, or proposes to conduct, farming operations, or (B) as security for the payment of an indebtedness incurred for the purpose of refinancing a mortgage covering a farm upon which he is conducting or proposes to conduct farming operations: Provided, That such mortgages shall not be accepted for insurance until rules and regulations with respect to the eligibility of mortgagors have been prescribed by the Secretary, with the approval of the President;

"(2) Involve a principal obligation (including such initial service charges, appraisal, inspection, and other fees as the Secretary shall prescribe) not in excess of the reasonable value of the farm and necessary repairs and improvements thereon, as certified by the county committee pursuant to section 16;

"(3) Have a maturity satisfactory to the Secretary, but not to exceed 40 years from the date of the execution of the mortgage;

"(4) contain complete amortization provisions satisfactory to the Secretary requiring periodic payments by the mortgagor not in excess of his reasonable ability to pay as determined by the Secretary, such periodic payments to be made to the Secretary as collection agent for the mortgagee;

"(5) bear interest at not to exceed 3 percent per annum on the amount of the principal obligation outstanding at any time;

"(6) provide, in a manner satisfactory to the Secretary, for the application of the mortgagor's periodic payments (exclusive of the amount allocated to interest) to amortization of the principal of the mortgage;

"(7) contain such terms and provisions with respect to insurance, repairs, alterations, payment of taxes, default reserves, variable payments, delinquency charges, foreclosure proceedings, anticipation of maturity, additional and secondary liens, and other matters as the Secretary may in his discretion prescribe;

"(8) be accompanied by an agreement by the mortgagee (not binding upon the Secretary as an assignee) that he will accept the benefits provided by section 14 in lieu of any right of foreclosure which he may have against the mortgaged property;

"(9) contain such covenants as the Secretary shall prescribe to assure that the farm will be maintained in repair, and waste and exhaustion of the farm prevented; and

"(10) contain a covenant by the mortgagor not to mortgage, lease, or otherwise dispose of his interest in the mortgaged property to any person until the Secretary has approved the acquisition of such interest by such person.

"(c) The Secretary shall make no premium charge for the insurance of mortgages under this title, but shall be authorized to collect such charges, fees, and reserves as may be prescribed pursuant to paragraphs (2) and (7) of subsection (b) of this section. If the Secretary finds upon the presentation of a mortgage for insurance that the mortgage complies with the provisions of this section, such mortgage may be accepted for insurance by endorsement or otherwise as the Secretary may prescribe.

"(d) The Secretary shall promptly remit to the mortgagee under any mortgage insured under this title any sums collected by him as agent for the mortgagee. The Secretary shall promptly advise any such mortgagee of any default by the mortgagor.

"(e) If the Secretary finds, with respect to any locality, that the mortgage market there prevailing will not absorb mortgages eligible for insurance under this section, he shall be authorized, within the limitations of subsection (a), to accept such mortgages for the account of the farm mortgage insurance fund in exchange for, or with the proceeds of, interim debentures issued in the name of such fund. Such debentures shall have the same incidents as debentures issued under section 14, but shall have such maturities, bear such rates of interest, and be issued in such manner as may be prescribed by the Secretary with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury. Any mortgages so accepted for the account of the farm mortgage insurance fund shall, as soon as a market therefor is found, be sold by the Secretary, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, and the proceeds used to retire a corresponding amount of interim debentures, in which event such mortgages shall become subject to all of the provisions of this title as fully as though they had been originally insured pursuant to this section.

"(f) Any contract of insurance executed by the Secretary under this section shall be conclusive evidence of the eligibility of the mortgage for insurance, and the validity of any contract of insurance so executed shall be incontestable in the hands of any holder thereof from the date of the execution of such contract, except for fraud or misrepresentation of which such holder has actual knowledge.

"PAYMENT OF INSURANCE

"Sec. 14. (a) In any case in which the mortgagor under a mortgage insured under section 13 shall be in default for not less than 6 months, the mortgagee shall be entitled to receive the benefit of the insurance as hereinafter provided, upon assignment to the Secretary of (1) all rights and interests arising under the mortgage so in default; (2) all claims of the mortgagee against the mortgagor or others, arising out of the mortgage transaction; (3) all policies of title or other insurance and all surety bonds and other guaranties and any and all claims thereunder; (4) any balance of the mortgage loan not advanced to the mortgagor; (5) any cash or property held by the mortgagee, or to which it is entitled, as deposit made for the account of the mortgagor and which has not been applied in reduction of the principal of the mortgage indebtedness; and (6) all records, documents, books, papers, and accounts relating to the mortgage transaction. Upon such assignment the Secretary shall issue to the mortgagee debentures having a total face value equal to the value of the mortgage. For the purposes of this subsection, the value of the mortgage shall be determined, in accordance with rules and regulations prescribed by the Secretary, by adding to the amount of the original principal obligation of the mortgage which was unpaid on the date of default, the amount of all unpaid interest and the amount of all payments which have been made by the mortgagee for taxes, special assessments, water rates, which are liens prior to the mortgage, and insurance on the property mortgaged, and by deducting from such total amount any amount received on account of the mortgage after such default. If the collections from any mortgagor who is making variable payments are less than the current periodic payment due under the insured mortgage, which deficiency is not covered by previous prepayments, and such mortgagor is not in default in his variable payments, and has complied with all of the terms and conditions of the insured mortgage, the Secretary, in lieu of issuing debentures, as hereinabove provided, for the full amount of such mortgage, shall pay to the mortgagee the amount of such deficiency, less the amount of any such prepayments, which payment shall be advanced out of the farm tenant mortgage insurance fund for the account of the mortgagor. Such advance shall be repaid to the fund out of the first available collections received from the mortgagor, with interest thereon at the rate fixed in the insured mortgage.

"(b) The Secretary may at any time, under such terms and conditions as he may prescribe, consent to the release of the mortgagor from his liability under the mortgage or the credit instruments secured thereby, or consent to the release of parts of the mortgaged property from the lien of the mortgage.

"(c) Debentures issued under this section shall be in such form and denominations in multiples of $50, shall be subject to such terms and conditions, and shall include such provisions for redemption, if any, as may be prescribed by the Secretary with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, and may be in coupon or registered form. Any difference between the value of the mortgage determined as herein provided and the aggregate face value of the debentures issued, not to exceed $50, shall be adjusted by the payment of cash by the Secretary to the mortgagee.

"(d) The debentures issued under this section to any mortgagee with respect to mortgages insured under section 13 shall be executed in the name of the farm-mortgage insurance fund as obligor, shall be signed by the Secretary by either his written or engraved signature, and shall be negotiable. All such debentures shall be dated as of the date the mortgage was acquired by the Secretary and shall bear interest from such date at a rate determined by the Secretary, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, at the time the mortgage was offered for insurance, but not to exceed 3 percent per annum, payable semiannually on the 1st day of January and the 1st day of July of each year, and shall mature 3 years after the 1st day of July following the maturity date of the mortgage in exchange for which the debentures were issued. Such debentures shall be fully and unconditionally guaranteed as to principal and interest by the United States. In the event that the Secretary fails to pay upon demand, when due, the principal or interest on any debentures issued under this section, the Secretary of the Treasury shall pay to the holders the amount thereof, which is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, and thereupon to the extent of the amount so paid the Secretary of the Treasury shall succeed to all the rights of the holders of such debentures. The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to purchase any interim debentures issued pursuant to section 13 (3), and for such purchases may use as a public debt transaction the proceeds from the sale of any securities hereafter issued under the Second Liberty Bond Act, as amended, and the purposes for which securities may be issued under such act, as amended, are extended to include any such purchases. All redemptions, purchases, and sales by the Secretary of the Treasury of such debentures shall be treated as public debt transactions of the United States.

"(e) In any case in which the mortgagor shall violate any covenant or condition of his mortgage, the Secretary may require an assignment of such mortgage, together with the incidents thereto as enumerated in subsection (a) of this section, in exchange for debentures to be issued in accordance with this section.

"PROCEDURE WITH RESPECT TO MORTGAGES ASSIGNED TO SECRETARY

"Sec. 15. (a) Upon accepting the assignment of any mortgage the Secretary shall ascertain whether or not the mortgagor desires to remain in possession of the mortgaged property. If the mortgagor does not desire to retain possession of the mortgaged property or if the Secretary is unable to make the findings prescribed by the sentence immediately following, the Secretary may proceed to foreclose the mortgage: Provided, That foreclosure proceedings shall not be instituted if the mortgagor conveys to the Secretary full title to the mortgaged property subject only to the mortgage lien. If the mortgagor desires to remain in possession of the mortgaged property and if the Secretary finds that the mortgagor (1) has made reasonable efforts to meet all defaulted payments and to comply with the other covenants and conditions of his mortgage and (2) will probably be able to meet such defaulted payments before, or within 5 years after, the maturity date, the Secretary shall enter into an agreement with the mortgagor providing for the payment of such defaulted payments, together with interest thereon, at such times not later than 5 years after the maturity date as the Secretary may deem to be within the probable future means of the mortgagor. Should any mortgagor with whom the Secretary has entered into any such agreement thereafter fail to meet any payments the Secretary may proceed to foreclose the mortgage: Provided, That foreclosure proceedings shall not be instituted if the mortgagor conveys to the Secretary full title to the mortgaged property subject only to the mortgage lien.

"(b) Any property acquired by the Secretary pursuant to the provisions of subsection (a) shall be sold to farmers upon such terms as the Secretary may deem advisable. If, pursuant to the provisions of section 51, the Secretary shall bid for and purchase any property foreclosed under subsection (a), the net amount realized from the sale of any such property and in collecting such claims, after deducting all expenses incurred by the Secretary in handling, dealing with, and disposing of such property and in collecting such claims, exceeds the face value of the debentures issued and the cash paid for the assignment of the mortgage upon such property plus all interest paid on such debentures, then so much of such excess as does not exceed the total amount of the payments made by the mortgagor upon the purchase price of such property shall be paid to the mortgagor of such property, less any amounts owing to the Secretary under section 3 (e) of title I or otherwise.

"COUNTY COMMITTEES

"Sec. 16. (a) The county committee established under section 42 shall—

"(1) receive listings of farms in the county from any persons desiring to sell such farms to farm tenants;

"(2) receive applications from farm tenants desiring to finance the acquisition of farms by means of mortgages insured by the Secretary under this title and advise such farm tenants of the available listed farms; and

"(3) examine and appraise farms which farm tenants desire to acquire or the mortgage indebtedness upon which they desire to refinance by means of mortgages insured under this title.

"(b) If the committee finds that an applicant is eligible to receive the benefits of this title, that by reason of his character, ability, experience, and training he is likely to carry out successfully undertakings required of him under a mortgage which may be insured under this title, and that the farm with respect to which the application is made is of such character that there is a reasonable likelihood that the insuring of a mortgage with respect thereto will carry out the purposes of this title, it shall so certify to the Secretary. The committee shall also certify to the Secretary the amount which the committee finds is the reasonable value of the farm, and where advances are to be made by the mortgagee for the construction of repairs and improvements the amount of such advances which the committee finds is economically justified on the basis of the income which can be realized from the operation of the farm.

"(c) No certification under this section shall be made with respect to any farm in which any member of the committee or any person related to such member within the third degree of consanguinity or affinity has any property interest, direct or indirect, or in which they or either of them have had such interest within 1 year prior to the date of certification.

"(d) No mortgage made by any person or with respect to any farm shall be insured under this title unless certification as required under this section has been made with respect to such person and such farm by the committee: Provided, That no mortgage shall be insured with respect to any farm unless it is of such size as the Secretary determines to be sufficient to constitute an efficient farm-management unit and to enable a diligent farm family to carry on successful farming of a type which the Secretary deems can be successfully carried on in the locality in which the farm is situated."

Sec. 2. (a) Subsection (b) of section 40 of the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act is amended by striking out "or title II, or both," and inserting in lieu thereof a comma and the following: "title IA, or title II,".

(b) Subsection (a) of section 42 of such act is amended by inserting after "title I" the following: "or title IA."

(c) Subsection (a) of section 50 of such act is amended by inserting after "title I" a comma and the following: "title IA."

Sec. 3. Section 3 of such act is amended by inserting therein a new subsection to follow immediately after subsection (d) thereof and to read as follows:

"(e) Mortgagors whose mortgages are insured under title IA may be granted loans under this title for (1) the construction of necessary repairs and improvements upon the mortgaged property, or (2) to enable such mortgagors to meet payments of principal and interest due upon such mortgages. Any such loan shall comply with all of the requirements of this title, except that the mortgage or deed of trust securing such loan may be junior to the mortgage insured under title IA."

Sec. 4. The last sentence of paragraph "Seventh" of section 5136 of the Revised Statutes, as amended, is further amended by inserting after the words "National Housing Act" the following: "or which are insured by the Secretary of Agriculture pursuant to title IA of the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act."

Sec. 5. Section 35 of chapter III of the act entitled "An act to regulate the business of life insurance in the District of Columbia," approved June 19, 1934 (48 Stat. 1152), is amended by inserting in paragraph 3 (a), after the words "Federal Housing Administrator", the following: "or which are insured by the Secretary of Agriculture pursuant to title IA of the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act."

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, does the Senator propose to explain the amendment? Many Senators who have read the original bill have not been able to study the amendment in detail, and I think it would be advisable for the Senator to explain it.

Mr. LEE. Mr. President, the purpose of the bill is to extend the principle of Government insurance to the purchase of farms for the rehabilitation of farm tenants. The total amount which can be insured over a period of 3 years is $350,000,000. For the first year a limitation of $50,000,000 is placed in the bill, and for the second year a limitation of $150,000,000.

The bill does not change any of the principles or any of the regulations now governing under the Bankhead-Jones farm-tenant law. It merely extends that law by the device of insuring the mortgage, instead of appropriating money out of the Treasury for the purchase of farms.

The present Bankhead-Jones law has worked very satisfactorily. I desire to refer to two paragraphs from the Oklahoma Farm Stockman of July 1, 1939, with respect to the present law:

The program of the Farm Security Administration to lend tenants the money with which to buy farms in Oklahoma and Texas went over with a bang. The full allotment of money made to each State—namely, $1,053,830 to Oklahoma and $2,118,147 to Texas—was all used up before the dead line on June 30. This particular program, called the tenant purchase or T. P. program of the Farm Security Administration, was quickly and widely accepted in Texas and Oklahoma. Had time, money, and men been available, several times the amount of the sum available could have been used up in starting tenants upon farms bought by and for them. In the year which closed June 30, 181 tenants were financed to buy as many farms in Oklahoma. In Texas the number so bought was 380.

The present program is approved. It is satisfactory. This plan is simply to extend it without appropriation, but by using the plan, which has been followed in Federal housing, of insuring the farm mortgage.

Objection has been made in certain quarters to the fact that in contrast to the Farm Credit Administration Land Bank and Commissioner loans, and in contrast to the Federal Housing Administration insured mortgages, this bill would authorize Government guaranties of mortgages which may equal 100 percent of the value of the mortgaged farm.

To this objection there are two answers.

To require the making of down payments by farm tenants would defeat the whole purpose of the act. The number of farm tenants who are able to make down payments is so negligible that if assistance is to be limited to those who can make down payments, nothing will be done to meet the problem.

Furthermore, much of the criticism of 100-percent farm mortgages, as compared with 90-percent housing mortgages, is based on false analogies. The following elements of risk, necessarily involved in Federal Housing Administration financing, would not be present in the case of mortgages insured under the pending bill.

First. The 90-percent appraisal on F. H. A. loans is not 90 percent of the cost but 90 percent of the appraised value, which is permitted to include builder's profit, land subdivider's profit, architect's fees, and so forth. Hence, the F. H. A. insured mortgages normally represent 100 to 110 percent rather than 90 percent of the cost of the insured property, which would be the proper basis for comparison with the mortgages to be insured under the bill. Farm mortgages, on the other hand, would be appraised solely on the basis of income yield, with no "water" for miscellaneous profits, which may or may not be reflected in the actual income value of the security.

Second. Income to meet payments on F. H. A. mortgages is not derived from the mortgaged property. If neighborhoods deteriorate or industry moves away, payments will not be met, regardless of the initial cost of the dwelling. This risk would not apply to farm mortgages, since, with proper appraisal of income yield, payments will be assured out of income from the insured property itself.

Third. Federal Housing Administration mortgages cover property subject to depreciation. The mortgage must be paid off during the useful life of the building or else the Government must take a loss. Farm mortgages are not subject to this element of risk, since, with proper management, the productive capacity of the farm and its security value will continue indefinitely. Such proper farm management, to prevent soil depletion and erosion, would be assured through appropriate covenants under which the Secretary would be authorized to prescribe proper farming management practices.

These considerations, of course, represent no criticism of the soundness of Federal Housing Administration loans, but are suggested merely to explain why the need for a down payment is not so important in the case of the farm mortgages as in the case of residential property subject to depreciation, neighborhood deterioration, and like risks.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LEE. I yield.

Mr. VANDENBERG. As I read the bill, it is proposed to insure 100 percent of the mortgage.

Mr. LEE. That is correct.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Is that the plan followed under the Federal Housing Administration?

Mr. LEE. That is the plan followed at the present time under the Bankhead-Jones farm tenant law.

As I have already stated, there are two main distinctions between the insurance of a Federal housing mortgage and a farm mortgage. One is that a Federal housing insurance plan includes the profit of the real-estate man or the one who opens a subdivision. It includes the profit of the constructor and builder; and most of it, of course, is a value which is placed on an improvement, which deteriorates much more rapidly than a farm. The other main difference is that the insurance of a home has no guaranty of an income, except as the person who lives in the home has a job somewhere; but the insurance of a farm is the insurance of a productive value which in itself can produce income to meet the required payments. The insurance of a residence in a community where there is an industry in which the persons who live in the residence work is dependent for its security upon the industry. If the industry in the community ceases to operate or closes, the people who live in the residences have no other way to secure an income with which to pay.

For these reasons this measure is different from the Federal Housing provision.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Does the Senator know of any activity whatever in connection with which the Government insures 100 percent of value?

Mr. LEE. Under the present Bankhead-Jones law the Government is lending 100 percent. Of course, this bill, like the present Bankhead-Jones law, provides that in the sale of farms, preference shall be given to farmers with down payment or with stock and equipment. One of the main reasons for the enactment of this bill, of course, is to rehabilitate people. There would be no purpose in our passing a law to set up a means to rehabilitate farm tenants and then put the requirements beyond their reach. Therefore, if we are to accomplish what we want to accomplish in this case, we must enact a law which will allow farmers to meet the requirements of the law.

Mr. VANDENBERG. As I understand the purpose of the bill, it is to transfer from the Public Treasury to private investment, if possible, the financing of tenant-farm mortgages through the device of insurance.

Mr. LEE. That is correct.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Does the Senator think private investment requires 100-percent guaranty in order to be protected? Would not private investment be attracted by a 90-percent guaranty, which would leave at least a 10-percent cushion between the Government and the total responsibility involved in the property?

Mr. LEE. I do not believe that would be appealing to the man who owned a farm in this particular case. The situation is different to that extent from the situation under the Federal housing law.

Mr. VANDENBERG. It seems to me a rather shocking contemplation that the Government is asked to accept 100 percent of the responsibility for private investment. I may not understand all the implications, but that does not sound like elementary common sense to me.

Mr. LEE. When the Senator closely examines the Federal Housing Act I think he will see that the difference between that measure and this one is that in this case there is a productive unit. In the case of the Housing Act there is not. As I explained a while ago, the 90-percent insurance in the case of the Housing Act includes certain profits. There is no watered figure in the insurance of a farm mortgage. All of it represents a value. If these farmers had 10 percent to pay down, they would already have farms, and be trying to pay for them; but if we are going to rehabilitate them at all it is necessary for us to provide a plan whereby they may become owners of farms.

Mr. VANDENBERG. The mortgage itself is 100 percent of the value of the farm. Is that correct?

Mr. LEE. That is correct.

Mr. VANDENBERG. So first the mortgage is issued on a 100-percent basis, and then it is guaranteed on a 100-percent basis. No margin of safety whatever is left at any point in the transaction.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President—

Mr. LEE. I yield to the Senator from Colorado.

Mr. ADAMS. Speaking of the Federal Housing Act, in that instance, of course, the insurance is limited to 90 percent. Then is not a charge made for writing the insurance?

Mr. LEE. That is correct. The charge is one-fourth of 1 percent, and the average price of the farms, for instance, in Texas and Oklahoma, in round figures, is $5,000. One-fourth of 1 percent would be $12.50 a year. If we can rehabilitate farmers for $12.50 a year, that is much cheaper than allowing them to go to town and get on the W. P. A., and spend on them five or six hundred dollars a year, with the full knowledge that the money thus expended will all be gone.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, will the Senator give me a little more information?

Mr. LEE. I yield.

Mr. ADAMS. There are one or two other provisions in the bill about which I wish to inquire. As I read the bill hastily this morning, it seemed to provide that anyone holding a mortgage on a farm might go to the fund and sell the mortgage.

Mr. LEE. I do not know what the Senator has in mind. Will he not go a little further with his question?

Mr. ADAMS. In section 13 it is provided:

The Secretary is authorized, upon application by the mortgagee, to insure prior to June 30, 1942, as hereinafter provided any mortgage offered to him which is eligible for insurance.

It would seem that any holder of a mortgage would want it insured, especially as it would not cost him anything and would not necessarily involve putting anyone on the land. Someone is already on the land, has borrowed money, and has given his mortgage. It is provided that the holder of the mortgage may have the mortgage insured, if I understand the provision correctly.

Mr. LEE. I do not believe that is what the bill provides. There are a number of conditions, beginning on line 23, page 19, which will have to be met before a mortgage is eligible for insurance.

Mr. ADAMS. I ask the Senator to explain another provision. As I read it, if the Government organization makes a loan, it becomes the owner of the mortgage, and if there is a default for more than 6 months, then there may be foreclosure. But as I read the bill it seems as though the man on the property could remain there for 5 years without making any payment; in other words, he could remain if he stated that he desired to remain. It seemed to me that was a rather long period of grace.

Mr. LEE. I believe the Senator will find that is in case the Secretary decides that the man has shown good faith.

Mr. ADAMS. True.

Mr. LEE. But because of something beyond his control, such as a drought, he can be granted an extension of time. Section 15 provides:

Upon accepting the assignment of any mortgage the Secretary shall ascertain whether or not the mortgagor desires to remain in possession of the mortgaged property. If the mortgagor does not desire to retain possession of the mortgaged property or if the Secretary is unable to make the findings prescribed by the sentence immediately following, the Secretary may proceed to foreclose the mortgage: Provided, That foreclosure proceedings shall not be instituted if the mortgagor conveys to the Secretary full title to the mortgaged property subject only to the mortgage lien. If the mortgagor desires to remain in possession of the mortgaged property and if the Secretary finds that the mortgagor (1) has made reasonable efforts to meet all defaulted payments and to comply with the other covenants and conditions of his mortgage and (2) will probably be able to meet such defaulted payments therefor, or within 5 years after, the maturity date, the Secretary shall enter into an agreement with the mortgagor providing for the payment of such defaulted payments together with interest thereon at such times not later than 5 years after the maturity date as the Secretary may deem to be within the probable future means of the mortgagor.

Mr. ADAMS. My question was whether the 5-year period was not a rather unusual period of grace.

Mr. LEE. That is merely included as the maximum time which might be allowed to spread the principal payments and other payments over in order to give the tenant the full opportunity to become the owner of the place.

Mr. ADAMS. We are not to understand the foreclosure would be deferred 5 years if the man in possession made no payment and was merely scalping the land?

Mr. LEE. The Senator is correct; that would not be the case.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Mr. President, the bill provides for an insurance fund to insure mortgages under the law which permits tenants to become landowners. Is that the object?

Mr. LEE. That is correct.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. It that all there is to it?

Mr. LEE. That is all there is to it. It is to help tenants to become landowners.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Are the hundreds and thousands of farmers who have been sold out by the Federal land bank eligible to purchase land under the proposed law, and to have their mortgages insured?

Mr. LEE. Yes; when they come within the provisions set forth in the bill.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Farmers who have been sold out under foreclosure and forced sale by other Federal agencies, which are now working overtime to close out and drive farmers into tenancy, will not be barred from coming under this insurance provision?

Mr. LEE. They will not.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. I thank the Senator for that information.

Mr. LEE. They could be insured under the proposed law, and they would not be barred from their rights under the measure, provided they met the requirements any other farmer-tenant would have to meet.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. But they could not get the benefits of the proposed law until they were sold out under foreclosure?

Mr. LEE. No; there is provision for refinancing. The Secretary is allowed to prescribe certain rules and regulations for refinancing.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Refinancing of those who have purchased land under the Tenant Act?

Mr. LEE. None of those who have purchased under the Tenant Act that I know of are in distress at the present time.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Is there any provision in the measure before us that farmers who have borrowed money from the Federal land bank, or have received so-called commissioner loans, can be refinanced and have their debts adjusted?

Mr. LEE. There is no language specifically referring to such farmers as different from any others.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. This measure, then, and also the Bankhead-Jones measure, apply only to farmers who have no land; they can buy land, and under this measure their mortgages will be insured?

Mr. LEE. That is correct; but the measure also contains a provision for refinancing loans. It does not describe the beneficiaries; it does not limit the benefits to any class, either those who have borrowed from a mortgage company or anyone else. It does not name them, nor does it name those who have borrowed from Government agencies, nor does it eliminate them. It does not refer to them, and does not name them.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Could a farmer who was being foreclosed for some deficiency in payment on commissioner loans or mortgages to the Federal land bank make application under the proposed act to be refinanced, and have his indebtedness adjusted?

Mr. LEE. I should say so. Let me read the provision, and the Senator can make his own deduction:

(b) To be eligible for insurance under this section a mortgage shall—

(1) have been made by a farmer who owns no interest in any real property (other than that covered by such mortgage or occupied by him as a residence and from which he does not derive any substantial part of his livelihood) (A) as security for the purchase price, or part of the purchase price, of a farm upon which he is conducting, or proposes to conduct, farming operations, or (B) as security for the payment of an indebtedness incurred for the purpose of refinancing a mortgage covering a farm upon which he is conducting, or proposes to conduct farming operations: Provided, That such mortgages shall not be accepted for insurance until rules and regulations with respect to the eligibility of mortgagors have been prescribed by the Secretary, with the approval of the President.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Does the Senator feel that under this measure relief would be afforded the farmer who has a mortgage on his farm to secure a loan by the Federal land bank, or to secure a Federal commissioner loan?

Mr. LEE. I feel that relief would be afforded to such farmers, and that is one of the purposes of the bill.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. When the farmer is not a tenant?

Mr. LEE. As I conceive it, we do as much good when we prevent a farmer becoming a tenant as when we make a farm owner out of a tenant.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. I wanted to know what would be done to prevent a farmer from becoming a tenant.

Mr. LEE. When in this bill we provide for refinancing it has all the possibilities of accomplishing that purpose.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Was that provision in the original Bankhead-Jones Act?

Mr. LEE. I do not believe so.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Is this a new provision?

Mr. LEE. This is a new provision.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Then the provision covers more than simply the insurance of mortgages.

Mr. LEE. It covers refinancing by the device of insuring mortgages.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. By the way, what is the interest rate under the Bankhead-Jones Tenant Act?

Mr. LEE. Three percent. The same interest rate is provided in the pending bill.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LEE. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. I notice that the bill provides for the refinancing of existing mortgages. I understood that the main object of the bill was to try to make farm owners out of tenants in order to help them buy farms. In view of the refinancing provisions in the Farm Credit Administration Act, I wonder to what extent the bill proposes to enter a field which would be competitive with the Farm Credit Administration in the refinancing of existing mortgages.

Mr. LEE. In the first place, it is very difficult always to spell a thing entirely out, but the Senator will see that that is safeguarded by the proviso in about the middle of page 20, line 11, which reads:

Provided, That such mortgages shall not be accepted for insurance until rules and regulations with respect to the eligibility of mortgagors have been prescribed by the Secretary, with the approval of the President.

Mr. BARKLEY. I do not think that bears on the question. The question is, If all the farm mortgages now held by the Farm Credit Administration should be eligible to be refinanced under this bill, would there be enough money available? Would not all those who have obligations leave the Farm Credit Administration and refinance their obligations under this measure and have them insured at 100 percent, and get the benefit of a 3-percent rate of interest, whereas they now pay 4 or 5 percent under existing law?

Mr. LEE. I do not believe so. That is the reason for putting in the measure the words "with the approval of the President."

Mr. BARKLEY. That is, the rules and regulations must receive the approval of the President.

Mr. LEE. In formulating rules and regulations, with the approval of the President, in my opinion, rules and regulations would not be promulgated which would put one agency of the Government against another.

Mr. BARKLEY. That might be assumed; and yet, if the law is sufficiently broad to permit eligibility of all existing mortgages to be refinanced at a lower rate of interest, and guaranteed and insured 100 percent, I wonder if all those who might want to make application for refinancing would leave any money for the man who does not have a mortgage but who wants to buy a farm and give a mortgage. I am merely trying to feel my way through this maze, for it seems to me we might set up two competitive agencies by the Government dealing in refinancing farm mortgages.

Mr. LEE. I believe that is safeguarded in the bill. The Senator agrees with me that it is just as desirable to prevent a farmer from losing his farm and becoming a tenant as it is to rehabilitate one who has already become a tenant?

Mr. BARKLEY. Yes, I do; and yet there might be instances in which men who have never owned farms and never been able to buy farms and give mortgages on them might have some right to preference over those who have borrowed and found that they could not pay for the farms after they had bought them.

Mr. LEE. Such persons are prohibited from doing so by language to be found earlier in the bill describing the eligibility requirements. The borrower has to be a real dirt farmer and farming the farm for a living. So the class referred to by the Senator would be eliminated. The bill provides safeguards against speculation.

Mr. BARKLEY. The language in page 20, subsection 1, is a little involved. It reads:

In order to be eligible for insurance under this section a mortgage shall (1) have been made by a farmer who owns no interest in any real property other than that covered by such mortgage.

I can understand that. If he has any other real estate he has no right to come in under this measure and claim that he can buy himself a farm or refinance one out of the provisions of this bill.

Then the language continues:

(A) as security for the purchase price, or part of the purchase price, of a farm upon which he is conducting, or proposes to conduct, farming operations, or (B) as security for the payment of an indebtedness incurred for the purpose of refinancing a mortgage covering a farm upon which he is conducting, or proposes to conduct, farming operations.

That means that if he gets the benefit of this measure he must be trying to buy himself a farm upon which he is going to live and move and have his being, and cultivate as a dirt farmer. Is that not true? Or if he is seeking to refinance one, he has to be in the same relation to it? Is that not true? He has to be the owner of the farm, and operate on it as a farmer?

Mr. LEE. That is correct. There are several limitations. The first is the amount of money available. The amount of money available for mortgages is much less than the amount which will be applied for. Therefore the most needy and most worthy cases will be first considered by the county committees.

We have then the check of the county committee made up of three well and carefully selected farmers of each county. Then, as a check against them, of course, there is the Secretary of Agriculture or his agents or representatives, as advisers. Finally action depends upon the approval of the Secretary or his agents. Since the purpose is to rehabilitate farmers who will make good, why naturally such farmers are going to be given preference. The law spells it out in so many words that preference must be given to those farmers who are married, who are experienced farmers, and who can make a little down payment. Preference is also given to those farmers who have livestock and machinery.

Mr. BARKLEY. Let me ask the Senator another question. Take two farmers in the same neighborhood. One of them owns a farm on which he has a mortgage. He wants to refinance that through the provisions of the bill. Take a farm tenant living in the same neighborhood. He wants to buy a farm and finance it and insure it under the terms of the bill. Both of those men apply to the county committee. Let us assume that they cannot both be accommodated. Has the committee, or the Secretary or any agency under him, the right and discretion under the bill to decide the respective merits of those two men as to whether the tenant who wants to buy a farm and become a landowner in such a case shall be preferred over the man who has already bought one and has a mortgage on it and wants to refinance it?

Mr. LEE. There is no language in the bill which seeks to choose as between the two. That is left to the county committee and to the Secretary.

Mr. BARKLEY. If the county committee prefers the farmer who already has a farm but wants to refinance a mortgage on it, and the committee accommodates him, but cannot accommodate the other one, land ownership in that community would not thereby be increased. It would be made impossible for the tenant to own a farm, but would be made possible for the farmer with a mortgage to refinance it.

Mr. LEE. Of course, if the committee made such a decision they probably would prevent the preferred farmer from becoming a tenant.

Mr. BARKLEY. There are degrees of merit which enter into all individual cases of that kind. I suppose the committee would have the right to take into consideration whether he was a prudent farmer, a diligent farmer, a hard-working farmer, whether he has tried to pay his debt rather than simply to help him refinance it in any event and thereby deny to some other man who had never owned any land the right and the opportunity to buy it and to insure his mortgage and refinance it.

Mr. LEE. The spirit if not the letter of the bill charges the Secretary with the duty of considering all those things.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. TRUMAN in the chair). Does the Senator from Oklahoma yield to the Senator from Alabama?

Mr. LEE. I yield.

Mr. HILL. The Senator from Kentucky raised the question that there might grow out of the enactment of the proposed legislation competition between the various governmental agencies. The Senator threw out a very thoughtful suggestion. As I understand, the bill will be administered by the Secretary of Agriculture.

Mr. LEE. That is correct.

Mr. HILL. And as I understand, under the reorganization the Farm Credit Administration now comes under the jurisdiction and control of the Secretary of Agriculture. Is that not true?

Mr. LEE. Yes; that is what I understand.

Mr. HILL. So the Secretary of Agriculture would therefore have the administration of the provisions of the pending bill, and the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act, as well as the Farm Credit Administration. The provisions of all three acts would have to be administered by the Secretary of Agriculture.

Mr. BARKLEY. They would be administered under separate laws, and they would be separate organizations, just as much so as they are now. The difference would be that there is an over-all administrator with different reins over these bureaus under him held in separate hands. But I do not know whether that eliminates possible competition between the two.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I may suggest a little difference. The Federal land bank is privately owned.

Mr. HILL. The Senator from Kentucky is correct, that the two divisions would be separate, but they would be separate divisions under one head, and the fact that we have the one central head, one central authority ought to go far toward eliminating anything like competition between the different branches or different divisions. Is that not true?

Mr. LEE. I believe there would be complete coordination.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LEE. I yield.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. I wish to ask the Senator a definite question. Under the Jones-Bankhead Act money can be loaned only to people who do not own farms, but who are tenants, so as to permit them to become owners. And as I understand the Senator, the purpose of the pending bill is to insure the mortgages of those who have been tenants and want to become owners.

Mr. LEE. That is correct.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. And it is limited to them, as I understood the Senator from the beginning?

Mr. LEE. I will say to the Senator again, it also provides for refinancing a farmer who has a mortgage on his farm.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. To what section of the bill does the Senator refer?

Mr. LEE. To page 20, beginning in line 8.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. That language reads:

as security for the payment of an indebtedness incurred for the purpose of refinancing a mortgage covering a farm upon which he is conducting, or proposes to conduct, farming operations.

That makes him a renter. He wants to purchase a farm. That does not mean a man who already has bought a farm and has title to it, but has a mortgage on it.

Mr. LEE. If the Senator will read on, he will come to the language I have in mind.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. I read further:

Provided, That such mortgages shall not be accepted for insurance until rules and regulations with respect to the eligibility of mortgagors have been prescribed by the Secretary, with the approval of the President.

If a man owned a farm, and had title to it, but owed money on it, and that money had not been borrowed under the Bankhead-Jones Act, he would go to the new organization under the Bankhead-Jones Act and borrow money to pay off the mortgage which he owed someone else. If so, the bill does more than merely provide for insurance of mortgages. It also amends the Bankhead-Jones Act, so that money may be loaned to others than tenants. Is that correct?

Mr. LEE. No. The bill provides for an insurance of the mortgage which the farmer would give when he refinanced.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Where is he going to refinance? Is he going to get the money under the Bankhead-Jones Act? Will mortgages which have not been incurred under the Bankhead-Jones Act be insured?

Mr. LEE. The farmer could not break a contract. The provisions of the bill do not authorize him to violate a contract. He would have to have the permission of the original lender and the holder of the mortgage to refinance it under the provisions of the bill.

Let me take an example. Suppose a farmer is in distress because of his loan. He applies for a loan to refinance under this provision. The holder of the mortgage, realizing the difficulty of the mortgagor paying out, feels that it would be a good thing to have the mortgage refinanced. Although the interest rate might be lower, the payments would be sure, because they would be insured by the Government. Therefore, the holder of the mortgage might be in a favorable frame of mind to accept the provisions and the insurance of the Government, and reduce his interest. Of course, if the original holder of the mortgage is not willing, this provision offers no relief.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. There is nothing in the record of the Farm Credit Administration to indicate that it would do anything of the kind on a real-estate mortgage. It has sold out something like 60,000 farmers in the past 3 years. In the past 10 years 1 out of every 3 farmers in the United States has been sold out under foreclosure.

Mr. LEE. Of course, I sympathize with the farmers in that situation.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Under present conditions, at least in my section of the country, the man who is a tenant or a renter is better off than the man who owns the land and has a mortgage with the Federal land bank, because under present conditions and present prices the latter has no chance at all.

Mr. LEE. One of the purposes of the bill, of course, is to reduce interest rates.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. On the one hand, we have a Federal agency refusing to reduce the interest rates, refusing to adjust the indebtedness, driving farmers to foreclosure and selling them out at foreclosure. In many instances the property is sold for one-half or one-third the amount of the loan, destroying all equities in the neighborhood. I have in mind a farm on which there was a mortgage of $6,000. It was sold at foreclosure for $2,000. The buildings alone were worth very much more than $2,000.

On the one hand we have a Federal agency driving farmers into tenancy. On the other hand we have a Federal agency lending money at 3 percent to rehabilitate the farmers whom another Federal lending agency has driven into poverty and put on relief. It reminds me very much of a farmer in Minnesota who wrote me a letter, in which he said, "There is so much bum thinking in this country that we do not know where we are going to land. There is too much forth and back, and we go from nothing to nothing."

If there is anything in the bill under which a farmer driven into the streets by the money-lending policies of the Federal land bank and the Farm Credit Administration can be rehabilitated at 3 percent on another farm with a mortgage, insured by the Government, of 100 percent of the value of the farm, that is one thing. That is what I should like to know. If the bill permits that to be done, it amends the Bankhead-Jones Act. Does the Senator mean to say the bill does that?

Mr. LEE. It would not provide cash for the payment of a mortgage. It would only refinance, as I explained, when the holder of the mortgage agreed to the refinancing.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. A bill providing for the readjustment of Federal land-bank mortgages has been pending before the Banking and Currency Committee for 2 or 3 months. It was first referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry of the Senate, but the Democratic leader said that was out of order, and that the bill would have to go to the Banking and Currency Committee. He himself was made chairman of the subcommittee. He gave us an hour, and promised us further hearings. Since that time we have been unable to obtain any hearings on the subject. However, officials of the Federal land bank and the Farm Credit Administration appeared in opposition to a bill of that kind.

Mr. LEE. I will say to the Senator that I am very much in sympathy with farmers in the situation he describes, and I should like to see that condition corrected. However, I believe we would do well to take one step at a time. I feel that this bill is a help. I do not claim that it solves all the farm tenants' troubles.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. I am not talking about tenants. I am talking about the men who are now in danger of becoming tenants. I should like to know if there is any relief for them in the bill. If there is, the bill must be an amendment to the Bankhead-Jones Act.

Mr. LEE. Of course the whole bill is an amendment to the Bankhead-Jones Act. It provides an additional title, title I (a), to the Bankhead-Jones Act.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Then I misunderstood the Senator in the beginning when he said the bill was confined merely to the insurance of mortgages. It also extends the lending provisions of the Bankhead-Jones Act; does it not?

Mr. LEE. That is not correct.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Under the provisions of the Bankhead-Jones Act, loans are made only to tenants and to those who do not own farms. The Senator has repeatedly said this afternoon that a man who owns a farm, or has title to a farm, and has a mortgage on it held by a bank, a life-insurance company, or the Federal land bank, may have the mortgage refinanced under the provisions of the bill. Is that true?

Mr. LEE. That is correct, provided the man who holds the mortgage is willing to accept the terms outlined in the bill. However, the bill does not provide for additional cash to pay off the mortgage and then refinance it. It provides only insurance of a mortgage.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LEE. I yield.

Mr. TAFT. Is it not true that under the terms on page 20 of the bill, any farmer who has a mortgage on his farm may arrange to refinance the mortgage through an insured mortgage? If he has a mortgage on his farm, he may arrange to obtain a new mortgage which is insured.

Mr. LEE. Provided he meets the requirements, and provided the holder of the mortgage is willing.

Mr. TAFT. The holder of that particular mortgage may not be willing; but, as I read the bill, if he is paid off a new mortgage may be insured.

Mr. LEE. That would be true provided he could find someone to furnish the money to pay it off. However, the bill does not provide an appropriation to pay it off.

Mr. TAFT. No; but it assumes that persons are willing to lend money on farms at 3 percent if the Government guarantees the whole loan. They probably would be willing to do so. I do not see why they should not be willing.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LEE. I yield.

Mr. BANKHEAD. If the Senator will indulge me, in answer to the Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT], who seeks information, I submit that as a member of the Banking and Currency Committee the Senator should be aware of the provisions authorizing the insurance of mortgages on existing property under the Federal Housing Administration. In the beginning, 70 percent of the mortgages insured were on existing property, and the insurance had no relation to the construction of the property. The Senator is well aware of that development, because he and I were in attendance upon the hearings where those facts were developed.

The same situation that the Senator recognizes as existing then still exists. With reference to the insurance of existing mortgages applied under this program it is as possible for a farmer to have his mortgage insured for the man who holds a mortgage on his farm, as it is in the case of a residence under the Federal Housing Administration. But that does not mean that the regulations will permit the insurance of every existing mortgage.

In answer to the Senator from Minnesota with reference to the extension under the pending bill of the authority granted under the Bankhead-Jones Act, the pending bill does go further and really covers the proposition the Senator from Vermont [Mr. AUSTIN] so well argued the other night and which the Senator from Minnesota is now submitting, that there is justification, there is reason, cogent reason, for coming to the relief of distressed farm owners who are on the verge of being required to turn their farms over possibly to absentee landowners. In order to avoid that consequence, and not require them to submit to foreclosure and displacement before applying under the tenant law, not to require them first to enter upon a farm as a tenant, if conditions justify, under regulations which are required to be issued under the bill before anyone can qualify, specifying that the farmer should be reliable, dependable, and a good worker, but because of drought, flood, insects, or because of low prices of commodities or unfavorable seasons he is about to lose his property, then, he may take advantage of the law, just as the Senator from Minnesota has in mind, and as the Senator from Oklahoma had in mind in the drafting of this bill.

Of course, we have got to risk somebody, as the Federal Housing Administration has to do. Under the law the Administrator of the Federal Housing Administration has to see to it that the insurance of mortgages on existing property shall not be guaranteed unless such mortgages are insured under fair and reasonable regulations looking to carrying out the spirit of the law.

So it is here. This is an extension of the authority given under the Bankhead-Jones Act which does not contain authority to insure but only to make loans to tenants who had been selected by reason of their character and qualifications and experience, and on the approval by the committee of both the applicant and the farmer. Under those circumstances he could obtain a loan. This bill goes one step further. It does not propose to take the money directly out of the Treasury, as the farm-tenant law does, because there are a large group of farmers who must have the help provided by the bill. In cases where a farmer is on the border line, in possession of his own property, going along as a farmer, but cannot hold on by reason of conditions over which he has no control, though with some help he may hold on, under regulations which, doubtless, the Secretary will issue to protect the Government, for this fund is limited—it cannot be thrown wide open—any honorable, decent, fair Administrator would issue such regulations as would bring about, for the volume of money involved, relief to the largest number of worthy and distressed farmers.

So I submit, in answer to the Senator from Ohio and the Senator from Minnesota, that there is nothing unusual about this proposal. It does, I repeat, confessedly go one step farther, but we have placed a limitation on the amount of insurance which may be issued upon the mortgages.

Mr. LEE. I thank the Senator from Alabama.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a moment?

Mr. LEE. I yield.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Under the Tenant Act the farmer only pays 3 percent. The Federal Government, the Congress, has subsidized the interest payments of Federal land-bank borrowers, however, to the amount of $130,000,000 in the last 4 years, and still they cannot carry the weight, the burden, of the mortgages under present conditions.

It seems to me that if we could amend the Bankhead-Jones Act to carry mortgages at 3 percent to relieve the Federal land banks of these mortgages and let the farmers have the money for 3 percent, and insure it by the Government, the chances are that they could continue as farm owners.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President, the Senator must recognize that that is a different program. The Federal land-bank system is intended for the financing of farmers who are a step higher in financial circumstances than is the farm tenant. That is intended for the group who can furnish 25 percent of the purchase money, a group who have property to some extent, or, at least, have a firmer and more secure position in the ownership of their farms.

Someone has asked me since I have been here today whether the Federal land banks are privately owned or Government owned. We all know there is a combined ownership. The farmers have a certain amount of interest and the Federal Government has a certain amount of interest. The Federal Government really controls the election of four out of the seven members of the board of each bank. That is not a situation to scramble and mix with the purely farm-tenant program; and I now want to make a statement in order to prevent anybody from encroaching upon or attempting to scramble other farm programs with the Bankhead-Jones farm-tenant program, which was established by the Congress after a long deliberation, and which is now meeting, in such a splendid and wholesome way, the approval of the people of this country. I do not think this program ought to be mixed with the Federal land-bank program. I know what is in the Senator's mind. I heard him before the Banking and Currency Committee make a most interesting statement. I share his sympathy for the farmers who are on the "ragged edge," who are barely holding on, and some of whom are not holding on. I should like very much to see the Federal land-bank program reorganized on the basis of a longer amortization period and a lower rate of interest.

We have reduced the rates of interest on home construction in the towns and cities. We have fixed a longer period of amortization. Nearly all farm mortgages, however, are based upon very short periods of time. I should like to see the period extended, as the Senator has in his mind. But the pending bill is an intermediate step; it is an effort to extend—accelerate would probably be a better word—the administration and development of the farm-tenancy program under which farm tenants may be converted into farm-home owners, so that what they have heretofore paid in rent will hereafter constitute an investment and create an equity and ultimate ownership and title to their own farms. That is a different group. That is the group just above the rehabilitation group of farmers now being administered to by the Farm Security Administration with such noticeable public approval. We have, first, the farm-security group, the rehabilitation group who do not come directly into ownership. Then we have the farm-tenancy group under the Bankhead-Jones Act. Here is an acceleration of that program. It puts some of them in the status of home owners, and while doing so, as has been well developed by the Senator from Minnesota, we also prevent a number of farmers from being converted into the tenancy class. So let us keep the separate steps in mind. We are moving in an orderly way; we are making splendid progress; and I hope we will be permitted to proceed with these different programs and different agencies which have been well worked out and are now being ably administered.

Mr. LEE. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment to correct a typographical error. On page 27, line 12, the numeral "(3)" should be changed to read "(e)."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 23, line 12, it is proposed to strike out the numeral "(3)" and insert in lieu thereof the letter "(e)."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I desire to occupy the floor for a few minutes.

Mr. LEE. I am ready for a vote on the bill if the Chair cares to put the question. Does the Senator from Idaho desire to speak on the pending bill?

Mr. BORAH. No; I merely wish to occupy the floor for a few moments, but if the Senator is ready to vote on the bill, of course, I do not want to interfere with that program. Do I understand that the Senator is ready to take a vote on the bill?

Mr. LEE. Yes.

Mr. BORAH. I do not desire to interfere with that being done.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Vote! Vote!

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I wish to offer an amendment to the amendment. I ask to have it stated, and thereupon I should like to explain it.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I sought the floor on the theory that the bill was about to be voted on. I understand that the Senator from Vermont is not ready to have a vote taken on it.

Mr. AUSTIN. That is correct.

Mr. BORAH. I desire, then, if I may, to address the Senate on another subject.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BORAH. Yes.

Mr. TYDINGS. Will the Senator allow me to suggest the absence of a quorum?

Mr. BORAH. I prefer not to have that done.

Mr. TYDINGS. There are very few Senators in the Chamber.

Mr. LEE. Mr. President, there will be no debate on the amendment of the Senator from Vermont so far as I am concerned. I have read the amendment and am willing to accept it. It is substantially the amendment which the Senator offered a day or two ago. It has been agreed to by the House; and if we can accept the amendment and vote on the bill, I believe that will wind up the matter. If not, of course, the Senator from Idaho may then make the remarks he has in mind.

Mr. AUSTIN. If the Senator from Idaho will permit this amendment to be accepted, I will retire and make my explanation afterward.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I certainly do not desire to stand in the way of an immediate vote. If the amendment of the Senator from Vermont is to be voted upon, I will wait until some other Senator offers an amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment offered by the Senator from Vermont to the amendment reported by the committee will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. It is proposed to add to the committee amendment a new section, as follows:

Sec. 6. Section 4 of said act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following words:

"Provided, That if the amount thus determined for any State or Territory, other than the Territory of Alaska or the District of Columbia, shall be less than $100,000, the allotment for such State or Territory shall be increased to $100,000 and the amounts determined for the remaining States and Territories shall be adjusted accordingly: Provided further, That the funds so allotted to any such State or Territory may be loaned to enable the borrower to refinance an existing mortgage or mortgages on a farm personally operated and occupied by him and for necessary repairs and improvements thereon, in cases where the Secretary determines that such refinancing is necessary and will enable the borrower successfully to operate the farm, and that the borrower cannot obtain credit for such refinancing from any other Federal agency or federally incorporated lending institution. Such loans shall comply with, and be subject to, all the provisions of this title."

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, the purpose of the amendment is to allow a certain portion of the funds provided for farm security to be used for refinancing an existing mortgage. That is the difference between the amendment and the original Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act, which allowed these loans to be made for the purpose of acquiring farms.

The particular section of the original law which this amendment proposes to amend is section 4, reading as follows:

In making loans under this title, the amount which is devoted to such purpose during any fiscal year shall be distributed equitably among the several States and Territories on the basis of farm population and the prevalence of tenancy, as determined by the Secretary.

That is the end of the section. That is the whole of the section. It establishes a yardstick which does not work out equitably, because of the difference in the manner in which the inhabitants of different States have taken their titles to farms. Not many instances of farm tenancy are found in certain States of the Union. Thus we get a result in the allotments to the different States which is inequitable; and the purpose of the amendment is to cure that inequity.

I ask unanimous consent to insert in the Record a table showing the allotments according to the law as it is today, and the difference that the amendment I propose will make in the allotments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The table is as follows:

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Vermont yield to the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. AUSTIN. I yield.

Mr. NORRIS. Is this amendment the same one that we agreed to the other day on another bill, and which went out in conference?

Mr. AUSTIN. It involves the same principle, but it is different in respect of the amount. Let me explain that matter briefly.

In the amendment referred to by the Senator from Nebraska, which we accepted, it was provided that 10 percent of the funds already appropriated should be allocated to the use of refinancing existing mortgages. That provision excited some Senator to offer an amendment which added an appropriation of $10,000,000 to the bill we were then considering. I desire today to avoid such an impasse. I have now offered an amendment which adds nothing in cost to the Federal Government. It provides only that in making the allotments to the different States, if there are States which now receive less than $100,000 annually, to each of those States there shall be paid a sum sufficient to bring up the total to $100,000, and it shall be found by taking it away from the States which have a large amount of allotment created by this yardstick which I say has worked inequitably. The table which I am putting in the RECORD shows from what States the money comes. It is taken from States which now have a large amount, and is given to those which have a small amount, in order more equitably to distribute the funds and to accomplish the special relief which was intended to be accomplished, namely, to save thrifty farmers from losing their farms by means of these farm-security provisions, which are refinancing, servicing, inducing the creditor to reduce the debt, inducing the creditor to accept a lower rate of interest, and inducing the creditor to accept an extended time of payment, so that the amount per year which has to be met by the farmer will be less than it has been, and then this further service: Advice, expert advice regarding how the particular farm could be improved and how it could be better operated to produce an income wherewith to pay the debt.

The whole scheme is wonderful. Where I have observed its operations, it is doing well. My purpose is to support it and aid it; and this amendment will accomplish that purpose if it is accepted.

I hope the sponsors of the pending bill will accept the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the committee in the nature of a substitute, as amended.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, I wish to speak on the question of the adoption of the amendment as amended.

NEUTRALITY

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, the vote of the House of Representatives on the neutrality bill aroused great interest in those countries whose governments have long planned in different ways to direct or control the foreign policy of this country. There has been no exception in this matter as to dictators or so-called democracies. All alike have assumed that they could control, or at least affect, the foreign policy of this Nation, and bend it to their selfish and sinister interests.

In France, persons of influence, and the press generally, denounced the action of the House of Representatives in terms seldom heard in international affairs, especially by nations professing to be friendly or pretending to be decent. The denunciation arose out of the fact that the duly elected Representatives of the American Congress failed to determine the question under consideration in harmony with the selfish interests of France. "Congress," said a leading industrialist newspaper, "distinguished itself again"—again, be it observed—"by voting an incoherent and inopportune measure." Another widely circulated newspaper declared: "Congress made no distinction between the democracies and the dictators." Their contention was that Congress made no distinction between France and certain other European countries with which France was in controversy, and made no distinction between countries with different policies and different theories and different conditions and different ambitions; but, upon the other hand, Congress presumed to pursue a course which seemed to the elected Representatives of this country to be in the interest of the Nation which they represented.

Many more quotations might be made from the newspapers; but all of them are of the same tone and thought.

In respect to such criticisms, such exceptional tirades, one might ask: What is the difference between the dictators and the democracies in Europe when questions touching international affairs are being considered? How would, or could, the United States distinguish in foreign affairs between these dictators and the so-called democracies? For illustration, what was the difference in policy between the dictators and the democracies at Munich? Wherein did they differ in their foreign policies or principles? We are not concerned with their internal policies. When the hour came for the dictators and the democracies to join in an international movement of stupendous moment, that is, to destroy, literally to murder, the one real democracy in Europe—what was the distinction in the principles applied by the dictators and the democracies? When it appeared to be in the interests of the dictators and the democracies to break treaties, to disregard all law, legal, moral, or divine, all principles supposed to obtain among all honorable and decent communities, what was the distinction? In what respect did they differ? Did the dictators and the democracies disagree as to the fact they were willing to destroy a helpless nation? Did they disagree as to how it was to be done? Was there anything considered by all, or any of them, except purely selfish interests, brutal, criminal, selfish interests? Did not the democracies, even at the suggestion of the dictators, go at midnight and serve notice on the President of the Republic of Czechoslovakia that the time had come for the dismemberment of this republic—a nation denied a hearing, denied the slightest opportunity for defense, to offer up its very existence, and to do so in haste, as one of the messenger democracies had other matters which required its attention shortly. When the time approaches for the dictators and the democracies to serve their own particular interests, they never differ as to their foreign policy in Europe unless their interests differ.

It is not surprising, therefore, that the majority of the House did not make any distinction between dictators and democracies, but pursued the old system of considering alone the interests of the people of the United States. France might well consider the action of the House incoherent and inopportune, because it was American.

This attack upon the action of the House was probably inspired and greatly accentuated by reason of the public speech of the French Foreign Minister, Bonnet, made at the very time when the neutrality bill was being considered, in which he insisted that we abandon our traditional foreign policy, urged that it was the duty of the United States to become associated in the foreign affairs of Europe and the conflicts of European nations, and to disregard henceforth the teachings of Washington and Jefferson and their successors, and to follow the leadership and accept the noble principles born of the sublime deeds which now enshrine Munich in everlasting unforgetfulness.

Mr. President, you can search history in vain and you will not find such utter disregard of respect and decency upon the part of one nation toward another professing friendship, except perhaps in instances where a nation has wholly forfeited all self-respect or lost all regard for its own rights or is powerless as was Czechoslovakia to protect itself.

Thus we have this situation: The Representatives of the American people are considering one of the most important matters which could come before them. By a majority vote it is determined that a certain course of action should be taken, and the official representatives of a foreign country and its press denounce this action of the American Congress and call upon our people to repudiate the action of the Congress, to reject the traditional foreign policy of our country, and to accept the policy of a foreign power. And this request is made in terms of autocratic contempt.

Mr. President, let us next consider the statements and the actions of the totalitarian states; for instance, Italy and Germany. Professing to find in such action upon the part of the House something offensive to France, these states sought to gather comfort, and it is said they manifested their feelings by smiles and gleeful words. It seems to me we should be guided or affected by their smiles no more than by their frowns, for we must know that underneath either or both is bitter opposition to every principle upon which this Republic rests. But knowing that this is true and that it is beyond our power to adjust these everlasting controversies in Europe, we should pursue the course dictated by our own interests and which would leave us most free to adjudge the pressing problems of our people at home. If we have a policy tested by a century and more of experience, and which has proven of incalculable worth and happiness to the American people, we need not be disturbed, certainly not controlled, by the sadness nor the sorrow, the bitterness nor the contempt, of two European countries affected by reason of their own controversies.

When Washington declared his policy of neutrality, he was denounced because it was claimed such policy favored England, with whom we had lately been at war, and worked injury, great injury, to France, which had been associated with us in the American Revolution. Washington was denounced for his alleged ingratitude toward France and his favor to England. Undoubtedly, as history well records, this policy of neutrality was vehemently denounced in France and most favorably accepted in England, although both France and England stood ready to destroy the new Republic. But Washington was considering neither friends nor foes. He was considering what he believed to be the interests of the new Republic, and the denunciation of one and the apparent approval of the other disturbed him not at all. In contemplation of his duty, he was seeking to establish a policy to prevent the young Republic from "being wrecked on the rock of foreign wars." The Americans most generally—I presume it may be said unanimously—abhor the soulless conception of fascism, and more than abhor the cruel conception of nazi-ism. But are we to be driven either by their threats or by their apparent rejoicings to surrender or give up our conception of neutrality or the proper course for the maintenance of liberty in these United States? Our policy is an American policy. It should be maintained for the interests of no foreign nation, for or in the favor of no foreign government, but for the best interests of the American people and against all the "isms" and schemes which would seek to destroy it.

If we determined our foreign policy because of the denunciation of European nations one toward another, we would be changing our foreign policy about every fortnight. It has not been many weeks since Hitler and Chamberlain were walking arm in arm before the world declaring their agreement, their friendship, their confidence in each other, and frowning upon all this talk about dictators and democracies. Dictators and democracies were then living in splendid accord, and would have continued had the pledges of the European system, which we are urged to enter into, been worth the paper its pledges are written upon.

In the magazine section of the New York Times of last Sunday will be found a most excellent selection of sayings from the writings of the Father of our Country. The individual who made this selection performed a real service to his countrymen at this particular time. On the subject of neutrality, Washington said:

Sympathy for the favorite nation facilitating the illusion of an imaginary common interest in cases where no real common interest exists, and infusing into one the enmities of the other, betrays the former into a participation in the quarrels and wars of the latter without adequate inducement or justification. * * * Europe has a set of primary interests which to us have none, or a very remote, relation. Hence she must be engaged in frequent controversies, the causes of which are essentially foreign to our concerns.

There will be recalled the determined effort of France to prevent the establishment of permanent peace between Great Britain and the new Republic. While anxious to see Great Britain lose her colonies, France was equally anxious to see these colonies pass to the control of herself, and schemed in every way possible to effectuate that purpose. Then, as now, it was urged that there were liberal nations in Europe, and brutal, treacherous, aggressive nations. Then, as now, we were urged to throw our influence on the side of humanity and against the aggressor nations. Then, as now, European nations were in controversy between themselves, and then, as now, they were seeking to make use of this Republic to their own selfish ends. But Washington was determined to adopt a policy of neutrality, and to stand aloof from the schemes of both, or all, European nations. They were unable to swerve him, either by their arguments or their denunciations or their rejoicings, from his course. He listened to neither false promises nor false pretenses. He thought alone of America and American interests. Had he listened to either France or Great Britain at that time, we would not have long been a Nation; we would have had a country broken in pieces, and the territory thereof distributed between different powers. That was what both groups of nations were seeking. We can no more afford to listen to the selfish arguments of one group of nations today than we could then, or be influenced by the arguments, denunciations, or smiles of either the dictators or democracies. They all have in mind just one thing, and that is to make such use of the United States as it is possible to make to serve their own interests.

We are told, however, that Europe has changed, and especially England and France have changed, for the better. The insistent argument now is that inventions, speedy transportation, and so forth, have brought the two continents closer together. It is claimed that there is really no difference between the European system and the American system, except as to particular nations. Here permit me to read a paragraph or so from an article by Anne O'Hare McCormick, appearing in the papers on July 2 of this year. This writer is a student of international affairs of noted standing, spending much of her time in recent years in Europe, and is not, as I understand, an isolationist—that term of studied reproach sought to be applied to those who are supposed to be overzealous in their support of American principles.

I read a paragraph from her article:

Nothing in the history of this country is more striking than the change in our relation to Europe. It isn't merely a shortening of distance, dramatized in the last fortnight by the inauguration of two passenger air services that cross the Atlantic in a day.

WE WANT TO KEEP OUT

Still less is it a change of mind. Since 1776 the Old World has moved at a pace so much slower than ours that today, in every respect, it is far more like its former self than this great land is like the dependent colonies that had the nerve to proclaim their independence. These States were then, as they are now, politically more mature than Europe. They had the sense to neutralize their imported diversities and rivalries in a Federal Union. They had the wisdom not to twist and warp their free growth by tying up with older nations, even with their friends against their enemies—

Referring to France and England—

with their fellow revolutionists against the defenders of the status quo.

America feels the same way about Europe in 1939. The desire to live our own life, independent of endless quarrels for domination, was never stronger than at this moment.

To those who have visited Capitol Hill in recent days it is very evident that the mind of Congress is disturbed and influenced by this feeling. Consciously or unconsciously, the representatives of the people are moved to strike at the extraordinary powers of the President because the shadow of dictatorship hangs over the world. The House whittles to nothing the wider discretion desired by the administration in the event of war because the revised neutrality bill enlarges the mandate of the Executive, but especially because of a fear that he will pull us into the conflict.

The truth is that the United States is obsessed by Europe. Talk to any American, whether he hails from Kansas or South Carolina, works in a delicatessen shop or a gas station, and 9 times out of 10 his chief concern isn't about Tientsin or Bolivia, the devaluation of the dollar, or the revaluation of his packet of cigarettes. His mind is on what's happening in Europe.

In reality, our relation to Europe has altered enormously. We are more alien to the grooved mind and stale traditions of the Old World than our fathers of 1776. We like it less than we did in 1917 because we know it better. The close associations of war and the dark period that followed have made us more cynical. From experience we have learned a hundred good reasons for arguing that we cannot save Europe, and that the best way to save reason, freedom, the values America stands for, is to steer clear of "other people's wars" and pay the stiff price of absolute neutrality.

Mr. President, these remarks have been called forth by reason of the statements made in both the totalitarian states and the so-called democracies concerning a matter which we are soon to pass upon.

I ask to have printed in the RECORD at this point as part of my remarks the article to which I have referred in the magazine section of the New York Times.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SCHWARTZ in the chair). Without objection, it is so ordered.

The matter referred to is as follows:

[From the New York Times Magazine of July 2, 1939]

WASHINGTON'S WORDS—WORDS FOR TODAY

As we are about to celebrate another anniversary of the Declaration of Independence it is clear that problems which beset the infant Nation born of that act are with us still. Many of the issues most vital today were the earnest concern of our first President even before he assumed his high office 150 years ago. And George Washington's writings—especially his Farewell Address—show how that fervent believer in American ideals (also an unshrinking realist), while he dealt with the practical situation, insisted always on the long view and the maintenance of fundamental principles.

The field he covered embraces foreign policy, neutrality, defense, a wide range of domestic relations, religion, and education. If his view was broad as well as long, the conviction behind his conclusions was intense. Against certain perils he warned his fellow citizens "in the most solemn manner." And what he has to say includes much that arrests attention all the more sharply at the moment, because the march of events has recreated for our Nation of 130,000,000 a situation with regard to Europe curiously like that which existed for the Nation of 3,000,000 as the eighteenth century passed into the nineteenth.

The following quotations, under 10 topical headings, reveal the man no less than his considered opinion. (H. I. B.)

LIBERTY AND UNION

"There are four things which I humbly conceive are essential to the well-being, I may even venture to say to the existence, of the United States as an independent power.

"First, an indissoluble union of the States under one Federal head;

"Secondly, a sacred regard to public justice;

"Thirdly, the adoption of a proper peace establishment; and

"Fourthly, the prevalence of that pacific and friendly position among the people of the United States, which will induce them to forget their local prejudices and policies, to make those mutual concessions which are requisite to the general prosperity, and in some instances to sacrifice their individual advantages in the interest of the community.

"These are the pillars on which the glorious fabric of our independence and national character must be supported. Liberty is the basis, and whoever would dare to sap the foundation, or overturn the structure, under whatever specious pretext he may attempt it, will merit the bitterest execration and the severest punishment which can be inflicted by his injured country." (Circular letter to the Governors of the several States, 1783.)

"The unity of government which constitutes you one people * * * is the main pillar of your real independence; the support of your tranquillity at home; of your peace abroad; of your safety; of your prosperity; of that very liberty which you so highly prize.

"And remember, especially, that for the efficient management of your common interests, in a country so extensive as ours, a government of as much vigor as is consistent with perfect security and liberty, is indispensable. Liberty finds in such a government, with powers properly distributed, its surest guardian. It is indeed little else than a name, where government is too feeble to withstand the enterprises of faction, to confine each member of society within the limits prescribed by the laws, and to maintain all in secure and tranquil enjoyment of the rights of person and property." (Farewell Address, 1796.)

FOREIGN POLICY

"The great rule of conduct for us, in regard to foreign nations, is, in extending our commercial relations, to have with them as little political connection as possible.

"Europe has a set of primary interests which to us have no, or a very remote, relation. Hence she must be engaged in frequent controversies, the causes of which are essentially foreign to our concerns. Hence therefore it must be unwise for us to implicate ourselves by artificial ties, in the ordinary vicissitudes of her politics, or the ordinary combinations, and collisions of her friendships and enmities.

"Our detached and distant situation invites and enables us to pursue a different course.

"'Tis our policy to steer clear of permanent alliances with any portion of the foreign world: * * * Taking care always to keep ourselves by suitable establishments, on a respectable defensive posture, we may safely trust to temporary alliances for extraordinary emergencies." (Farewell Address.)

NEUTRALITY

"The duty of holding a neutral conduct may be inferred, without anything more, from the obligation which justice and humanity impose on every nation in cases in which it is free to act, to maintain inviolate the relations of peace and amity toward other nations.

"The inducements of interest for observing that conduct will be best referred to your own reflections and experience. With me a predominant motive has been the endeavor to gain time for our country to settle and mature its yet recent institutions and to progress without interruption, to that degree of strength and consistency, which is necessary to give it, humanly speaking, the command of its own fortunes.

"Antipathy in one nation against another disposes each more readily to offer insult and injury, to lay hold of slight causes of umbrage, and to be haughty and intractable when accidental or trifling occasions of dispute occur.

"Hence frequent collisions, obstinate, envenomed, and bloody contests. * * * Sympathy for the favorite nation facilitating the illusion of an imaginary common interest in cases where no real common interest exists, and infusing into one the enmities of the other, betrays the former into a participation in the quarrels and wars of the latter, without adequate inducement or justification. It leads also to concessions to the favorite nation of privileges denied to others which are apt doubly to injure the nation making the concessions; by unnecessarily parting with what ought to have been retained; and by exciting jealousy, ill-will, and a disposition to retaliate, in the parties from whom equal privileges are withheld; and it gives to ambitious, corrupted, and deluded citizens (who devote themselves to the favorite nation) facility to betray, or sacrifice the interests of their own country without odium, sometimes even with popularity." (Farewell Address.)

DEFENSE

"The militia of this country must be considered as the palladium of our security, and the first effectual resort in case of hostility; it is essential, therefore, that the same system should pervade the whole; that the formation and discipline of the militia of the continent should be absolutely uniform, and that the same species of arms, accoutrements, and military apparatus should be introduced in every part of the United States. No one who has not learned it from experience can conceive the difficulty, expense, and confusion which result from a contrary system, of the vague arrangements which have hitherto prevailed." (Circular letter to the Governors of the Several States.)

"There can be no greater error than to expect or calculate upon real favors from nation to nation. 'Tis an illusion which experience must cure, which just pride ought to discard." (Farewell Address.)

PUBLIC CREDIT

"As a very important source of strength and security, cherish the public credit. One method of preserving it is to use it as sparingly as possible; avoiding occasions of expense by cultivating peace, but remembering also that timely disbursements to prepare for danger frequently prevent much greater disbursements to repel it; avoiding likewise the accumulation of debt, not only by shunning occasions of expense, but by vigorous exertions in time of peace to discharge the debts which unavoidable wars may have occasioned, not ungenerously throwing upon posterity the burden which we ourselves ought to bear. The execution of these maxims belongs to your representatives, but it is necessary that public opinion should cooperate." (Farewell Address.)

SUBVERSIVE TENDENCIES

"It is important * * * that the habits of thinking in a free country should inspire caution, in those intrusted with its administration, to confine themselves within their respective constitutional spheres, avoiding in the exercise of the powers of one department to encroach upon another—the spirit of encroachment tends to consolidate the powers of all departments in one, and thus to create, whatever the form of government, a real despotism. * * *

"If in the opinion of the people, the distribution or modification of the constitutional powers, be in any particular wrong, let it be corrected by an amendment in the way which the Constitution designates. But let there be no change by usurpation; for though this, in one instance may be the instrument of good, it is the customary method by which free government is destroyed. The precedent must always greatly overbalance in permanent evil any partial or transient benefit which the use can at any time yield. * * *

"Toward the preservation of your Government and the permanency of your present happy state, it is requisite * * * that you resist with care the spirit of innovation upon its principles, however specious the pretends * * *. In all the changes to which you may be invited, remember that time and habit are at least as necessary to fix the true character of governments, as of other human institutions—that experience is the surest standard by which to test the real tendency of the existing constitution of a country—that facility of changes upon credit of mere hypothesis and opinion, exposes to perpetual change, from the endless variety of hypothesis and opinion." (Farewell Address.)

PRESSURE GROUPS

"The basis of our political systems is the right of the people to make and alter their Constitution of government—but the Constitution which at any time exists, until changed by an explicit and authenticated act of the whole people, is sacredly obligatory upon all. * * *

"All obstructions to the execution of the laws, all combinations and associations under whatever plausible character, with the real design to direct, control, counteract, or awe the regular deliberation and action of the constituted authorities, are destructive of this fundamental principle and of fatal tendency. They serve to organize faction, to give it an artificial and extraordinary force, to put in the place of the delegated will of the Nation the will of a party, often a small but enterprising minority of the community. * * *

"However, combinations and associations of the above description may now and then answer popular ends, they are likely in the course of time and things to become potent engines by which cunning, ambitious, and unprincipled men will be enabled to subvert the power of the people and to usurp for themselves the reins of government, destroying afterward the very engines which have lifted them to unjust dominion." (Farewell Address.)

PARTY RULE

"The alternate dominion of one faction over another, sharpened by the spirit of revenge, natural to party dissensions, which in different ages and countries has perpetrated the most horrid enormities, is itself a frightful despotism. But this leads at length to a more formal and permanent despotism. The disorders and miseries which result gradually incline the minds of men to seek security and repose in the absolute power of an individual; and sooner or later the chief of some prevailing faction, more able or more fortunate than his competitors, turns this disposition to the purposes of his own elevation. * * *

"Without looking forward to an extremity of this kind (which, nevertheless, ought not to be out of sight), the common and continual mischief of the spirit of party are sufficient to make it the interest and duty of a wise people to discourage and restrain it." (Farewell Address.)

RELIGION

"Of all the dispositions and habits which lead to political prosperity, religion, and morality are indispensable supports. In vain would that man claim the tribute of patriotism who should labor to subvert these great pillars of human happiness, these firmest props of the duties of men and citizens. The mere politician, equally with the pious man, ought to respect and cherish them. * * *

"And let us with caution indulge the supposition that morality can be maintained without religion. Whatever may be conceded to the influence of refined education on minds of peculiar structure, reason, and experience both forbid us to expect that national morality can prevail in exclusion of religious principles." (Farewell Address.)

"The citizens of the United States of America have a right to applaud themselves for having given to mankind examples of an enlarged and liberal policy; a policy worthy of imitation. All possess alike liberty of conscience and immunities of citizenship. It is now no more that toleration is spoken of as if it was by the indulgence of one class of people; that another enjoyed the exercise of their inherent natural rights. For, happily, the Government of the United States, which gives to bigotry no sanction, to persecution no assistance, requires only that they who live under its protection should demean themselves as good citizens, in giving it on all occasions their effectual support." (Reply to address from the Hebrew Congregation of Rhode Island, 1790.)

EDUCATION

"Promote * * * as an object of primary importance institutions for the general diffusion of knowledge. In proportion as the structure of a government gives force to public opinion, it is essential that public opinion should be enlightened." (Farewell Address.)

"It has always been a source of serious regret with me to see the youth of these United States sent to foreign countries for the purposes of education, often before their minds are formed or that they had imbibed any adequate idea of the happiness of their own, contracting, too frequently, not only habits of dissipation and extravagance but principles unfriendly to republican government, and to the true and genuine liberties of mankind, which thereafter are rarely overcome. * * *

"For these reasons, it has been my ardent wish to see a plan devised, on a liberal scale, which would have the tendency to spread systematic ideas through all parts of this rising empire, thereby to do away local attachments and State prejudices, so far as the nature of things would or, indeed, ought to admit, from our national councils. * * *

"Looking forward anxiously to the accomplishment of so desirable an object as this is, in my estimation, my mind has not been able to contemplate any plan more likely to effect the measure than the establishment of a university in the central part of the United States to which the youths of fortune and talent from all parts thereof might be sent for the completion of their education in all the branches of polite literature, in the arts and sciences, in acquiring knowledge in the principles of politics and government, and, as a matter of infinite importance, in my judgment, by associating with each other, forming friendships in juvenile years, be enabled to free themselves in a proper degree from those local prejudices and habitual jealousies which have just been mentioned, and which, when carried to excess, are never-failing sources of disquietude to the public mind and pregnant of mischievous consequences to this country." (Washington's will, written with his own hand, 1799.)

PROMOTION OF FARM OWNERSHIP BY TENANTS

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 1836) to promote farm ownership by amending the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act to provide for Government-insured loans to farmers; to encourage sale of farms held by absentee owners to farm tenants; and to enable tenant farmers to become owners of farm homes through long-term, low-interest-rate loans on farms; and for other purposes.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, I wish to ask the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. LEE] whether the $350,000,000 and the $50,000,000 which are to be spent during the next year are part of the expenditures suggested by the President in his recent letter to the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES]. I notice that in the letter one of the items is farm-tenant program, total amount of all expansion of self-liquidating portion of the Farm Security Administration for tenant-farm purchases, rehabilitation program, loans for minor improvements and repairs, loans to resettlement cooperatives, and loans for water facilities, $500,000,000. Loan disbursements for the fiscal year 1940, $250,000,000.

Is this program part of that, or is it in addition to that, or has it any direct relation to that expenditure?

Mr. LEE. So far as I am able to say, it has no relation to it.

Mr. TAFT. Do I understand, then, that a bill will probably be brought in for an additional $250,000,000 for tenant-farm purchases?

Mr. LEE. I cannot answer that question.

Mr. TAFT. The Senator is not advised. Does the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES] have any more information regarding that matter?

Mr. BYRNES. I must say I did not hear the Senator's former question.

Mr. TAFT. I asked whether the $350,000,000 under the pending bill was in addition to the $500,000,000 suggested in the letter from the President to the Senator from South Carolina, which lists for the farm-tenant program $500,000,000? Is this to be part of that $500,000,000 or in addition to it?

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I am unable to advise the Senator. My information is that if a bill of that kind is introduced it will be introduced by the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY]. I have not had any statement from the Senator from Kentucky about it, and I do not know what is intended.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, I am so much in accord with the purposes of the pending measure that I do not want to make any fight against it. I do, however, wish to make one statement. I do not think the Senate ought to adopt it under the theory that it provides for a duplicate of the Federal Housing Administration program. There are many differences between the two. There is a fundamental difference. It seems to me clear that the bill does not provide for insurance in any sense in which the word "insurance" may properly be used.

In the first place, in the bill, as I read it, the amortization period may be as long as 40 years, whereas under F. H. A. it does not exceed 25 years.

In the pending bill the interest rate is 3 percent. Under F. H. A. it is anywhere from 5 to 6 percent.

In the third place, the F. H. A., as pointed out, will only loan up to 90 percent in some cases and 80 percent in others, whereas under this bill the loan is 100 percent.

As I read the bill, the Secretary of Agriculture will service the law. He will collect the rents, the interest, and mortgage payments, instead of the mortgagee collecting those payments. In other words, the Government deals with the tenant and not the mortgagee.

Under the pending bill the mortgagee cannot foreclose. Under the F. H. A. the mortgagee forecloses, and then if there is a loss the Government, to some extent, takes care of it.

Under the pending bill the mortgagee cannot foreclose. If the lender is in default, the mortgagee simply acquires the Government debentures, and the Government takes over the mortgage and then carries the mortgage indefinitely and may extend it 5 years beyond the 40 years and spread the payments out much more thinly.

And finally in this case there is no premium charged for insurance. That is why I say it is not insurance at all. Insurance is a plan by which a number of people pay a premium in order that there may be finally payment for all loss. It is not insurance. It is a Government guaranty. There is no premium provided in this bill. It seems to me to be exactly the same as if the Government were loaning direct to the farm owner. I think we ought to consider it on that basis.

The F. H. A. is worked out on a scientific basis. The fund that will be built up from the insurance premiums, so far as we can see, will be sufficient to pay the losses that may occur.

Under the pending bill the Government assumes all such losses, and the Government itself loans the money.

So I think that in considering the bill we should realize that what we are doing is providing for additional Government loans.

I may say, thinking over the bill further, that I have rather changed my mind and would not say what I said a moment ago to the Senator from Oklahoma. I am a little doubtful whether it is going to be effective at all. I doubt if there are many private individuals willing to loan money at 3 percent, even with a Government guaranty, when one takes into consideration all the trouble and the nuisance they are going to have in dealing with the Government in getting the mortgage insured and in working out the whole plan. I am doubtful of it. I think it is unfortunate that apparently the committee did not consult any banking experts on whether this kind of thing could be done or could not be done. Of course, the amount itself is not very large, and probably only the smaller amount is justified because the program is experimental.

I feel, however, so much in sympathy with the purpose of the bill that I hope that when it gets to the House it may either provide for a straight Government loan, or put the transactions on a strictly business basis, the way the F. H. A. is today. Certainly I do not want to take the time of the Senate in opposing the bill at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is in agreeing to the committee amendment as amended.

Mr. GURNEY. Mr. President, at this time I should like to give the Senate the advantage of the experience we have had in the State of South Dakota with a system similar to that outlined in the pending proposal. From a reading of the different sections of the bill it seems to me it is similar to the rural credits system with which we have had much painful experience in South Dakota. I do not want the Senate to feel that I am not in complete accord with the objectives of the bill; but I believe the Senate should have the benefit of the experience we have had in South Dakota.

In 1919 the people of South Dakota voted to amend the State constitution so that it would be possible to lend the credit of South Dakota to tenant farmers or prospective farmers who wanted to own farms in South Dakota. The credit of the State was loaned to the farmers to the tune of some $60,000,000. Briefly, the outcome of that lending of the State's credit has been that up to the present time the State of South Dakota has sustained a loss of approximately $40,000,000. It has sustained a loss in interest during the past 20 years, a loss due to the lesser value of the farms, and a loss on the principal amounts of the mortgages.

In the first place, the money was loaned in much the same manner as loans are proposed to be made under the provisions of the pending bill. The credit of the State of South Dakota was jeopardized to such an extent that the State had to turn over to the rural credits department one-half of the amount collected for a number of years from the State gasoline tax, which amounted to approximately $1,000,000 per year. At the present time the State of South Dakota is indebted to the tune of approximately $40,000,000 on account of the constitutional amendment of 1919, under which the credit of the State was loaned for the purchase of farms.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the committee amendment, in the nature of a substitute, as amended.

The amendment, as amended, was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question now is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CALL OF THE ROLL

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll. The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Borah	Clark, Mo.	Gillette
Ashurst	Bridges	Connally	Glass
Austin	Bulow	Danaher	Green
Bailey	Burke	Davis	Guffey
Bankhead	Byrd	Donahay	Gurney
Barbour	Byrnes	Ellender	Hale
Barkley	Capper	George	Harrison
Bilbo	Chavez	Gerry	Hatch
Bone	Clark, Idaho	Gibson	Hayden

Herring	Lundeen	Pittman	Tobey
Hill	McKellar	Radcliffe	Townsend
Holman	Maloney	Reed	Truman
Holt	Mead	Russell	Tydings
Hughes	Miller	Schwartz	Vandenberg
Johnson, Calif.	Minton	Schwellenbach	Van Nuys
Johnson, Colo.	Murray	Sheppard	Wagner

La Follette	Norris	Slattery	Wheeler
Lee	Nye	Smathers	White
Lodge	O'Mahoney	Stewart	Wiley
Logan	Overton	Taft
Lucas	Pepper	Thomas, Okla.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HUGHES in the chair). Eighty-six Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

PROHIBITION OF "BLOCK BOOKING" AND BLIND SELLING OF MOTION-PICTURE FILMS

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, I move that the Senate proceed to consider Senate bill 280—to prohibit and to prevent the trade practices known as compulsory block booking and blind selling in the leasing of motion-picture films in interstate and foreign commerce.

Let me assure the Senate that if my motion prevails and I obtain the floor, I shall yield for any unanimous-request proceedings that will not interfere with my discussion of the bill immediately after the approval of the Journal tomorrow.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. NEELY. I yield to the Senator from Arizona.

Mr. ASHURST. The Senator does not expect to vote on the bill this afternoon, does he?

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, I assure the able Senator from Arizona that there will be no vote on the bill this afternoon.

Mr. ASHURST. The Senator's word is all I need.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from West Virginia.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 280) to prohibit and to prevent the trade practices known as compulsory block booking and blind selling in the leasing of motion-picture films in interstate and foreign commerce.

EXCHANGE OF SURPLUS AGRICULTURAL COMMODITIES FOR FOREIGN MATERIALS

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I ask the Senator if he will yield to me to ask that the unfinished business be temporarily laid aside so that the Senate may proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 2697, which I send to the desk?

Mr. NEELY. With the understanding that the Senator's bill will not interfere with the consideration of S. 280 tomorrow, I gladly yield.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to laying aside temporarily the unfinished business for the purpose indicated by the Senator from South Carolina? The Chair hears none, and the unfinished business is temporarily laid aside.

The Senator from South Carolina has asked unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 2697, the title of which will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. A bill (S. 2697) to facilitate the execution of arrangements for the exchange of surplus agricultural commodities produced in the United States for reserve stocks of strategic and critical materials produced abroad.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, I do not object to the present consideration of the bill, but I should like to be heard in opposition to it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will have an opportunity to discuss the bill as soon as it shall be before the Senate. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2697), which had been reported from the Committee on Banking and Currency, with amendments.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, may I now have the floor?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut is recognized.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, as this bill is drawn, its sponsor, the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES], tells me it is intended to give effect to the agreement which was entered into with Great Britain providing for the exchange of cotton for rubber. On the other hand, a reference to its provisions will disclose that it is general in its terms; that it applies to any possible future treaty; that it provides that the United States will dispose of the stocks of materials so acquired only in accordance with the terms of the applicable agreement, and that there are authorized to be appropriated sums of money to carry out the terms of agreements or treaties which have not as yet been concluded. Because of these general phases, constituting objections to the bill, I feel that this particular bill should be very definitely amended in order to present the issue involved in carrying into effect the treaty of June 23, 1939, with Great Britain.

But that is not the fundamental vice of the bill, Mr. President. Fundamentally, as I see it, this bill commits the Government of the United States to a brand new policy, and that is the policy of barter. By the terms of this bill we are entering into foreign markets and undertaking by virtue of agreements between representatives of our country and representatives of foreign countries to exchange our goods upon identically the same basis as Germany and Italy and other nations have been undertaking to exchange their goods, with reference to which policy condemnation has been voiced from one end of this country to the other; and yet now we find the United States adopting the very same policy.

Mr. President, I submit if in the effort to stimulate trade we merely dispose of a half million bales of cotton in return for which we take a certain number of thousand tons of rubber, and then we agree not to use that rubber for more than 7 years, and that we are not to dispose of it under any circumstances except as the treaty provides or except as agreements in the future may provide—and as this bill is drawn it does so provide—we by no means are gaining any advantage for this country in exchanging, on the one hand, stagnant stocks of cotton against, on the other hand, rubber or any other so-called strategic war material.

I believe that the very best thing this country can possibly do, as a matter of policy, is to undertake to stimulate its export trade in terms of dollars, in terms of gold, in terms of getting rid of the $16,000,000,000 of gold which today are stagnant in this country, and which, were they used to acquire, in terms of purchase, supplies that we may need from other countries, would in turn make purchasing power available to the other countries and make it possible for them to buy all our merchandise insofar as any such country will need it at any time. By this type of arrangement, by a system of exchange, by a barter system, we not only are receiving no gains for our country but we are committing it to a policy as to which we should be willing to wait.

It may be worth saying, in passing, that only about 2 months ago we had before us a bill which proposed to authorize the use of a hundred million dollars to acquire strategic war materials. At that time the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES] opposed the appropriation of $25,000,000 a year, and, on his motion, the Senate voted that the amount should be reduced to $10,000,000 a year, but when the bill reached the other House that body restored the authorization for $25,000,000 a year, and when it came back to the Senate, over objection voiced by me and by others, the Senate restored the total authorization of $100,000,000.

Mr. President, we have already committed this country in that bill to the acquisition of strategic war supplies and materials not indigenous to our soil. It seems to me that the full vice of this bill, committing this country to a barter system, ought to be recognized and with all its features in mind we should thereupon vote with reference to it.

I have no further argument to offer at the present time, but I believe that this bill is fundamentally objectionable for the reasons already noted, but, particularly, if we are going to adopt the principle of carrying out the treaty agreement already entered into, then, at the very least, we ought to amend the measure in such fashion as to limit it definitely to making effective the treaty with Great Britain of June 23, 1939.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, the purpose of this bill is to enable the Government to carry out the treaty obligation as entered into for the exchange of 600,000 bales of cotton for rubber. That treaty has been adopted unanimously by the Senate, and the good faith of this Government is now involved in its execution. In order to execute it, it is necessary to give to the Commodity Credit Corporation authority to transfer the cotton to which it acquires title in accordance with the terms of the treaty. The objection of the Senator from Connecticut—I know he would agree—should have been voiced against the ratification of the treaty.

The other objection the Senator makes, that this bill is general in its language, is not well taken, because, in the first three lines of the bill, it is specifically provided that "whenever the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, has concluded an agreement" with another Government, the things thereafter set forth shall be done. It is only when this Government has entered into a solemn treaty with another Government that the terms of the bill are at all applicable. It was deliberately drawn so as to make certain that would be its effect.

Mr. President, I ask that the amendments which I have sent to the desk, and to which I referred earlier in the day, be now read and considered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendments will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 1, line 7, after the word "are", it is proposed to strike out the word "now", so as to read:

Commodities produced in the United States which are held under loans made—

And so forth.

The amendment was agreed to.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 2, line 3, it is proposed to strike out the word "and" and to insert a comma after the word "War."

The amendment was agreed to.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 2, line 4, after the word "Navy", it is proposed to insert:

and the Secretary of the Interior, acting jointly through the agency of the Army and Navy Munitions Board.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, that is the amendment suggested by the Senator from Vermont, which I readily agreed was proper, because it made this bill accord with the bill previously passed by the Congress.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendments reported by the committee will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 2, line 10, after the word "agricultural", it is proposed to strike out "commodities" and insert "commodities" followed by a comma.

The amendment was agreed to.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 2, line 11, after the word "materials", it is proposed to insert "as may be necessary to accomplish the purposes of this act."

The amendment was agreed to.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 2, line 20, after the word "available", it is proposed to insert the words "or disposed of."

The amendment was agreed to.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 3, line 6, after the word "act", it is proposed to strike out the following:

and for this purpose, the amount of notes, debentures, bonds, and other obligations which the Commodity Credit Corporation is empowered to issue and to have outstanding at any one time, and which the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to purchase, under existing law, is hereby increased by such amount as may be necessary to provide sufficient funds to carry out the purposes of this act.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I call the attention of the Senator from South Carolina to the position of the phrase "as may be necessary to accomplish the purposes of this act." I understood that that phrase would modify the words "agricultural commodities" in line 10. I ask the Senator if it was his intention to have it modify those words.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I do not think it would be wise to do that, because once the strategic or critical materials were received in accordance with the treaty it would be necessary for the Corporation to have power to rotate such surplus commodities. In the case of rubber, which is one of the strategic and critical materials, we wanted to make certain that the Corporation would have power to rotate the rubber.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, as I interpret this sentence, it would not help the case at all to put that phrase where it is located. The words "such reserve stocks of strategic and critical materials" are sufficiently precise in their reference to show that they are only those which are necessary to carry out the purposes of the act anyway; but the object of having that phrase in the bill is to limit the procurement of agricultural commodities. If this phrase is not to modify that expression, there is not any limit—the sky is the limit—to the amount of procurement of agricultural commodities; and we do not want to afford another means of acquiring agricultural commodities to be put into storage.

I supposed all the time that this was a bill designed purely for the purpose of effectuating the exchanges to which it refers, and therefore that no more agricultural commodities would be acquired than were necessary to carry out and accomplish the purposes of the act. If this phrase remains where it is, it changes the entire meaning of the bill, and it would change my attitude toward the bill.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, the purpose of the bill is exactly that which is referred to by the Senator; but I do not agree with him in the opinion he expresses, that the language referred to by him should be transposed, because the language is a limitation upon the procurement of both agricultural commodities and strategic and critical materials. The purpose is to make this limitation as to the agricultural commodities and as to the strategic and critical materials. Therefore, the limitation should be at the end of the sentence. That is the only purpose of it.

Mr. AUSTIN. Then the Senator's answer originally given to my question was in error, I judge.

Mr. BYRNES. No; I do not think so, because the phrase is a limitation upon the procurement of agricultural commodities except for the purposes of this act; but I submit to the Senator that the fact that it follows the other words does not change the meaning that it is a limitation upon the procurement of agricultural commodities.

Mr. AUSTIN. Very well; if it fairly can be construed in that way I have no objection.

Mr. BYRNES. In my opinion there can be no justification for any other construction. So that the Record will show it I make the statement that there can be no question that that is the purpose of the phrase that it shall limit the procurement of agricultural commodities; but I want also to limit the procurement of strategic materials to the purposes of this act.

Mr. AUSTIN. Yes; I have no objection to that. I want the phrase to modify and limit both the acquisition of agricultural commodities and the acquisition of reserve stocks of strategic and critical materials.

Mr. BYRNES. The Senator's desire is my desire; and it is my belief that this language carries out that purpose. That is the object of the legislation.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, will the Senator from South Carolina yield to me?

Mr. BYRNES. Yes.

Mr. DANAHER. In lines 20 and 21 on page 2 of the bill the committee has interpolated the words "or disposed of." May I ask whose language that is?

Mr. BYRNES. It was inserted at my suggestion, because of the fact that the words were:

Such reserve stocks of strategic and critical materials shall be made available—

But it was not clear to my mind that that language meant that they could be disposed of; and they must be disposed of, under the language of the bill, to the Army and Navy for storage purposes. It seemed to me it would be one thing to say the materials should be made available for disposition, but that does not say that they are disposed of; and it was necessary to make certain that the Commodity Credit Corporation could not only have the materials available for disposition, but could dispose of them to the Army and Navy for storage purposes, as was the purpose of the act.

Mr. DANAHER. And, in the case of this particular treaty with Great Britain, by its very terms, unless Great Britain gives her consent to the liquidation of the stock, we cannot liquidate it until 7 years shall have gone by. Is not that so?

Mr. BYRNES. The language of the treaty is that Great Britain cannot dispose of the cotton, nor can we dispose of the rubber, until the end of 7 years.

Mr. DANAHER. Will the Senator further yield?

Mr. BYRNES. Yes.

Mr. DANAHER. Will the Senator explain, as to lines 13 and 14 on page 3, what additional sums will be required to carry out the provisions of the bill, if the Senator knows?

Mr. BYRNES. The committee endeavored to secure an estimate. That phrase in the bill would cover the charges for the transportation of cotton from the places where it is stored in warehouses to the ports where it becomes the property of Great Britain; and it would cover, too, the charges for the transportation of rubber from Singapore to this country, because in the case of the rubber it becomes our property, and we pay the transportation charges. An estimate could not be secured, because the freight rates had not been considered.

Those are the only costs involved—the transportation charges upon cotton from the warehouses where it is now stored to the ports, and the freight charges upon the rubber we purchase. We are now paying $4 a bale for storage of cotton; and I say to the Senator that as a result of this exchange, the rubber which is secured will be stored in warehouses of the Army and Navy. The Army and Navy advise me that they have warehouse facilities for the amount of rubber that we are to receive in the exchange, and that they are warehouses of such character that the insurance charges will be very small, if any at all. Consequently, on the exchange we shall save some money in storage charges.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, will the Senator further yield?

Mr. BYRNES. Yes.

Mr. DANAHER. I ask unanimous consent that the treaty with Great Britain be inserted in the RECORD at this point, so that its relation to the general context of the discussion will become apparent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The treaty is as follows:

AGREEMENT BETWEEN THE GOVERNMENTS OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA AND THE UNITED KINGDOM FOR THE EXCHANGE OF COTTON AND RUBBER

The Government of the United States of America and the Government of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, desiring to make arrangements for the exchange of cotton and rubber, have agreed as follows:

ARTICLE 1. The United States Government will supply to the Government of the United Kingdom, delivered on board ship, compressed to high density, at New Orleans, Louisiana, and at other Gulf and Atlantic deep-water ports to be agreed upon between the two Governments, 600,000 bales of raw cotton of the grades and staples which will be specified by the Government of the United Kingdom. The United States Government will make available in adequate quantities for such purpose cotton from the stock on which the United States Government has made advances to growers.

(A) The price will be fixed on the basis of the average market price as published by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics for middling  $\frac{3}{8}$ -inch cotton during the period January 1st–June 23rd, 1939, for spot delivery at New Orleans, plus 0.24 cents per lb. for cost of compression and delivery on board ship, with adjustments in price for other grades and staples according to differences above or below middling  $\frac{3}{8}$ -inch quoted in that period.

(B) The cotton will be inspected to determine its classification in accordance with the universal cotton standards for grade and the official standards of the United States for staple, and will be accepted, by experts appointed by the Government of the United Kingdom. Any disputes which may arise will be settled by Boards of Referees constituted of three members, of whom one shall be nominated by the Government of the United Kingdom.

(C) Samples representing the cotton of the grades and staples specified by the Government of the United Kingdom will be made available for inspection and acceptance during a period of six months beginning 15 days after the entry into force of this agreement, and such inspection and acceptance will be made within a reasonable time after the cotton is so made available. Delivery at the warehouse at the port of sailing with provision for free delivery on board ship at high density will be made within 15 days after inspection and acceptance, and storage and insurance charges will be borne by the United States Government for a period of two weeks but no more after delivery at the warehouse at the port of sailing.

(D) All cotton will be invoiced and accepted on gross weights at the time of delivery.

ARTICLE 2. The Government of the United States will supply to the Government of the United States, delivered on board ship at Singapore and, by agreement between the two Governments, at other convenient ports, rubber in bales, of the grades which will be specified by the Government of the United States, to a value equivalent to that of the total value of the cotton to be supplied in accordance with article 1 of this agreement. In determining such equivalent value, the rate of exchange between Straits Settlements dollars and United States dollars shall be deemed to be the average of the buying rate during the period January 1st–June 23rd, 1939, in the New York market, at noon, for cable transfers payable in Straits Settlements dollars, as certified by the Federal Reserve Bank to the Secretary of the United States Treasury and published in Treasury Decisions.

(A) The quantity of rubber will be calculated upon the average market price, as published by the Department of Statistics in the Straits Settlements, for No. 1 ribbed smoked sheets, during the period January 1st–June 23rd, 1939, for spot delivery at Singapore plus 0.25 Straits Settlements cent per lb. for cost of baling and delivery on board ship, with adjustments in price for other grades according to differences quoted in that period.

(B) The rubber will be inspected and accepted by experts appointed by the United States Government. Any disputes will be settled in accordance with the normal custom of the trade.

(C) The rubber will be made available for inspection and acceptance by experts appointed by the Government of the United States during a period of six months beginning at a date to be agreed upon by the two Governments, and such inspection and acceptance will be made within a reasonable time after the rubber is so made available. Delivery at the warehouse at the port of shipment with provision for free delivery on board ship will be made within a period of 15 days after inspection and acceptance, and storage and insurance charges will be borne by the Government of the United Kingdom for a period of two weeks but no more after delivery at the warehouse at the port of shipment.

ARTICLE 3. If either Government should find that delivery in accordance with the arrangements specified in articles 1 and 2 is likely to restrict supplies available to commercial markets unduly or to stimulate undue price increases, the two Governments shall consult with a view to postponing delivery or taking other action in order to avoid or minimize such restriction of supplies or such price increases.

ARTICLE 4. The intention of the United States Government and of the Government of the United Kingdom being to acquire reserves of cotton and rubber, respectively, against the contingency of a major war emergency, each Government undertakes not to dispose of its stock (otherwise than for the purpose of replacing such stocks by equivalent quantities insofar as may be expedient for preventing deterioration) except in the event of such an emergency. If, however, either Government should at any future date decide that the time has come to liquidate its stock of cotton or rubber, as the case may be, it may do so only after (A) consulting the other Government as to the means to be employed for the disposal of such stock and (B) taking all steps to avoid disturbance of the markets. In no case may either Government dispose of such stocks, except in the case of a major war emergency, before a date 7 years after the coming into force of this agreement.

ARTICLE 5. The Government of the United Kingdom will use their best endeavors to secure that the export is permitted under the International Rubber Regulation Scheme of an amount of rubber approximately equivalent to the amount of rubber to be supplied to the United States Government under this agreement in addition to the amount of rubber which would, under the normal operation of the scheme, be released to meet current consumption needs.

ARTICLE 6. Each Government undertakes, in shipping to its own ports the stocks of cotton and rubber, respectively, provided for in this agreement, so far as may be possible to distribute the tonnage equally between the ships of the two countries, provided that the shipping space required is obtainable at reasonable rates. Consultation for the purpose of giving effect to this article shall be between the Board of Trade and the Maritime Commission.

ARTICLE 7. Should the United States Government, before the delivery is completed of the cotton provided for in article 1 of this agreement, take any action which has the effect of an export subsidy, they will deliver to the Government of the United Kingdom an additional quantity of cotton proportionate to the reduction in price below that provided for in article 1 of this agreement caused by such action.

ARTICLE 8. This agreement shall come into force on a date to be agreed between the two Governments.

In witness whereof the undersigned, duly authorized thereto, have signed the present agreement and have affixed thereto their seals.

Done in London in duplicate this 23rd day of June 1939.

JOSEPH P. KENNEDY.

OLIVER F. G. STANLEY.

Certified to be a true copy of the foregoing agreement as received by the Secretary of State by cable from the American Ambassador at London.

CORDELL HULL,

Secretary of State of the United States of America.

JUNE 24, 1939.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, I will ask the Senator one further question. Is there objection to amending the pending bill so that it may apply solely to the treaty with Great Britain?

Mr. BYRNES. I will say to the Senator that I considered that matter when I first had the bill under consideration, and I again call attention to the language. We determined, instead, that we would specifically limit the authority of the Commodity Credit Corporation to a treaty. It cannot apply to any other agreement unless the agreement is entered into as a treaty, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and I submit to the Senator that that accomplishes what he has in mind. If that were not done, it would mean that if by chance during the next session of Congress an agreement should be entered into, we would again have to give to the Commodity Credit Corporation the authority to go through the procedure of transferring any commodities received to the Army and Navy. This bill affords the protection the Senator has in mind, because this power is not available to the Commodity Credit Corporation unless there is a treaty ratified by the Senate. If a treaty is ratified by the Senate, then automatically the Congress will have to enact legislation to carry out the purpose of the treaty.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, I submit that the answer of the Senator from South Carolina by no means meets the issue raised by the bill, for the reason that if we limit it to one product which has already been covered by the treaty of June 23, that is one thing, and we will carry out the agreement and make it effective; but if we have continuing statutes of general application, recognizing the principle of barter, then it is perfectly apparent that we are undertaking a course of action in foreign exchange in the course of which we are going to be bartering American goods for foreign goods, and it is to the barter principle of exchange that I object.

It is no answer to say that we are going to have control in the future over each and every separate treaty which comes along. I recognize that we can undertake to defeat each one, but we would still be leaving the door open for future negotiations and future treaties, and we are going to be asked to carry them out, apparently, because we have here a bill which will have a general application, as appears right on the face of the trade agreements we are making with other nations through our Secretary of State, with which I do not agree, I may go on record as saying. But that is another matter. The situation before us is that this bill is committing this country to an unprecedented course of action, against which I protest.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, it will not commit the country to a course of action unless any treaty entered into is ratified by a two-thirds vote of the Senate, and if that is ever done, then the treaty will have to be carried out.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, we now have various types of mentalities making these foreign arrangements of one sort or another. I wonder whether, if in line 5, page 1, the word "agreement" were changed to "treaty" it would not more accurately reflect what the Senator has in mind.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, the Senator from Vermont [Mr. AUSTIN] suggested that amendment today, and I have not the slightest objection to it. It was our thought that the word "agreement" carried out specifically what was intended. If it would satisfy the Senator to substitute the words "a treaty" for the words "an agreement," I have no objection.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I should prefer that, and I move that in line 5, after the word "concluded", the words "an agreement" be changed to "a treaty."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. VANDENBERG. There is one other place in the bill where the same change should be made, on page 2, line 23, after the word "applicable", to strike out the word "agreement" and to insert "treaty."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ANDREW J. CROCKETT AND WALTER CROCKETT

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HUGHES in the chair) laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 875) for the relief of Andrew J. Crockett and Walter Crockett, which was, in line 13, after the word "lands", to insert a colon and the following further proviso:

Provided further, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

Mr. CHAVEZ. I move that the Senate concur in the amendment of the House.

The motion was agreed to.

INSURANCE OF COTTON CROP

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President, with the consent of the Senator from West Virginia, I ask that the unfinished business be temporarily laid aside and that Senate bill 2635, to amend the Federal Crop Insurance Act, be taken up for consideration. I should like to make a statement about the bill.

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, unless the matter can be disposed of this afternoon, I hope the Senator will not press his motion. If it can be disposed of today, I will not object.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I will not interfere with the Senator's bill. I give him my assurance to that effect.

Mr. NEELY. In view of the statement just made by the Senator from Alabama, I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be read for the information of the Senate.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 502 of the Federal Crop Insurance Act, as amended, is hereby amended by substituting the word "crop" for the word "wheat-crop" and by substituting the words "agricultural commodities" for the word "wheat."

Sec. 2. That section 506 (h) of said act, as amended, is amended by striking out the words "for wheat and other agricultural commodities."

Sec. 3. That section 508 of said act, as amended, is amended by striking out the first comma in subsection (a) thereof and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "and with the cotton crop planted for harvest in 1940."

Sec. 4. That section 508 of said act, as amended, is further amended by striking out the words "producers of wheat against loss in yields of wheat" in the first sentence and substituting in lieu thereof the words "producers of the agricultural commodity against loss in yields of the agricultural commodity."

Sec. 5. That section 508 of said act, as amended, is further amended by substituting the words "the agricultural commodity" for the word "wheat" in the third sentence of subsection (a).

Sec. 6. That sections 508 (b), (c), and (d) and 516 (a) of said act, as amended, are further amended by substituting the words "the agricultural commodity" for the word "wheat" wherever it appears.

Sec. 7. That section 508 of said act, as amended, is further amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection: "(e) In connection with insurance upon yields of cotton, to include provision for additional premium and indemnity in terms of lint cotton to cover loss of cottonseed, such additional premium and indemnity to be determined on the basis of the average relationship between returns from cottonseed and returns from lint cotton for the same period of years as that used for computing yields and premium rates."

SEC. 8. That section 516 (a) of said act, as amended, is amended by striking out the figures "$6,000,000" and substituting in lieu thereof the figures "$12,000,000."

SEC. 9. That said act, as amended, is further amended by redesignating section 518 as section 519, and by addition thereto of the following new section:

"Sec. 518. 'Agricultural commodity' as used in this act means wheat or cotton, or both, as the context may indicate."

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President, when the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1933 was under consideration the crop-insurance plan as to the basic crop commodities, wheat and cotton, was under consideration. Finally, after the matter had been carefully considered and discussed in the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, it was agreed, as members of the committee will uniformly testify, that we would support a plan for insuring the wheat crop and give it a demonstration and a trial. If it proved satisfactory and the Department desired to recommend the extension of the plan to cotton, it was agreed that the other agricultural representatives would support the program and put cotton on the same basis with wheat.

The Senate then passed the bill, and it went to conference. The Senate will doubtless recall how long the conference committee had the matter under consideration. The same subject arose in the conference, and there was a gentleman's agreement all the way around among those connected with the matter—and many know about it—that we would try the plan as to wheat, and then, as I stated, if it was satisfactory, we would include cotton.

The Department of Agriculture is satisfied with the administration of the wheat program, and the Department prepared the bill now before the Senate and brought it to me, with the statement that they wanted cotton put on the same basis with wheat. So we are merely asking that there be done with cotton what was done with wheat when the original bill was passed, and in line with the general understanding that that, of course, would not bind any one officially.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, I think the Senator is entirely correct, that the understanding was that we were to experiment with wheat and see if the program would work, and that if it worked, we were to extend it further. Is the Senator suggesting that we have had a sufficient experience with wheat to have a right to an authentic conclusion as to the wisdom of the arrangement?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I would not go quite so far as the Senator has proceeded in his statement. I will, however, go so far as to say that the program has been carried out to the point where the Department are satisfied that it will successfully operate, and to the point where they are satisfied with the program, and have suggested that cotton now be included.

Mr. VANDENBERG. How long has the wheat insurance been in force?

Mr. BANKHEAD. One year.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Has it gone through one entire crop year?

Mr. BANKHEAD. Practically. We passed the bill in January 1938.

Mr. VANDENBERG. To what extent was wheat insurance taken out?

Mr. BANKHEAD. It was much better than anyone expected for the first year with an experimental program. I have figures which were sent to me. It seems that the Department has not gotten the complete reports, but the program is at an end, practically complete figures are available, and they figure that the number of policies issued to farmers will be 173,125.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Out of how many wheat farmers in the country?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I do not know, but it covers 56,687,976 bushels of wheat, on the insured-production basis. The estimated potential indemnities, are given as 8,071,807 bushels. So it has been a very substantial program, and for the first year has been received with a great deal more approval than was reasonably to be expected of a program of that kind.

With that in view, we want to have cotton included. We have not unduly hurried the administration, and did not even request action. They finally decided that they had gone far enough with wheat to understand that it was a worthy and commendable and probably a successful program. I recognize that there is never certainty about any insurable proposition; it is all more or less speculative, that is, not definite and certain. It looks as if there has been a widespread acceptance of the program.

Mr. VANDENBERG. What does a year's experience with the wheat insurance show to have been the net cost to the Federal Government?

Mr. BANKHEAD. The administrative cost, I understand, is approximately $6,000,000.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Six million dollars?

Mr. BANKHEAD. The profit on the wheat-crop transactions appears to have been considerable. The premiums are much larger than the insured liability.

Mr. VANDENBERG. In other words, there is no insurable loss?

Mr. BANKHEAD. No. There is gain, apparently. So we believe it is fair to go along and let cotton be included. If we do not get action now, we will not get it this year. The bill has to go to the House for approval. Then it has to be budgeted and has to come back and be provided for in the deficiency appropriation bill before Congress adjourns. If we do not get cotton included now, and take the premiums out of this year's crop, we will have to go over for another entire year.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I yield.

Mr. AUSTIN. What estimate of actual risks did the committee find would be taken in the event cotton should be included among the insurable commodities?

Mr. BANKHEAD. There was no way to figure that, I will say, if I understand the Senator's question. As the Senator probably knows, cotton is not as risky a commodity as wheat. For a period of years the cotton crop has not fluctuated as much as has the wheat crop. In the cotton area there is not such drought as sometimes exists in the wheat areas. The cotton farmers do not have the same likelihood of loss, on the average, that the wheat producers have.

Mr. AUSTIN. Has not the Senator any estimate of the liabilities which he can present to the Senate?

Mr. BANKHEAD. We have as to wheat. We have no way that I know of to estimate what the situation may be with respect to cotton. The liability in the case of wheat, as I just stated, is, on an average, greater than it is in the case of cotton.

Mr. AUSTIN. The Senator must have some calculation of the experience with cotton over 10 years, we will say, with respect to losses on account of weather.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I do not have the figures available.

Mr. AUSTIN. And there is absolutely nothing to go on?

Mr. BANKHEAD. Nothing but the judgment of the Department that this program ought to be put into operation.

Mr. AUSTIN. On what basis do they calculate insurance premiums if they do not know anything about the risk?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I assume they do know. They know as much about cotton as they did about wheat when the wheat insurance law was passed.

Mr. AUSTIN. What does the Department say with reference to it?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I did not ask them in detail. They said they believed the same risk would be involved. It was on that basis that they felt the measure should be adopted. The actuarial experts have taken the wheat situation into consideration, I will say to the Senator.

Mr. AUSTIN. Can the Senator say what will probably be the premium?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I am unable to say. During the consideration of the measure relating to wheat a discussion similar to the present one arose. If the Senator will read the RECORD, he will find that the same sort of discussion was had at that time.

Mr. AUSTIN. Without having any special knowledge on the subject, I inquire for information.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I shall be glad to give the Senator whatever information I have on the subject. I am acting on the judgment of the Department, which has had experience in the case of wheat.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I inquire if the hearings had before the committee on this matter have been printed?

Mr. BANKHEAD. No. We have no printed hearings. We had no regular, set hearings.

Mr. ADAMS. It is slightly disturbing to some of us who regard this matter as of great consequence, and as possibly involving considerable expenditure.

Mr. BANKHEAD. The bill does not fix any rates.

Mr. ADAMS. But it brings other commodities under the insurance law and inevitably involves the raising and expending of money.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I am sure the Senator recognizes that in any program covering basic agricultural commodities cotton should be included. There is a greater population on the farms on which cotton is raised than on the farms involving any other agricultural commodity. Cotton farms contain about one-half of the total farm population.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I yield.

Mr. RUSSELL. I think it might reassure some of those who are inquiring with regard to the bill to state that this measure does not increase the limitation on the Government's obligation for the capital stock that is carried in the bill providing for the insurance of wheat.

Mr. BANKHEAD. That is true.

Mr. RUSSELL. The amount of capital stock we originally fixed for the insurance of wheat is deemed sufficient to cover both wheat and cotton. Therefore the bill does not increase the obligation of the Government as to the capital stock of the corporation.

Mr. BANKHEAD. It does not increase the obligation except in the matter of administration.

Mr. RUSSELL. I said the capital stock.

Mr. ADAMS. It increases the liability, does it not?

Mr. KING. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator from Georgia a question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD] has the floor.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I yield for that purpose.

Mr. KING. I ask the Senator from Georgia the amount of the capital stock to which he refers.

Mr. RUSSELL. It is my recollection that the Wheat Insurance Act, to which this bill is an amendment, authorized a capital stock of $100,000,000 for the Corporation.

Mr. BANKHEAD. That is correct.

Mr. KING. And this would be included in that $100,000,000?

Mr. RUSSELL. In the same $100,000,000. It does not increase the total liability of the Government as heretofore authorized by the Congress.

Mr. KING. Something must have developed in the hearings to show there would be a great loss, to require the setting up of a corporation with $100,000,000 of capital to be furnished by the Government.

Mr. RUSSELL. The Senator from Utah understands that the original legislation on this matter was admittedly in the nature of an experiment. No one knew exactly what the results of it would be. It involved rather a unique plan of co-operation among all the farmers who are producing a specific commodity. The payments are payable in kind, in the crops, and necessarily, in starting out on a new venture of this kind by the Government, the Congress did not undertake to make as clear definitions as might have been the case in other legislation. A great deal was left to the discretion of the Secretary of Agriculture in fixing the terms, based on a study of losses of crops due to adverse weather conditions and insect attacks over a long period of years.

The Senator from Alabama has just stated what was also my understanding, that the original venture in wheat insurance had proved very successful, and would result in a profit to the Government. There is no reason to believe there would be a greater loss in cotton than there would be in wheat, and the experience of the Department has caused them to conclude that the original capital stock which was provided by the Congress would be sufficient also to support the present legislation, which merely places cotton on the same basis and accords it the same protection through insurance that has been heretofore accorded to wheat.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I wish to ask the Senator another question. Does the Senator anticipate that the $100,000,000 will be lost?

Mr. RUSSELL. I will say that all we have to guide us in making a prediction is the year's experience we have had, and if we have the same experience over a period of years, not only will the Government have suffered no loss, but the Government will have a profit to add to the original capital stock.

Mr. KING. If there is no loss from the operations thus far, but in fact a gain, why should not a part of that $100,000,000 be restored to the Treasury?

Mr. RUSSELL. Of course, the Senator from Utah has suggested a question that is not involved in the pending legislation. I think it should come up on its merits in a separate bill. The pending measure merely brings cotton into the scheme of insurance. The point I wanted to make clear was that it did not affect the original authorization for capital stock.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, do I understand that the Department has approved the measure? Nothing is said in the report about it.

Mr. BANKHEAD. The Department has approved it.

Mr. TAFT. The Department has approved it?

Mr. BANKHEAD. Yes.

Mr. TAFT. Was not the exceptional experience of last year simply due to the fact that we had a good crop of wheat, a better than average crop of wheat? Was that not the reason the venture happened to be successful last year?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I am unable to answer the Senator's question about that.

Mr. TAFT. That would, of course, make a difference. The Government would make money when there was a good crop and lose money when there was a poor crop.

Mr. BANKHEAD. That naturally would be true. That, however, all works out on a basis of averages as estimated by the actuaries.

Mr. BARKLEY. The same thing would apply in all experience with insurance. The life insurance companies would all make a great deal of money if no one ever died.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Yes.

Mr. BARKLEY. The theory is that if there is a crop failure the insurance is supposed at least partially to take care of the loss. There will be good years and bad years. If there were no bad years, no insurance would be needed.

Mr. LEE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I yield.

Mr. LEE. Is it not a fact that the premiums can be paid in cash or in kind?

Mr. BANKHEAD. Exactly.

Mr. LEE. And, depending on the law of averages, perhaps most of the premiums will be paid in cash, but when the Government goes to pay the policy, so to speak, the Government can pay in kind. If we insure cotton and the Government collects some of the premiums in cash and pays all that it has to pay out in cotton, it seems to me that, considering the present situation, there is very little chance for the Government to be the loser, particularly when the Government has made loans on so much cotton. It seems to me only fair to extend the insurance feature to the cotton farmer. The privilege has been extended to the wheat farmer, and the Government is making money on it. The privilege should be extended to the cotton farmer.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I hope we can get action on the bill, Mr. President, and get it over to the House, because there are a number of steps yet to be taken before it can be put into operation.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I yield.

Mr. AUSTIN. I had not heard of this matter before, and I am asking for information, and I am not attacking the bill.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I understand the Senator.

Mr. AUSTIN. I may be for it. I do not know. It depends on the information I receive. We start off with the same capital to extend the insurance feature to another commodity; that is, we add cotton to it. I should like to know does the bill provide that the Secretary of Agriculture may include other commodities?

Mr. BANKHEAD. It does not.

Mr. AUSTIN. If the bill should become law the only new and different commodity taken under the protection of crop insurance would be cotton. Is that correct?

Mr. BANKHEAD. That is true. No commodity can be added except by direction of the Congress.

Mr. AUSTIN. Then the extension of the risk—or, to put it another way, the burden of support which the Government gives—is limited to wheat and cotton?

Mr. BANKHEAD. That would be true if the bill were enacted into law.

Mr. AUSTIN. Of course there would be a corresponding increase of income, but that might be of a character in kind; that is, cotton instead of wheat would be added to the supply.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Yes.

Mr. AUSTIN. Does the Government sell the property which is taken as premiums?

Mr. BANKHEAD. The Government may either sell it or deliver it to farmers who have a short crop and who are entitled to insurance. The farmers may be paid in kind. The wheat collected as premiums may be paid to farmers who have not produced a normal crop.

Mr. AUSTIN. Each farmer has a policy which shows the amount of cotton to which he would be entitled?

Mr. BANKHEAD. That is the wheat program. We have yet no program for cotton.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I yield.

Mr. TAFT. Can the Senator state how many wheat farmers were insured last year?

Mr. BANKHEAD. One hundred and seventy-three thousand.

Mr. TAFT. Is it fair to say that the program is no longer experimental in the field of wheat, as it was supposed to be in the beginning?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I think we have had a very representative experience with it. The Senator knows the probabilities as well as I do, and about how long it would take to make a certain test.

Mr. TAFT. My understanding is that the program was confined to wheat because it was regarded as a very experimental program.

Mr. BANKHEAD. It was.

Mr. TAFT. I wonder if we have now had sufficient experience to extend the program to another crop. As I understand, the insurance of cotton is much more complicated than the insurance of wheat.

Mr. BANKHEAD. As I stated to the Senator, based upon a long record of normal weather, I do not think there is as much risk in insuring cotton as there is in insuring wheat. The usual cause for loss in crops is abnormal weather. Except in 1 or 2 years, during the past 8 or 9 years we have had normal weather and normal crop conditions in cotton.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. AUSTIN. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll. The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Connally	Hughes	Pepper
Austin	Danaher	Johnson, Colo.	Pittman
Bailey	Davis	King	Radcliffe
Bankhead	Ellender	La Follette	Reed
Barbour	George	Lee	Russell
Barkley	Gerry	Lodge	Sheppard
Bilbo	Green	McKellar	Stewart
Bone	Guffey	Maloney	Taft
Byrd	Hatch	Mead	Thomas, Okla.
Byrnes	Hayden	Miller	Truman
Capper	Herring	Minton	Vandenberg
Chavez	Hill	Neely	Walsh
Clark, Mo.	Holman	Norris	White

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Fifty-two Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I want it understood that the position I now take does not indicate that I shall ultimately be opposed to this bill; but I have tried to obtain specific information about such questions as the amount of risk involved in the legislation, the amount of premiums, the disposal of the product taken as premiums in kind, and other questions. Thus far I have been referred to some action or some discussion on the floor of the Senate a long time ago with respect to wheat, and at the same time I am told that cotton is a very different commodity in respect to the crop risk.

I think it is only fair to the Senate that we should take up this bill upon a basis of fact, and that we should have an estimate of the risk. We are dealing with insurance. It is a special kind of legislation, and it seems to me that to go at it blindly is not wise.

For these reasons, and for the purpose of getting before us something to move us to correct judgment, if possible, I am obliged to ask that the bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will go over.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I desire to give notice that immediately after the so-called Neely bill shall have been disposed of I shall make a motion to take up this bill. In the meantime I shall try to obtain the information desired by the Senator from Vermont [Mr. AUSTIN].

CANVAS DECOY CO.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HUGHES in the chair) laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 1629) for the relief of the Canvas Decoy Co., which were, on page 1, lines 6 and 7, to strike out "the claim" and insert "all claims"; and on page 2, line 2, to strike out all after "Provided," down to and including "$1,000" in line 13 and insert "That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000."

Mr. McKELLAR. I move that the Senate concur in the amendments of the House.

The motion was agreed to.

POSTAL TELEGRAPH-CABLE CO.

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 1487) for the relief of the Postal Telegraph-Cable Co., which was, on page 2, line 2, to strike out all after "Provided," down to and including "$1,000" in line 14 and insert "That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000."

Mr. MEAD. I move that the Senate concur in the amendment of the House.

The motion was agreed to.

REIMBURSEMENT TO MEMBERS OF COAST GUARD FOR LOSSES DUE TO NEW ENGLAND HURRICANE, 1938

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 2167) to provide for the reimbursement of certain members or former members of the United States Coast Guard for the value of personal effects lost in the hurricane of September 21, 1938, at several Coast Guard stations on the coasts of New York, Connecticut, and Rhode Island, which was, on page 4, line 10, after "$29", to insert ": Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000."

Mr. PEPPER. I move that the Senate concur in the amendment of the House.

The motion was agreed to.

FOUR HUNDREDTH ANNIVERSARY OF EXPLORATIONS OF FRANCISCO
VASQUEZ DE CORONADO

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 2197) authorizing Federal participation in the commemoration and observance of the four hundredth anniversary of the explorations of Francisco Vazquez de Coronado, which was, on page 5, line 4, to strike out ", 194—" and insert "January 3, 1941."

Mr. HATCH. I move that the Senate concur in the amendment of the House.

The motion was agreed to.

WILLIAM CARL LAUDE

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 1291) for the relief of William Carl Laude, which was, to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That the Secretary of Labor be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to record the permanent residence of William Carl Laude as of August 29, 1935, and that the warrant of deportation be canceled, and William Carl Laude shall not again be subject to deportation proceedings for the reasons set forth in said warrant, and that by the terms of this act he shall not be permitted to become a naturalized citizen of the United States unless and until he shall leave the United States and reenter in a lawful way in full compliance with the existing law.

Upon the enactment of this act the Secretary of State shall instruct the proper quota-control officer to deduct one number from the nonpreference category of the quota during the current year.

Mr. CAPPER. I move that the Senate concur in the amendment of the House.

The motion was agreed to.

THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, at this time, when the eyes of the world are chiefly centered on the international situation, I think it would be of interest to the American people to know how much is really being accomplished, in a totally nonpolitical way, by the nonpolitical phases of the League of Nations.

I have before me a copy of the Providence Sunday Journal, of Providence, R. I., the editor of which is Mr. Sevellon Brown, who is, I am informed, a good Republican, who has written a very fine editorial on the subject of the League's activities. This issue of the Providence Journal also carries a very splendid article on the subject "League's Successes Obscured by Politics."

I should like to emphasize the fact that the League of Nations must not be considered as dead merely because it has not been able to solve the political problems of the world. It is a going institution. It has in it the International Labor Organization and many other phases which are contributing to a better understanding among the peoples of the world, and contributing vastly to the improvement of world conditions.

I ask leave to have printed in the RECORD an editorial appearing in this journal to which I have referred, entitled "One Ray of Hope", and also an article, "League's Successes Obscured by Politics", written by Mr. Winston Phelps.

There being no objection, the editorial and article were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Providence (R. I.) Journal of July 2, 1939]

ONE RAY OF HOPE

From the standpoint of international politics, there is no place in the world today for the League of Nations. Politically, it is impotent for collective security, which was the basis of its power to preserve peace, has been destroyed, and the democracies of Europe once more place their reliance on military cooperation—a return to power politics forced upon them by the dictators of Germany, Italy, and Japan.

But the League is not dead, and it will not die if the world's governments, our own among them, keep their faith in international cooperation in the economic and social fields. These, after all, constitute the real basis of lasting peace and good will, and it is in those fields that the League of Nations has done its most successful work.

It failed in Manchukuo, in Ethiopia, and in Spain. It could not prevent the destruction of Austria and Czechoslovakia. It no longer is a factor in the political field. But it has been exceptionally successful in the nonpolitical field, where it still operates with conspicuous success.

We mention this for two reasons: First, the League of Nations, as it doggedly pursues its great work in nonpolitical matters, keeps alive a small spark of that international cooperation which ultimately must save the world; second, because the League needs help badly in this work, and the United States can and should respond with an offer of permanent financial aid on a yearly basis.

We know, of course, that the League of Nations is anathema to a large group of American politicians and to many American citizens. But this opposition is purely political, based entirely on the traditional belief that we must abjure all entangling alliances with Europe. There never has been American opposition to the League's economic and social work, as our periodic participation in such activities has demonstrated. And we have benefited greatly from these actions.

Elsewhere in this section we print an analysis of the League's work in these fields. We show, for example, that the League developed the only effective opium-control organization the world has known. It greatly curtailed the world-wide traffic in drugs. It checked white slave traffic. It organized a health service on a world basis, and halted epidemics in various countries.

But this work, so essential to international good will, is in danger of destruction because of a lack of funds. Member after member has withdrawn from the League, for one reason or another, and that has cut its revenue by $1,000,000 annually. Somehow or other, this revenue must be restored. We believe the United States should assume a full share of this burden.

[From the Providence (R. I.) Journal of July 2, 1939]

LEAGUE'S SUCCESSSES OBSCURED BY POLITICS—GENEVA'S VALUED HUMANITARIAN PROJECTS ARE THREATENED AS INCOME, PRESTIGE DECLINE—UNITED STATES HAS BEEN BENEFICIARY OF WORK

(By Winston Phelps)

In spite of its dismal political failures, the League of Nations is not yet ready to be scrapped.

It failed to stop Japan in the Orient. It failed to halt Italy in Ethiopia. It failed to bring a quick end to the civil war in Spain, and it didn't even bother to raise a finger when Germany snatched Austria, Czechoslovakia, and Memel.

But that isn't the whole picture. For every one of its political failures the League can point to a successful accomplishment in a nonpolitical field. Unhappily the League's successes have not been publicized as widely as its failures and that fact is responsible for the widespread belief that the League is dead.

Actually the League is a long step away from the cemetery. It faces difficulties and its future may be dubious, but it still has a half dozen machines running smoothly and efficiently to make the world a better place for all humanity.

It has, for example, the only effective opium-control organization the world has ever known. It has an international labor bureau, a health bureau, and other subdivisions, each with a long list of accomplishments to its credit.

DRUG TRAFFIC IS REDUCED

Thanks to the League, the enormous world-wide traffic in drugs has been reduced to a trickle. Thanks to the League, the white-slave trade has been checked, epidemics have been halted, new medicines have been developed, and a forum has been provided where the nations could gather to discuss their problems of housing, child welfare, and other topics.

Battered and bruised as it may appear, the League still is the only effective world organization struggling to promote peace, cooperation, and good will.

All these nonpolitical activities have been carried along successfully while the League was suffering political rebuffs. Recently, however, the League's loss of prestige and loss of revenue have affected the nonpolitical agencies. Activities have been curtailed. The prospect is that they may have to be curtailed again.

At the last session of the League Council the Secretary General reported the League's revenue had been reduced by $1,000,000 annually and that as a result 87 of the League's 600 staff employees had been dismissed and the budgets of several of the departments had been trimmed.

Now the League's principal revenue comes from the dues of members. That source of revenue has fallen off because the members have been resigning in droves.

Here are the recent changes:

Resigned because of political differences: Japan, Germany, and Italy.

Eliminated when their independence was suppressed: Austria, Ethiopia, Czechoslovakia, and Albania.

Resigned out of sympathy for the Rome-Berlin axis: Hungary and Spain.

Dropped out for other reasons: Chile, Venezuela, Salvador, and Peru.

The loss of these 13 members reduced the League's annual revenue from about $6,000,000 to about $5,000,000. Adding to the League's plight is the fact that some nations, China for example, want to pay their dues but may be compelled to drop out because the money is needed desperately for other things.

NONPOLITICAL AFFILIATION

Regardless of what the United States and other nations may think about the League's political activities, all agree that the nonpolitical activities are worth while. Thus Germany has resigned from the League, but still cooperates with the League's opium-control organization.

And although the United States is not a member of the League and never has been, this country not only cooperates in all the nonpolitical activities but has assumed leadership in some of the work.

Even more of a threat to the League than the decline in revenue is the decline in interest. Most of the nations now are so absorbed by the prospect of war and so busy spending for armaments that they cannot be bothered to put their attention on the peaceful work stemming from Geneva. They are more interested in building guns than in building houses, more interested in preparing for air raids than they are in improving the health of their populations.

Arthur Sweetser, the only American director on the League Secretariat, concedes that the League may have to curtail some more of its activities if more members withdraw and revenue declines, but he believes there are a few nations that will remain loyal and that they will support at least a skeleton staff at Geneva through hell or high water.

More important than the problem of whipping up revenue, Mr. Sweetser said, during a New England visit last week, is the problem of whipping up interest.

The United States occupies an unusual position in its relations with the League. It is not a member and thus does not pay dues. It does participate in the nonpolitical activities, however, and for each of these activities Congress annually appropriates small sums supposed to be this country's share in the total cost.

Actually the small sums tossed in are not an honest share. They represent the prorated cost of the particular conference in which this country is interested, but do not take into consideration the year-round costs of rent, upkeep, and maintenance of permanent staffs.

In this respect the United States is getting more than it pays for. It is a beneficiary of the year-round work, but pays only its share of the conferences. All of the year-round expense is borne by the regular members.

SYSTEM OF DUES

The League has worked out an elaborate system for arriving at proper dues. The size, wealth, and influence of each nation member is taken into consideration and the dues are worked out on a unit basis. Britain's dues, for example, are about $600,000 annually. Near the bottom is Liberia, which pays only $25,000. The other nations are in between. With all the nations of the world, big and little, talking in terms of millions and billions for defense, these national payments to the League represent only small potatoes.

The attitude of the United States Government toward these nonpolitical activities of the League was expressed clearly last February in a letter written by Secretary of State Cordell Hull. The League asked nonmember States for their opinion of the League's work. Here is the Secretary of State's reply:

"The United States Government notes with interest the Assembly's reaffirmation of the policy of the League to invite the collaboration of nonmember States in its technical and nonpolitical activities. It shares the Assembly's satisfaction that such collaboration has steadily increased and the Assembly's belief that it is in the universal interest that such collaboration be continued and further developed.

SYMPATHETIC COLLABORATION

"The growing complexity of the modern world has for many years made increasingly clear the need for intelligent coordination of various activities and the pooling of information and experience in many fields. . . .

LXXXIV—548

"The League . . . has been responsible for the development of mutual exchange and discussion of ideas and methods to a greater extent and in more fields of humanitarian and scientific endeavor than any other organization in history. The United States Government is keenly aware of the value of this type of general interchange and desires to see it extended.

"Encouraging as has been the progress already made, much remains to be done for the promotion of human welfare in health, social, economic, and financial fields. This Government regards each sound step forward in these fields as a step forward toward the establishment of that national and international order which it believes is essential to real peace.

"The United States Government looks forward to the development and expansion of the League's machinery for dealing with the problems in those fields and to the participation by all nations in active efforts to solve them. It would not be appropriate for it to make specific suggestions for the development of the League's efforts to meet more adequately problems relating to the health, humanitarian, and economic phases of the human activities. It will continue to collaborate in those activities and will consider in a sympathetic spirit means making its collaboration more effective."

Let's look at some of the results of this international cooperation praised so highly by Secretary Hull.

Since the League rolled up its sleeves in 1929 and attacked the problem of the illicit drug traffic, the quantity of morphine produced in licensed plants the world over has been cut in half. Most of the half that has been eliminated, it is reasonable to suppose, was going into illicit channels.

And in that same period the estimated number of drug addicts in the United States has been cut from 100,000 to 50,000. Similar figures can be shown for most other nations. All are beneficiaries of the League's work in this field.

Equally dramatic have been the League's achievements in the field of medicine. Experts from Geneva have been sent to all parts of the world to check plague, cholera, yellow fever, dysentery, smallpox, and typhus fever. Information has been exchanged through the League to help governments improve their health services.

An epidemic of dengue (something like influenza) struck Greece in 1928 and the nation lacked facilities to stamp it out. An appeal went to Geneva, and the League sent a commission of experts—two Americans, an Englishman, a Frenchman, a Croat, and others—to survey the public-health problem in Greece. As a result, a model system of health and medical services was established in Greece.

NEW REMEDY FOR MALARIA

One of the League's proudest achievements is the development of a new and cheaper remedy for malaria. Quinine was too expensive, so "totaquina" was developed. Other new remedies have been tested and their value determined at the League's laboratories in Italy, Spain, Algeria, Malaya, and Russia.

Experts in the treatment of malaria have been trained at League centers. An institute for leprosy research has been established in Brazil. Studies have been made to control a new threat—spread of yellow fever by air services operating in tropical areas.

That is just a brief sample of the work the League is doing. It is work designed to help all mankind regardless of nationalities, of frontiers, and of political differences. The League has developed an elaborate and efficient machine for solving these international problems and every nation will feel the loss if disinterest lets the machine run down.

INVESTIGATION OF PROFIT-SHARING SYSTEMS

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for the consideration at this time of Senate Resolution 154, reported earlier today.

Mr. AUSTIN. To what does the resolution relate?

Mr. BYRNES. It is a resolution to pay the expenses incurred by an investigating committee. The Senator from Iowa [Mr. HERRING] and the Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG] advised me that the amount called for in the resolution, $2,738.91, was contracted for by the committee, and should be paid.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the consideration of the resolution?

There being no objection, the resolution (S. Res. 154), submitted by Mr. HERRING on June 27, 1939, was considered and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the limit of expenditures under Senate Resolution 215, Seventy-fifth Congress, third session, agreed to May 18, 1938, authorizing the Senate Finance Committee, or any subcommittee thereof, to investigate profit-sharing systems, is hereby increased by $2,738.91.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. BARKLEY. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HUGHES in the chair) laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting sundry nominations, which were referred to the appropriate committees.

(For nominations this day received, see the end of Senate proceedings.)

EXECUTIVE REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

Mr. NEELY, from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported favorably the nomination of Sam E. Whitaker, of Tennessee, to be judge of the United States Court of Claims, vice Richard S. Whaley.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HUGHES), as a member of the Committee on the Judiciary, and from that committee, reported favorably the nomination of Martin I. Welsh to be United States district judge for the northern district of California, to fill a position created by law.

Mr. AUSTIN, from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported favorably the nomination of Edward L. Burke, of Vermont, to be United States marshal for the district of Vermont.

Mr. KING, from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported favorably the nomination of Armond W. Scott, of the District of Columbia, to be judge of the Municipal Court of the District of Columbia.

Mr. McKELLAR, from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, reported favorably the nominations of several postmasters.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The reports will be placed on the Executive Calendar.

If there be no further reports of committees, the clerk will state the nominations on the calendar.

FOREIGN SERVICE OFFICERS

The legislative clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations of Foreign Service officers.

Mr. BARKLEY. I ask that the nominations of Foreign Service officers be confirmed en bloc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nominations are confirmed en bloc.

POSTMASTERS

The legislative clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations of postmasters.

Mr. McKELLAR. I ask unanimous consent that the nominations of postmasters be confirmed en bloc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nominations are confirmed en bloc.

ARTHUR S. FLEMMING

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, yesterday the Senate confirmed the nomination of Mr. Arthur S. Fleming to be a member of the Civil Service Commission. I ask unanimous consent that the President be notified of the confirmation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the President will be notified.

That completes the Executive Calendar.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

The Senate resumed legislative session.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, if there is no other business to be transacted, I shall move that the Senate adjourn.

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, will not the Senator from Kentucky make a motion that the Senate take a recess, in order that there may not be 2 hours in the morning devoted to the consideration of the calendar, which time, of course, would be subtracted from the time which could otherwise be spent on Senate bill 280?

Mr. BARKLEY. I had not intended to have the calendar interfere with the unfinished business. The morning business will take but a few minutes, and I will ask that the calendar be called later. I do not propose to have the calendar called tomorrow so as to interfere with the Senator's bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is the understanding of the Chair that the bill of the Senator from West Virginia will be considered first tomorrow.

Mr. BARKLEY. It is the unfinished business, and will be considered immediately. It does not make any difference, so far as the consumption of time is concerned, whether we recess or adjourn. If any Senator has a bill to introduce or report to make he can usually get consent to do it. So I shall move to take a recess instead of to adjourn.

PERNICIOUS POLITICAL ACTIVITIES

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, in view of the statement I made recently concerning Senate bill 1871, the bill relating to pernicious political activities, that a certain agreement had been arrived at between members of the House Committee on the Judiciary and myself that the House committee would report the bill and endeavor to obtain a rule from the House Committee on Rules for the consideration of the bill by the House of Representatives, I wish to say, for the Record, that I am just informed that the House Committee on Rules has this afternoon voted a rule, and has carried out completely the agreement which the members of the House Committee on the Judiciary had with me.

RECESS

Mr. BARKLEY. I move that the Senate take a recess until 12 o'clock noon tomorrow.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock and 18 minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess until tomorrow, Friday, July 7, 1939, at 12 o'clock meridian.

NOMINATIONS

Executive nominations received by the Senate July 6, 1939

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

THURSDAY, JULY 6, 1939

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Thou blessed Lord and Saviour, who hast trod the path of prayer, teach us how to pray that our hearts may be renewed in every thought and full of love divine. We long for Thy fellowship; the desert blossoms as the rose and springs of water break from the parched ground when we walk with Thee. Remind us that the secret of a Christ-approved life is attained through the golden avenue of sacrificial service. We pray that all humanity may soon claim a new-born earth and that its mandates shall give the old world beauty for ashes and the garment of praise for heaviness. O come and set all mankind thinking and singing a new song that shall have the sweep and the majesty of our Master's horizon. Heavenly Father, may Thy love and rest bless our Speaker with renewed vigor. In the name of our Redeemer. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Frazier, its legislative clerk, announced that the Senate agrees to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6577) entitled "An act to provide revenue for the District of Columbia, and for other purposes."

The message also announced that the Senate further insists upon its amendment to the foregoing bill, agrees to the further conference requested by the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and appoints Mr. OVERTON, Mr. KING, Mr. TYDINGS, Mr. MCCARRAN, and Mr. CAPPER to be the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate agrees to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 3325) entitled "An act to extend the time within which the powers relating to the stabilization fund and alteration of the weight of the dollar may be exercised."

The message also announced that the Senate had adopted the following resolution:

Senate Resolution 155

JULY 5, 1939.

Resolved, That the Senate has heard with profound sorrow the announcement of the death of Hon. HARRY WILBUR GRISWOLD, late a Representative from the State of Wisconsin.

Resolved, That a committee of two Senators be appointed by the Presiding Officer to join the committee appointed on the part of the House of Representatives to attend the funeral of the deceased Representative.

Resolved, That the Secretary communicate these resolutions to the House of Representatives and transmit a copy thereof to the family of the deceased.

Resolved, That as a further mark of respect to the memory of the deceased Representative the Senate do now adjourn.

The message also announced that pursuant to the foregoing resolution the Presiding Officer had appointed Mr. LA FOLLETTE and Mr. WILEY as the members of the committee on the part of the Senate.

TOLL BRIDGE ACROSS MISSISSIPPI RIVER AT CHESTER, ILL.

Mr. CHAPMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 4370) authorizing the city of Chester, Ill., to construct, maintain, and operate a toll bridge across the Mississippi River at or near Chester, Ill., with Senate amendment thereto, and concur in the Senate amendment.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the Senate amendment, as follows:

Page 3, lines 2 and 3, strike out "reasonable interest and financing cost" and insert "interest at a rate of not to exceed 5 percent per annum and reasonable financing cost."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. CHAPMAN]?

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, as I understand it, this simply fixes the rate of interest?

Mr. CHAPMAN. Instead of leaving the interest rate at "reasonable", it places a definite limitation of 5 percent.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I think that is a good amendment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. CHAPMAN]? There was no objection.

The Senate amendment was concurred in, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA APPROPRIATION BILL

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 generous minute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN]?

There was no objection.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Speaker, a subcommittee of the Appropriations Committee and also the House District Committee are still in conference with the Senate on the tax bill and the appropriation bill for the District of Columbia.

To answer any misapprehension about this so-called formula by which they are seeking to get seven and three-quarter million dollars, may I lay the following facts before the House in the interest of clarity and accuracy?

On the basis of that formula there are 44,317 acres of land in the District, minus 5.074 acres of water, leaving a net total to be credited to the District of Columbia of 39,273 acres.

The net total amount of land owned by the United States after certain deductions is 7,840 acres. Therefore, under the so-called formula that has been submitted the ratio would be 7,840 to 39,273, or approximately 20 percent.

The formula provides for a Federal contribution equal to about 20 percent of the general revenue. Why should they have 20 percent of the general revenues when in that revenue fund there are, for instance, alcohol beverage fees, dog taxes, miscellaneous items, the business-privilege tax, motor-vehicle taxes, interest, penalties, and so forth. I would have no objection to the District of Columbia having, on the basis of that formula, 20 percent of the revenues derived from real estate, which would be $3,700,000, but how in all conscience can the District ask us for 20 percent of the entire general-revenue account which would include the dog tax, the motor-vehicle tax, and everything else? Certainly that does not look reasonable to me and I hope, therefore, the House will sustain the conferees of both the Appropriations Committee and the District of Columbia Committee when we come back here with some kind of a report.

Even if the House conferees were constrained to agree to a larger amount than $5,000,000, it should not be done on the basis of the formula contained in the Senate version of the tax bill because it is illogical and unscientific, in the manner in which it is applied.

The conferees will make an earnest attempt to compose the differences between House and Senate and defend the position of the House insofar as this can be done.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a letter from a resident of the city of Manila, P. I.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. ALEXANDER]? There was no objection.

Mr. STEFAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the Appendix of the RECORD and to include a story of the removal of Indian tribes. I may say the matter may exceed two pages in length, and I ask unanimous consent that I may have the privilege of inserting this in the RECORD, notwithstanding the fact it may go over the allotted 2 pages of the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. STEFAN]? There was no objection.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, has the gentleman received a statement from the Public Printer?

Mr. STEFAN. I understand it may not go over more than an inch or so.

Mr. RICH. I may say to the gentleman, the Public Printer will reject it unless it comes within the two and one-half pages.

Mr. STEFAN. I do not think it will run two and one-half pages.

Mr. RICH. I am simply giving the gentleman that information.

Mr. RANKIN. The gentleman can call up the Public Printer and get an estimate in a few minutes.

Mr. STEFAN. I do not think it will go over the two pages.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. STEFAN]? There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. CHURCH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CHURCH]? There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CHURCH]? There was no objection.

[Mr. CHURCH addressed the House. His remarks appear in the Appendix.]

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. O'BRIEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include therein an address delivered by J. Edgar Hoover at the Boy Scout day celebration, court of peace, World's Fair, New York, on June 29.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York? There was no objection.

Mr. GEARHART. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the Appendix of the RECORD and include therein a brief article by John Stonborough, of Washington, D. C.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California? There was no objection.

Mr. GWYNNE asked and was given permission to extend his own remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. SCHIFFLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include therein an address delivered by me on July 4.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from West Virginia? There was no objection.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD on two subjects and to include in one of them excerpts from an editorial from a newspaper.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California? There was no objection.

CALIFORNIA COMMITTEE TO SUPPORT THE WAGNER ACT

Mr. GEYER of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California? There was no objection.

[Mr. GEYER of California addressed the House. His remarks appear in the Appendix.]

Mr. GEYER of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks and to include therein a copy of the report of the California committee to support the Wagner Act.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection? There was no objection.

THE LATE EMMETT OWEN

Mr. McGEHEE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi? There was no objection.

Mr. McGEHEE. Mr. Speaker, we know not the hour that we will come to our labors and find the flag over our Capitol at half-staff, calling the attention of the membership of both branches that one of its number has passed to the great beyond.

One of the most recent was the passing of our colleague, that great and noble man, EMMETT OWEN, of the State of Georgia. We paused in our labors uttering a prayer to the Omnipotent One that his soul rest in eternal peace.

Each of those who knew Emmett loved him. Within the short period of service with him here, we knew his noble thoughts, and his unwearyness in service not only to the people of his State, but of the Nation. We have paid tribute to him and his memory, but there are others who knew him since childhood and speak of him during those years that we did not know him as we did during our short time of association.

Mr. Speaker, I am asking consent that there be included in my remarks and feeble tribute to my departed friend, an editorial by Tom Simmons, childhood friend of Congressman OWEN, appearing in the McComb Journal, of McComb, Miss., in the June 26 issue.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

The matter referred to follows:

(By Tom Simmons)

The columnist has been bowed in grief for the past several days. He got a terrible shock the other morning when he read that Congressman E. M. OWEN, of Georgia, had died suddenly in a taxicab in Washington while en route home from a session of the House. EMMETT OWEN and I were prep-school boys together; we were university mates together; and we were political mates, too. The last time I saw him was last August 18 at Barnesville, Ga., where we both had attended the prep school. The occasion was President Roosevelt's speech. It was a happy reunion, for we had not seen each other for many years.

Many of the column readers may not be interested in all this, but I want to pay tribute to one of the finest men who ever lived. My first newspaper experience was in Barnesville while attending Gordon Institute. EMMETT and I decided to start a weekly school paper, and we did. It was known as the Crimson and White, the colors of the famous institution. EMMETT was editor and I was business manager. There is where the journalism bug bit me, and the virus has been with me ever since. The time was the spring of 1897—that is a long time ago.

I shall never forget our first issue, how we labored and sweated over it. The kindly owner of the Barnesville Gazette, B. H. Hardy, agreed to set the type and print us 500 copies for $1.25 a week. Think of it! Mr. Hardy is still alive and continues to edit his paper. But we made a hit with the little sheet, and it has been in existence ever since. EMMETT wrote the salutary editorial and came in for a lot of ribbing because he referred to the paper as "She." But we learned better, and under the wise guidance of Mr. Hardy we got out a pretty good paper.

EMMETT was a silver-tongued orator in his boyhood days, and in after years he became one of the best speakers Georgia ever knew. The literary societies of the Barnesville school celebrated their anniversary in the spring and the anniversary orator was elected by vote of the students. EMMETT was a candidate, and it was our first experience in politics. He won hands down and made a stirring address. After the university days our paths separated for a time. He went to Zebulon, the county seat of Pike County, Ga., and began to operate the weekly paper there. Then he was admitted to the bar and was soon district attorney, a position he filled with honor and distinction for many years. He was elected to the legislature and then to Congress, where he had been for the past 16 years, representing the Fourth District.

His death, shocking as it was to me, brought to mind many fond memories of the old days and also has made me realize that time is rolling along. It is a blow to lose a relative, and it is also a blow to lose a friend of your youth and your pal of long ago. Hail EMMETT and farewell. I know from the life you led and thousands of good deeds you did for your family, your friends, your native State, and your Nation, that the angels welcomed you to that grand place we all hope to go.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. Speaker, I have pending before this body House Resolution 89. I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to insert correspondence of Mr. Fraser Gardner, a copy of a report to the Federation of Citizens Associations, and a clipping from the Washington Star.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. LARRABEE asked and was granted permission to extend his own remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD on the subject of the world's fair.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. LEAVY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD on the subject of the use of bituminous coal in the T. V. A. region.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Washington?

There was no objection.

Mr. FORD of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include therein an editorial on neutrality.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

Mr. JARMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a brief editorial on neutrality.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

[Mr. RANKIN addressed the House. His remarks appear in the Appendix.]

NATIONAL LABOR RELATIONS ACT

Mr. SMITH of Virginia from the Committee on Rules, submitted the following privileged resolution, which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed:

House Resolution 229

Whereas the National Labor Relations Act was enacted by the Congress for the purpose of diminishing disputes between employers and employees, which interfered with the free flow of commerce between the States; and

Whereas there has ensued an alarming increase in strikes and labor disputes generally, indicating serious defects in the administration of the National Labor Relations Act insofar as effecting its alleged purposes is concerned; and

Whereas the said act is of an experimental nature and necessarily requires amendments and corrections, as indicated by experience and the effect of its operation upon the economic system of the country; and

Whereas it has been frequently charged that the National Labor Relations Act has contributed to rather than diminished labor disputes, and that the said Board has shown consistent partiality toward one labor organization over another, and has consistently refused to recognize any rights of the employer under said act; and

Whereas it is essential to the successful operation of said act that it be administered fairly, impartially, and with a due regard to the language of the act itself, to the Constitution of the United States, and to the recognition of the vital principle that all citizens have equal rights before the law, whether employer or employee; and

Whereas in the interpretation of said law and the promulgation of regulations thereunder, those charged with administering the National Labor Relations Act have construed the term "interstate commerce" to include business in no wise engaged in interstate commerce, so as to enlarge its jurisdiction to cover matters of minor and local character never at any time anticipated or intended by Congress in the enactment of said law; and

Whereas there has been an insistent demand both from the country and from individual Members of both branches of Congress for amendments to said law with the view of correcting manifest injustices, erroneous interpretation, and unauthorized regulations; and

Whereas it is desirable that said act should be perfected, to the end that all persons affected thereby should receive equal justice and that the intent of Congress regarding the same should be respected in its administration; and

Whereas it is now apparent that this purpose can be effectuated only through an investigation by a special committee appointed to investigate and ascertain the facts and recommend legislation for that purpose: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That a committee of five Members of the House of Representatives be appointed by the Speaker of the House to take testimony, investigate, and report to the House as follows:

1. Whether the National Labor Relations Board has been fair and impartial in its conduct, in its decisions, in its interpretation of the law (particularly with respect to the definition of the term "interstate commerce"), and in its dealings between different labor organizations and its dealings between employer and employee;

2. What effect, if any, the said National Labor Relations Act has had upon increasing or decreasing disputes between employer and employee; upon increasing or decreasing employment and upon the general economic condition of the country;

3. What amendments, if any, are desirable to the National Labor Relations Act in order to more effectively carry out the intent of Congress, bring about better relations between labor unions and between employer and employee, and what changes if any are desirable in the personnel of those charged with the administration of said law;

4. Whether the National Labor Relations Board has by interpretation or regulation attempted to write into said act, intents and purposes not justified by the language of the act;

5. Whether or not Congress should by legislation further define and clarify the meaning of the term "interstate commerce."

The said committee shall recommend to the Congress such changes as they deem desirable in said act or in the personnel of those administering said act and shall report and recommend such legislation either by way of amendments to existing law or by way of new legislation as they may deem desirable.

The said select committee is hereby authorized to report to the House at any time by bill or otherwise with recommendations upon any matter covered by this resolution; and any bill or resolution so reported shall be placed upon the calendar and have a privileged status.

The committee or any subcommittee thereof, shall have power to hold hearings and to sit and act anywhere within or without the District of Columbia; to require by subpoena or otherwise the attendance of witnesses and the production of books, papers, and documents; to administer oaths; to take testimony; to have printing and binding done; and to make such expenditures as it deems advisable within the amount appropriated therefor. Subpoenas shall be issued under the signature of the chairman of the committee and shall be served by any person designated by him. The provisions of sections 102 to 104, inclusive, of the Revised Statutes shall apply in case of any failure of any witness to comply with any subpoena or to testify when summoned under authority of this resolution.

With the following committee amendment:

On page 4, strike out lines 10 to 14, inclusive.

FORMATION OF THE CONSTITUTION

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 314) to provide for the compiling and publishing of a history of the formation, the signing, the ratification, and the establishment of the Constitution, including historical facts and data relative to the commencement of the First Congress of the United States; the inauguration of George Washington as the first President of the United States; the adoption and ratification of the Bill of Rights, and the first meeting of the Supreme Court of the United States; and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the joint resolution.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, as I understand it, this appropriation will be the final one as far as these publications are concerned?

Mr. BLOOM. This will be the final appropriation, and there will be no extension of time beyond the time allotted in the original act. This provides for printing 6,200 copies of the final report, which will be in three volumes. There will be 10 sets allotted to each Member of the House of Representatives and each Senator and each Delegate, as well as to the Library.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. I withdraw my reservation of objection, Mr. Speaker.

The Clerk read the joint resolution, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the United States Constitution Sesquicentennial Commission (hereinafter referred to as the "Commission") is authorized and directed to compile and publish a history of the formation, the signing, the ratification, and the establishment of the Constitution, including such historical facts and data as the Commission may deem pertinent relative to the commencement of the First Congress of the United States under the Constitution; the proceedings and ceremonies in connection with the inauguration of George Washington as the first President of the United States under the Constitution; the adoption and ratification of the Bill of Rights, and the first meeting of the Supreme Court of the United States; and also to include therein a final report of the activities of the Commission during the Nation-wide observance of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the formation, ratification, and establishment of the Constitution. The Commission shall arrange for the printing of such report in three volumes, of which 6,200 sets shall be printed, and of which 10 sets shall be furnished to the Vice President and each Senator, Representative, Delegate, and Resident Commissioner, and the residue shall be for such use as the Commission may deem appropriate to carry out the aims and purposes for which the Commission was created, including 150 sets for the use of the Library of Congress and for the international exchange, and a sufficient number to be delivered to the Superintendent of Documents for the distribution of one set to each Government depository library.

Sec. 2. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $40,000 for the purpose of enabling the Commission to perform the functions hereby and heretofore authorized.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

COMMITTEE ON AGRICULTURE

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I offer a resolution, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 244

Resolved, That STEPHEN PACE, of Georgia, be, and he is hereby, elected a member of the standing Committee of the House of Representatives on Agriculture.

The resolution was agreed to.

LETTER OF RESIGNATION

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair lays before the House the following letter of resignation from a committee:

The Clerk read as follows:

CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES,
HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, D. C., July 5, 1939.

Hon. WILLIAM B. BANKHEAD,

Speaker, House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

My DEAR MR. SPEAKER: In consideration of my assignment to the Committee on Agriculture, I herewith resign as a member of the Committee on Military Affairs.

Respectfully yours,

STEPHEN PACE.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the resignation will be accepted.

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF FACILITIES OF UNITED STATES PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE TO THE FOREIGN SERVICE OF THE UNITED STATES

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill (H. R. 3537) to extend the facilities of the United States Public Health Service to active officers of the Foreign Service of the United States.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the statement may be read in lieu of the report.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the conference report.

The conference report and statement are as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 3537) to extend the facilities of the United States Public Health Service to active officers of the Foreign Service of the United States, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the language contained in section 3 of the Senate amendment insert the following:

"Sec. 3. Any officer or American employee of the foreign service of any department or unit of the United States Government suffering from illness or disability not the direct result of foreign service and any dependent member of the family of any such officer or American employee suffering from illness or disability when such dependent has resided with the officer or American employee on foreign station and if such illness or disability in any case covered by this section is not the result of vicious habits, intemperance, or misconduct on his part, the cause of such illness for the purpose hereof to be determined by the United States Public Health Service, may be furnished medical and dental treatment and hospitalization (in the case of a dependent member of a family if suitable accommodations are available) by the United States Public Health Service at any of its regularly established relief stations and hospitals at a cost to the officer or employee concerned in accordance with rates established by regulations of the Surgeon General and applicable to pay patients from other branches of the Government service under similar circumstances. Collections by the United States Public Health Service on this account shall be credited to the appropriation applicable to the operation of marine hospitals and relief stations."

And the Senate agree to the same.

SOL BLOOM,
LUTHER A. JOHNSON,
HAMILTON FISH,

Managers on the part of the House.

KEY PITTMAN,
WALTER F. GEORGE,
WM. E. BORAH,

Managers on the part of the Senate.

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 3537) to extend the facilities of the United States Public Health Service to active officers of the Foreign Service of the United States, submit the following statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon and recommended in the accompanying conference report as to each of such amendments, namely:

The specific changes agreed to and recommended by the conferees are as follows:

In section 3 of the engrossed Senate amendment, the following language is stricken out on page 2, beginning in line 13, viz: "which is found by the United States Public Health Service under the same procedure prescribed in section 1 of this act to have originated while on foreign station" and in lieu thereof the following is substituted: "when such dependent has resided with the officer or American employee on foreign station".

Also in said section 3 of said amendment, the following language on page 2, in lines 18 and 19, is stricken out: "or other circumstances not related to such foreign service."

Sections 1 and 2 of the Senate amendment are not changed in any wise.

SOL BLOOM.
LUTHER A. JOHNSON.
HAMILTON FISH.

Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I would like the gentleman from New York to state briefly what the differences are between the House and Senate.

Mr. BLOOM. The difference is that in the Senate they excluded members of the immediate family of the career men who were not with them at the time. Of course, we all realize that sometimes the wives of these officers leave the consulate and come back here, but the disease may have been contracted abroad, and it really does not make any difference because they pay for the hospitalization. The Government does not pay for such hospitalization outside of Ministers and attachés, but the families may become afflicted with almost any ailment and while they are in the service they are permitted to go to the hospital, but pay the ordinary fee charged at such Government hospital.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. And there is no expense to the Government?

Mr. BLOOM. There is not one penny of expense to the Government.

The conference report was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

TEX HOLT

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, among the hundreds of letters that pour across a Member's desk, mostly demands and complaints, there is an occasional letter which he remembers after he has forgotten all of the others. I received such a letter yesterday. It was from an old friend of mine. A native Texan who came to Colorado and now lives at Antonito. His name is Tex Holt, and he looks the part. A few years ago Tex was paralyzed, but he continued to maintain himself by making small wooden articles and selling them. When he got too old for that, he was relegated to the old-age pension list, and he gets a pension of about $28 to $30 a month. This is what he said in his letter:

I am thankful to the good people of Colorado for what they have done for just such fellows as me in passing the pension laws.

When I read that, I said, "God bless old Tex Holt, he is the salt of the earth." He is satisfied and thankful, and I consider him worthy of a minute of the time of the House and a paragraph in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. May his tribe increase. [Applause.]

LEAVE TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. BURDICK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that at the conclusion of the business today on the Speaker's desk and other special orders I be permitted to address the House for 15 minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. COFFEE of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include a brief newspaper article,

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. PARSONS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include therein an editorial.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. GEYER of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include an article from the Evening Star, of Washington.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

ADDITIONAL FACILITIES FOR DEFENSE OF CANAL ZONE

Mr. SABATH, from the Committee on Rules, reported the following privileged resolution (H. Res. 203, Rept. No. 1039) for printing under the rule:

House Resolution 203

Resolved, That upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of H. R. 5129, a bill authorizing and providing for the construction of additional facilities on the Canal Zone for the purposes of more adequately providing for the defense of the Panama Canal and for increasing its capacity for the future needs of interoceanic shipping. That after general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and continue not to exceed 2 hours, to be equally divided and controlled between the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries, the bill shall be read for amendment under the 5-minute rule. At the conclusion of the consideration of the bill for amendment the Committee shall rise and report the same to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted, and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion, except one motion to recommit with or without instructions.

CONSENT CALENDAR

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will call the first bill on the Consent Calendar.

LOUISIANA-VICKSBURG BRIDGE COMMISSION

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 3224) creating the Louisiana-Vicksburg Bridge Commission; defining the authority, power, and duties of said Commission; and authorizing said Commission and its successors and assigns to purchase, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Mississippi River at or near Delta Point, La., and Vicksburg, Miss.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. CHURCH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice. Is there objection?

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Speaker, I hope the gentleman will withdraw that request inasmuch as the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. McGEHEE] has certain amendments, clarifying amendments, to this bill. We have come to an agreement, all interested parties.

Mr. CHURCH. Mr. Speaker, I demand the regular order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The regular order is demanded. Is there objection?

Mr. McGEHEE. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The regular order has been demanded. There is but one thing before the House, and that is, Is there objection to the bill being passed over without prejudice?

Mr. McGEHEE. Then, Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to make a statement.

Mr. CHURCH. Mr. Speaker, I demand the regular order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The regular order is demanded. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. CHURCH. Mr. Speaker, I have no objection to reserving my objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman demanded the regular order and when that is demanded there is but one thing for the Chair to do, and that is to put the question. The Clerk will call the next bill.

SAN CARLOS APACHE INDIANS

The Clerk called the bill (S. 818) authorizing payment to the San Carlos Apache Indians for lands ceded by them in the agreement of February 25, 1896, ratified by the act of June 10, 1896, and reopening such lands to mineral entry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

WAPATO SCHOOL DISTRICT, YAKIMA COUNTY, WASH.

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 3824) to provide funds for cooperation with Wapato School District No. 54, Yakima County, Washington, for extension of public-school buildings to be available for Indian children of the Yakima Reservation.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

AMENDING SECTION 344 OF AGRICULTURAL ADJUSTMENT ACT OF 1938

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 5911, to amend subsection (h) of section 344 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

Mr. JONES of Texas. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, several Members have indicated that they intend to keep on objecting, and I wonder if there is any reason for keeping the bill on the calendar?

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Speaker, I would like to propound a parliamentary question.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. KNUTSON. It is evident there are a number of bills on the Consent Calendar that will either be objected to or asked to be passed over without prejudice. Would it be in order for the objectors to state at this time which they will ask to have passed over in order to expedite the business of the House?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. If a unanimous consent request were submitted that the objectors now rise and say which bills they are going to ask to be passed over without prejudice, the Chair will entertain such a request.

Mr. KNUTSON. I prefer such a unanimous-consent request, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The objectors would have to know the numbers of the bills.

Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I make a point of order. There is a unanimous-consent request pending now that this bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan that this bill be passed over without prejudice?

Mr. PACE. Mr. Speaker, I object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. WOLCOTT and Mr. PACE objected.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will call the next bill.

QUINAIELT RESERVATION, STATE OF WASHINGTON

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 2654, authorizing the payment of necessary expenses incurred by certain Indians allotted on the Quinaielt Reservation, State of Washington.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill be passed over without prejudice.

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Speaker, I would like to inquire whether or not the Speaker put the unanimous-consent request I made?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair did not because the bill that was under consideration at that time was passed over. The Chair will put the request of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. WOLCOTT], and then the Chair will recognize the gentleman from Minnesota to prefer his request.

Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. WOLCOTT] that this bill be passed over without prejudice?

There was no objection.

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Speaker, I renew my unanimous-consent request.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Minnesota asks unanimous consent that the objectors announce at this time which bills they will ask to be passed over without prejudice. Is there objection?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, a point of order.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, it is impossible to figure out in a few minutes what bills will be objected to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair does not know that. The Chair simply put the request of the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, I object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will call the next bill on the calendar.

TO CREDIT CERTAIN INDIAN TRIBES WITH SUMS HERETOFORE EXPENDED ON INDIAN IRRIGATION WORK

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 2777, to credit certain Indian tribes with sums heretofore expended from tribal funds on Indian irrigation works.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I object.

ESTABLISHMENT AND MAINTENANCE OF FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT LIBRARY

The Clerk called the next business, House Joint Resolution 268, to provide for the establishment and maintenance of the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the joint resolution?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this resolution be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

PARTICIPATION IN COSTS AND BENEFITS OF TONGUE RIVER STORAGE RESERVOIR

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 5506, to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to contract with the State Water Conservation Board of Montana and the Tongue River Water Users' Association for participation in the costs and benefits of the Tongue River storage reservoir project for the benefit of lands on the Tongue River Indian Reservation, Mont.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. KEAN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, may I ask the gentleman from Montana [Mr. O'CONNOR] how many Indians will be affected by this proposition?

Mr. O'CONNOR. I will state to the gentleman that I just received this information from the Indian Bureau. There are 1,573 Indians in the Tongue River Reservation. The entire population will be benefited not only for farming purposes but for raising crops for winter feed for livestock. These people have not other means of getting water supply.

I will say to the gentleman that the original cost of this project was $1,200,000. It is being constructed under the P. W. A. program, and it is 75 percent completed now. This $360,750 which this bill would appropriate by the Congress is paid to the State water conservation board, and the Tongue River Water Users' Association, of Miles City, Mont., over a period of 37 years. The Federal Government has a lien against all of this Indian-owned land for the repayment of the amount so appropriated. The Government, however, cannot foreclose this lien as long as the land is owned by the Indians. The Government cannot lose anything, because while the Government cannot enforce its lien against Indian-owned land as long as it is so owned, if the Indians should sell it, the deed will carry a provision that it is subject to the lien of the United States Government.

There is no chance, therefore, for the Government to lose. As the project is three-quarters completed, it would not make sense to discontinue the work. It will assist, as I say, about 1,500 Indians who otherwise will be on relief if they cannot get water to take care of their livestock and farming operations.

Mr. KEAN. What happens at the end of 37 years, will the Indians get the water free?

Mr. O'CONNOR. The Indians will have to pay the maintenance charge and upkeep after the plant is paid for.

Mr. KEAN. They are paying $360,000 now over a period of 37 years. What happens at the end of 37 years?

Mr. O'CONNOR. The project will be built and paid for. Thereafter there will be no charge for the water except annual maintenance charge.

Mr. KEAN. Do they get water for their farms then without paying anything further?

Mr. O'CONNOR. Yes; except annual maintenance charge. They will have to pay enough annually, of course, for maintenance and operation.

I sincerely hope the gentleman will not object to this bill, because, as before stated, this project is 75 percent completed and the amount the Government advances will be a lien on land which is as fine as ever lay outdoors.

Mr. KEAN. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to execute a contract with the Tongue River Water Users' Association, a Montana corporation, and the State Water Conservation Board of the State of Montana, providing for the acquiring of a right to the use annually of 7,500 acre-feet of water from the Tongue River Reservoir project for the irrigation of lands on the Tongue River Indian Reservation, Mont., now without an adequate supply of water, and for the payment therefor of a proper proportionate share of the construction costs of the project: Provided, That the cost to the United States shall not exceed a total amount of $360,750, which amount, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be paid in not to exceed 37 annual installments beginning on December 15, 1939, and continuing thereafter until the entire construction costs properly assessable against the Indian lands benefited shall have been paid: Provided further, That said contract shall also make provision for payment of the annual operation and maintenance charges properly assessable against the United States on account of its participation in the benefits of said project, and the necessary money to pay such operation and maintenance charges is hereby authorized to be appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

Sec. 2. Appropriations made for the purpose of this act shall be reimbursed to the United States under regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

SAN CARLOS AND FLATHEAD INDIAN IRRIGATION PROJECTS

The Clerk called the next business, House Joint Resolution 264, to approve the action of the Secretary of the Interior deferring the collection of certain irrigation construction charges against lands under the San Carlos and Flathead Indian irrigation projects.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the joint resolution?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

Whereas the act of Congress approved June 22, 1936 (49 Stat. 1803), provides that the Secretary of the Interior may adjust, defer, or cancel irrigation charges against non-Indian-owned lands within Indian irrigation projects, where conditions are found to justify such action, subject to the approval of Congress; and

Whereas an investigation of conditions affecting the San Carlos Indian irrigation project, Arizona; and the Flathead Indian irrigation project, Montana, is now being made pursuant to the provision of said act; and

Whereas the Secretary of the Interior has deferred certain irrigation construction charges against lands of the said projects which will become due and payable before the investigation can be completed: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, etc., That in accordance with the act of June 22, 1936, the action of the Secretary of the Interior in deferring such charges under said irrigation projects is hereby approved.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Am I correct in my understanding that it has been the policy of the House for a great many years to eliminate the whereas clauses of resolutions?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman is correct; that is the general rule, although a certain few resolutions are passed retaining the whereas clauses. Generally, however, the whereas clauses are stricken out.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment to strike out the whereas clauses of this resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Wolcott: On pages 1 and 2, after the title, strike out all four paragraphs in the preamble.

The amendment was agreed to.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

NATURALIZATION OF CERTAIN ALIEN SPOUSES OF CITIZENS OF UNITED STATES

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 5401, to provide for the naturalization of certain alien spouses of citizens of the United States, and to validate the naturalization of certain persons.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, the author of the bill, I think, would like to make a statement about this bill. If his statement is in line with what I think it will be, I shall not object.

Mr. SPARKMAN. Mr. Speaker, this bill is introduced simply for the purpose of curing a defect in the law as it has been interpreted by two separate circuit courts of appeal and a district court. In 1922 there was enacted what is known as the Cable Act. This act was amended in 1930, again in 1931, and again in 1934. In 1934 the Immigration and Naturalization Service issued a regulation. All of the courts before which cases came pertaining to this matter followed that regulation with the exception of the circuit court of appeals for the third circuit, the circuit court of appeals of the seventh circuit, and the District Court for the District of Columbia. The result has been to create a variance in the rulings of different courts. This bill was introduced to correct that variance.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. The gentleman has no other purpose in mind in offering the bill?

Mr. SPARKMAN. None whatsoever.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. It is offered simply that there may be uniformity in the interpretation of the law?

Mr. SPARKMAN. That is all in the world it is offered for.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

Mr. LEWIS of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will not the author of the bill explain it further? It seems to me unfortunate that bills affecting citizenship should come up under unanimous consent. I should be pleased to have a further explanation.

Mr. SPARKMAN. Mr. Speaker, it would, of course, take some little time to explain the bill. I feel, however, that if the gentleman from Colorado will read a memorandum from the Department of Labor, which is included in the report, he would find a perfect explanation of the need for this bill and the purpose of the bill. I introduced this bill 2 years ago when I was a member of the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization. It has for its sole purpose the clarification of the law to prevent these variances in its interpretation. I explained this a few minutes ago. It does not give a single new privilege that the law itself does not already give. It simply unifies or clarifies the differences in the rulings of the different courts.

Mr. LEWIS of Colorado. It seems to me the gentleman has brought out exactly the point that I had in mind—he is unable, within the limited time under a reservation of objection, to explain what the bill does.

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill may be passed over without prejudice.

Mr. SPARKMAN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I certainly did not intend to leave any doubt as to my being able to explain it. The time is so limited I cannot explain it in detail. I studied it carefully before I agreed to introduce it. The bill does just one thing, and that is to clarify the legal status of these people. Some of them in one court are held to be citizens, but another court holds that similar people are not citizens. Many of them probably do not know whether they are citizens or not. The only purpose of this bill is to clarify the situation.

Mr. LEWIS of Colorado. That brings out exactly the point I am making—that important bills affecting citizenship should not be called up under unanimous consent. It is impossible to explain in detail what such a bill seeks to accomplish within the limited time permissible under a reservation of objection.

Mr. Speaker, I renew my request.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Colorado asks unanimous consent that the bill may be passed over without prejudice. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

AMENDMENT TO SECTION 92, TITLE 2, OF THE CANAL ZONE CODE AND FOR OTHER PURPOSES

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 1819, to amend section 92, title 2, of the Canal Zone Code and for other purposes.

Mr. RAMSPECK, Mr. COSTELLO, and Mr. TABER objected.

AUTHORIZING SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR TO CONVEY CERTAIN PROPERTY TO WASHINGTON COUNTY, UTAH

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 2184, to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to convey certain property to Washington County, Utah, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior, in his discretion, is hereby authorized to convey, by quitclaim deed, to Washington County, Utah, or the authorized agents or representatives of said county, certain land and the improvements thereon, said land being described as follows:

SALT LAKE MERIDIAN

A part of lot 1 in block 9, and a part of lot 2 in block 3 of Rockville Townsite Survey, described as follows: Beginning at the southeast corner of said lot 2 in block 3, which point is approximately north six hundred and thirty-nine feet and west nine hundred and twenty-three feet from the southeast corner of section 1, township 42 south, range 11 west, and running thence north thirty feet, thence west eighty feet, thence south three hundred and twenty-five feet, thence east eighty feet, thence north two hundred and ninety-five feet to the place of beginning, containing twenty-six thousand square feet, more or less.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. LUTHER A. JOHNSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein two brief editorials.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. JOHNSON]?

There was no objection.

CONSENT CALENDAR

AMENDING ACT REQUIRING REGISTRATION OF AGENTS OF FOREIGN PRINCIPALS

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 5988, to amend an act entitled "An act to require the registration of certain persons employed by agencies to disseminate propaganda in the United States, and for other purposes," approved June 8, 1938 (Public Law No. 583, 75th Cong., 3d sess.).

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 1 of the act entitled "An act to require the registration of certain persons employed by agencies to disseminate propaganda in the United States, and for other purposes," approved June 8, 1938 (Public Law No. 583, 75th Cong., 3d sess.), be, and it is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"That as used in this act—

"(a) The term 'person' means an individual, partnership, association, or corporation;

"(b) The term 'United States' includes the United States and any place subject to the jurisdiction thereof;

"(c) The term 'foreign principal' includes the government of a foreign country, a political party of a foreign country, a person domiciled abroad, any foreign business, partnership, association, corporation, or political organization, or a domestic organization subsidized, directly or indirectly, in whole or in part by any of the entities described herein;

"(d) The term 'agent of a foreign principal' means any person who acts or engages or agrees to act as a public-relations counsel, publicity agent, or as agent, servant, representative, or attorney for a foreign principal, and shall include any person who receives compensation from or is under the direction of a foreign principal: Provided, however, That such term shall not include—

"(1) a duly accredited diplomatic or consular officer of a foreign government who is so recognized by the Department of State of the United States; nor

"(2) any official of a foreign government recognized by the United States as a government other than a public-relations counsel or publicity agent or a citizen of the United States, whose status and the character of whose duties as such official are of record in the Department of State of the United States; nor

"(3) any member of the staff of or person employed by a duly accredited diplomatic or consular officer of a foreign government who is so recognized by the Department of State of the United States, other than a public-relations counsel or publicity agent, whose status and the character of whose duties as such member or employee are of record in the Department of State of the United States; nor

"(4) any person performing only private, nonpolitical, financial, mercantile, or other activities in furtherance of the bona fide trade or commerce of such foreign principal; nor

"(5) any person engaged only in activities in furtherance of bona fide religious, scholastic, academic, or scientific pursuits or of the fine arts.

"(e) The term 'Secretary' means the Secretary of State of the United States."

SEC. 2. That section 3 of the act entitled "An act to require the registration of certain persons employed by agencies to disseminate propaganda in the United States, and for other purposes," approved June 8, 1938 (Public Law No. 583, 75th Cong., 3d sess.), is hereby amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 3. Every person who has filed a registration statement required by section 2 shall, within 30 days after the expiration of each period of 6 months succeeding the first filing, file with the Secretary a statement, under oath, on a form prescribed by the Secretary, which shall set forth with respect to such preceding 6 months' period—

"(a) Such facts as may be necessary to make the information required under section 2 hereof accurate and current with respect to such period;

"(b) The amount and form of compensation received by such person for acting as agent for a foreign principal which has been received during such 6 months' period either directly or indirectly from any foreign principal; and

"(c) A statement containing such details required under this act as the Secretary shall fix, of the activities of such persons as agent of a foreign principal during such 6 months' period."

SEC. 3. That section 4 of the act entitled "An act to require the registration of certain persons employed by agencies to disseminate propaganda in the United States, and for other purposes," approved June 8, 1938 (Public Law No. 583, 75th Cong., 3d sess.), is hereby amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 4. The Secretary shall retain in permanent form all statements filed under this act, and such statements shall be public records and open to the public examination and inspection at all reasonable hours, under such rules and regulations as the Secretary may prescribe: Provided, That the Secretary is hereby authorized to withdraw from the public records the registration statement of any person whose activities have ceased to be of a character which requires registration under the terms of this act."

With the following committee amendment:

Page 4, line 16, strike out "persons" and insert "person."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PERMITTING RETIRED OFFICERS AND ENLISTED MEN OF ARMY, NAVY, MARINE CORPS, AND COAST GUARD TO HOLD CIVIL OFFICE

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 1116, to amend section 1860 of the Revised Statutes, as amended (48 U. S. C. 1460), to permit retired officers and enlisted men of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard to hold civil office in any Territory of the United States.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will someone explain this bill?

Mr. GRIFFITH. Mr. Speaker, as is stated in the report, the purpose of this bill is to extend to officers and enlisted men of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard the same privileges that are now enjoyed by officers of the Army to hold civil office in any Territory of the United States.

Mr. COCHRAN. Does not the gentleman feel the time has arrived when we should repeal that law which gives the right to Army and Navy officers to hold positions after they have reached retirement age and give some of the unemployed people in the country the opportunity to get the jobs? Be it remembered members of our military and naval forces receive liberal retirement pay when they leave the service.

Mr. MAAS. May I say to the gentleman that most of these positions are such you would not want to put unemployed people in there. They are executive positions. They do not draw both pays.

Mr. COCHRAN. May I say to the gentleman from Minnesota that there are unemployed people in this country who are capable of holding any job this Government has. Mr. Speaker, I therefore object.

ACCEPTING AND CASHING OF GOVERNMENT PAY CHECKS

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 1118, to provide for acceptance and cashing of Government pay checks of retired naval personnel and members of the Naval and Marine Corps Reserves by commissary stores and ship's stores ashore, located outside the continental limits of the United States.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That notwithstanding the provisions of section 3639 and 3651, Revised Statutes, as amended (31 U. S. C. 521, 543), the Secretary of the Navy, in his discretion, may hereafter authorize the officer in charge of any commissary store or ship's store ashore, located outside the continental limits of the United States, to accept Government checks tendered by retired personnel of the Navy and Marine Corps and by members of the Naval and Marine Corps Reserves in payment of amounts due by such personnel to any such commissary store or ship's store ashore, and to refund, in cash, to the payees of the tendered checks any difference between the amounts due and the amounts of the tendered checks.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GRANTING RETIRED PAY OF CHIEF PHARMACIST'S MATE, UNITED STATES NAVY

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 5802, granting the retired pay of a chief pharmacist's mate, United States Navy.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That upon the retirement from active duty of the chief pharmacist's mate, United States Navy, who on April 26, 1938, was performing duty under orders of the Navy Department in the office of the attending physician, House of Representatives, he shall be entitled to such maximum rate of retired pay as is now or hereafter may be authorized by law to be paid to chief warrant officers upon retirement who have had over 10 years' commissioned service and with creditable record.

With the following committee amendment:

Page 1, line 7, after the word "entitled", insert "to the rank of chief pharmacist and."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

AMENDING ACT TO AUTHORIZE ALTERATIONS AND REPAIRS TO CERTAIN NAVAL VESSELS

The Clerk called the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 126) to amend the act to authorize alterations and repairs to certain naval vessels, and for other purposes, approved April 20, 1939.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the Senate joint resolution?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the Senate joint resolution, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the act to authorize alterations and repairs to certain naval vessels, and for other purposes, approved April 20, 1939 (Public No. 37, 76th Cong.), be, and the same is hereby, amended by striking out in the proviso the figures "$5,000,000" and inserting in lieu thereof "$5,500,000", so as to make the proviso read: "Provided, That the total cost of such alterations and repairs shall not exceed $5,500,000."

The Senate joint resolution was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

AUTHORIZING STATES OWNING LANDS OR INTEREST THEREIN ACQUIRED FROM THE UNITED STATES TO INCLUDE THE SAME IN CERTAIN AGREEMENTS FOR THE CONSERVATION OF OIL AND GAS RESOURCES

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 2953, authorizing States owning lands or interests therein acquired from the United States to include the same in certain agreements for the conservation of oil and gas resources.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That, notwithstanding the provisions of any applicable grant, deed, patent, exchange, or law of the United States, any State owning lands or interests therein acquired by it from the United States may include, subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, any part of such lands or interest therein in agreements embracing lands or mineral deposits of the United States, for the purpose of more properly conserving the oil and gas resources within such State. Such agreements may provide for the cooperative or unit development and operation of any oil or gas pool, field, or area and for the allocation of the production and the sharing of the proceeds from the whole or any specified part thereof, regardless of the particular tract from which any production is obtained or proceeds derived.

With the following committee amendment:

Page 1, strike out all after the enacting clause and insert the following:

"That notwithstanding the provisions of any applicable grant, deed, patent, exchange, or law of the United States, any State owning lands or interests therein acquired by it from the United States may consent to the operation or development of such lands or interests, or any part thereof, under agreements approved by the Secretary of the Interior made jointly or severally with lessees or permittees of lands or mineral deposits of the United States or others, for the purpose of more properly conserving the oil and gas resources within such State. Such agreements may provide for the cooperative or unit operation or development of part or all of any oil or gas pool, field, or area; for the allocation of production and the sharing of proceeds from the whole or any specified part thereof regardless of the particular tract from which production is obtained or proceeds are derived; and, with the consent of the State, for the modification of the terms and provisions of State leases for lands operated and developed thereunder, including the term of years for which said leases were originally granted, to conform said leases to the terms and provisions of such agreements: Provided, That nothing in this act contained, nor the effectuation of it, shall be construed as in any respect waiving, determining, or affecting any right, title, or interest, which otherwise may exist in the United States, and that the making of any agreement, as provided in this act, shall not be construed as an admission as to the title or ownership of the lands included."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

AMENDING THE TAYLOR GRAZING ACT

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 5958, to amend the Taylor Grazing Act.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill (S. 2237) to amend the Taylor Grazing Act, may be substituted for the House bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California [Mr. COSTELLO]?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the Senate bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the act entitled "An act to stop injury to the public grazing lands by preventing overgrazing and soil deterioration, to provide for their orderly use, improvement, and development, to stabilize the livestock industry dependent upon the public range, and for other purposes," approved June 28, 1934, as amended, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"Sec. 18. (a) In order that the Secretary of the Interior may have the benefit of the fullest information and advice concerning physical, economic, and other local conditions in the several grazing districts, there shall be an advisory board of local stockmen in each such district, the members of which shall be known as grazing district advisers. Each such board shall consist of not less than 5 nor more than 12 members, exclusive of wildlife representatives, one such representative to be appointed by the Secretary, in his discretion, to membership on each such board. Except for such wildlife representatives, the names of the members of each district advisory board shall be recommended to the Secretary by the users of the range in that district through an election conducted under rules and regulations prescribed by the Secretary. No grazing district adviser so recommended, however, shall assume office until he has been appointed by the Secretary and has taken an oath of office. The Secretary may, after due notice, remove any grazing district adviser from office if in his opinion such removal would be for the good of the service.

"(b) Each district advisory board shall meet at least once annually at a time to be fixed by the Director of Grazing, or by such other officer to whom the Secretary may delegate the function of issuing grazing permits, and at such other times as its members may be called by such officer. Each board shall offer advice and make a recommendation on each application for such a grazing permit within its district: Provided, That in no case shall any grazing district adviser participate in any advice or recommendation concerning a permit, or an application therefor, in which he is directly or indirectly interested. Each board shall further offer advice or make recommendations concerning rules and regulations for the administration of this act, the establishment of grazing districts and the modification of the boundaries thereof, the seasons of use and carrying capacity of the range, and any other matters affecting the administration of this act within the district. Except in a case where in the judgment of the Secretary an emergency shall exist, the Secretary shall request the advice of the advisory board in advance of the promulgation of any rules and regulations affecting the district."

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

A similar House bill (H. R. 5958) was laid on the table.

PLUMAS NATIONAL FOREST, CALIF.

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 2415, to authorize the addition of certain lands to the Plumas National Forest, Calif.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That within the following-described areas any lands not in Government ownership which are found by the Secretary of Agriculture to be chiefly valuable for national-forest purposes may be offered in exchange under the provisions of the act of March 20, 1922 (Public, No. 173; 42 Stat. L. 465), as amended by the act of February 28, 1925 (Public, No. 513), upon notice as therein provided and upon acceptance of title, shall become parts of the Plumas National Forest; and any of such described areas in Government ownership found by the Secretaries of Agriculture and the Interior to be chiefly valuable for national-forest purposes and not now parts of any national forest may be added to said national forest as herein provided by proclamation of the President, subject to all valid claims and provisions of existing withdrawals: Provided, That any lands received in exchange or purchased under the provisions of this act shall be open to mineral locations, mineral development, and patent in accordance with the mining laws of the United States:

Township 18 north, range 7 east, Mount Diablo base and meridian, California: Sections 3, 4, 5, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 15, 22, 23, 26, and 27.

With the following committee amendment:

Page 2, line 6, after "exchange" strike out "or purchased."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

TRANSFER OF CERTAIN LANDS FROM THE SIERRA NATIONAL FOREST TO YOSEMITE NATIONAL PARK, CALIF.

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 4635, to transfer certain lands from the Sierra National Forest to the Yosemite National Park, in the State of California, and for other purposes.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. McCormack). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

HOSPITALIZATION AND MEDICAL TREATMENT OF PERSONS IN THE ACTIVE MILITARY SERVICE

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 840, to amend and clarify the provisions of the act of June 15, 1936 (49 Stat. 1507), and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That neither of the provisions of the act of June 15, 1936 (49 Stat. 1507), nor any other law of the United States shall be construed as limiting the power and authority of the Secretary of War, under such regulations as he may prescribe, to require the hospitalization and medical treatment of persons in the active military service, and to incur obligations with respect thereto, without reference to their line-of-duty status: Provided, That this act shall not apply to officers and enlisted men who are treated in private hospitals or by civilian physicians while on furloughs or leaves of absence in excess of 24 hours.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

STATUS OF WARRANT OFFICERS AND OF ENLISTED MEN TO SERVE AS COMMISSIONED OFFICERS

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 1181, to provide for the status of warrant officers and of enlisted men of the Regular Army who serve as commissioned officers.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That hereafter any warrant officer or enlisted man of the Regular Army who shall serve on active duty as a Reserve officer of the Army of the United States or who shall be discharged to accept a commission in the Army of the United States and whose active service as a commissioned officer shall terminate honorably, shall be entitled, without regard to any physical disqualification incurred, or having its inception, while on active duty in line of duty, to reappointment as warrant officer or to reenlistment in the grade held prior to such commissioned service, without loss of service or seniority and without regard to whether a vacancy exists in the grade of warrant officer or in the appropriate enlisted grade: Provided, That application for reappointment or reenlistment shall be made within 6 months after the termination of such commissioned service in each case: Provided further, That warrant officers and enlisted men of the Regular Army shall be entitled to count active commissioned service in the Army of the United States as warrant or enlisted service for all purposes.

SEC. 2. The act approved March 30, 1918 (40 Stat. 501), is hereby repealed.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

NATIONAL HIGHWAY IN THE REPUBLIC OF PANAMA

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 2163, to authorize an appropriation to meet such expenses as the President, in his discretion, may deem necessary to enable the United States to cooperate with the Republic of Panama in completing the construction of a national highway between Chorrera and Rio Hato, Republic of Panama, for defense purposes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I assume that this is desirable legislation, and I believe if the matter were brought up for consideration in any other way I might be constrained to be for it; but inasmuch as we have adopted a policy concerning the amounts which we should authorize on the Consent Calendar, and because this highway is to cost $1,500,000 or thereabouts, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

Mr. ANDREWS. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, may I say to the gentleman that this is merely an authorization. It is a part of the program for the defense of the Panama Canal. This is merely an authorization, and has nothing to do with an appropriation. It is a part of the program of defense.

Mr. WOLCOTT. As I said, I do not doubt that this is desirable legislation; but when the calendar was first called this session we announced the policy that we would object to any bills on the Consent Calendar which carried an authorization of over a million dollars. In keeping with this policy, and to keep faith with the other Members who have had bills on the calendar authorizing more than a million dollars, I am forced to submit this request.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOLCOTT. I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. MAY. This is rather an emergency matter. Of course, I do not like to use the term "emergency" very much, but arrangements have already been made with the Government of the Republic of Panama by which this construction can be done in the way of a national-defense program. If the construction is not authorized now it will be delayed over the season when it can be done successfully and done very much more cheaply.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I may say to the gentleman that the Committee on Military Affairs has the next call on Calendar Wednesday, and I believe the bill should be brought up and considered either on Calendar Wednesday or possibly by suspension of the rules. However, in keeping with the policy we announced when the calendar was first called, I am almost forced, although I regret to do so, to ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

Mr. MAY. I realize the gentleman has made that statement, and I agree thoroughly with him in the idea of sticking to it as far as possible; but the only thing that would happen on Calendar Wednesday would be some brief debate on the question. In this particular instance I believe the gentleman would be justified in waiving the policy he has heretofore announced, and I do not believe the gentleman would be subjected to criticism on account of it.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I am not afraid of the criticism, except that I believe we put this House in rather an embarrassing position because of the condition of the Treasury at the present time; if we have it go out to the country that the House is giving no consideration whatever to a bill authorizing the expenditure of over a million dollars. I do not care if no one wants to talk on the bill on Calendar Wednesday—and I surely would not object to it—but it seems to me we should give the Members an opportunity to talk on a bill which authorizes the expenditure of a million dollars.

Mr. MAY. May I suggest to the gentleman that this money is to be taken out of the appropriation that has already been made in connection with the military program for the Panama Canal, and it is not really a new appropriation.

Mr. WOLCOTT. The manner in which the money is to be raised is not as material as the question of whether we have given due consideration to the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan that the bill be passed over without prejudice?

There was no objection.

PROVISION FOR A DEPUTY CHIEF OF STAFF

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 2222, to provide for a Deputy Chief of Staff, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, may I ask whether or not this is the bill to which the committee has a committee amendment?

Mr. COSTELLO. I understand one of the members of the committee is going to offer an amendment to this bill.

Mr. ANDREWS. Then I shall withdraw my reservation until the amendment has been read.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. Speaker, would an objection lie if the Clerk proceeds to read an amendment which is hereafter offered to the bill?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will state that the gentleman may reserve his right to object or ask unanimous consent that the Clerk may report the amendment for the information of the House.

Mr. CHURCH. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the contemplated amendment may be read for the information of the House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the amendment will be read for the information of the House.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment proposed by Mr. HARTER to the committee amendment: Add a new section, as follows:

"Sec. 2. That the present incumbent of the position of President of the Mississippi River Commission shall, upon retirement from active service in the Army, be retired with the rank of major general and with the pay and allowances authorized by law for an officer on the retired list of such rank."

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. Speaker, I raise the point of order against the amendment that it is not germane.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will state that the amendment has only been read for the information of the House.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Then I reserve a point of order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is whether or not unanimous consent shall be given for the present consideration of the bill.

Mr. CHURCH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object—

Mr. ANDREWS. May I say to the gentleman that this is a very important bill from the standpoint of the War Department?

Mr. WADSWORTH. And it is a very good bill.

Mr. CHURCH. I know that the situation is unfortunate and while I am in favor of the bill, I do not like that kind of procedure. I understand no bill has ever been introduced for the purpose that the amendment covers and I do not like that kind of procedure.

Mr. COSTELLO. I may state to the gentleman that I do not believe the amendment is germane to this bill, and therefore the amendment will be ruled out on a point of order because it is not germane. However, the bill itself is of great importance to the War Department and they are very anxious to have the legislation passed, and I do not think consideration of the bill should be objected to.

Mr. CHURCH. I agree with the gentleman, but under the circumstances I feel constrained to object. I hope very much that the promoters of the amendment will withdraw the amendment and agree not to present an amendment of that kind.

Mr. THOMASON. I agree with the gentleman from Illinois except that we have no assurance that the point of order will be sustained.

Mr. CHURCH. Who is in charge of the amendment?

Mr. THOMASON. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. HARTER]. This is an important bill.

Mr. CHURCH. I shall feel constrained to object unless the gentleman from Ohio withdraws his amendment. We have not seen the amendment which was just read and I understand no bill has been introduced for that purpose.

Mr. COSTELLO. Will the gentleman yield for a parliamentary inquiry?

Mr. CHURCH. Yes; I yield for a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. COSTELLO. I would like to present a parliamentary inquiry to the Chair as to whether the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Ohio would be germane to this bill if offered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will state that that is not a proper subject for a parliamentary inquiry. The Chair will pass upon the question involved if unanimous consent is given for the present consideration of the bill and if the amendment is offered and if a point of order is advanced. The Chair will not indicate in advance what the ruling of the Chair will be.

Mr. COSTELLO. I might state to the gentleman that in looking at the rules I notice a footnote states that while a bill may be reported by a committee presenting different subjects, it is not in order to introduce in the House a new subject by way of amendment.

I do not think there is very much question about the fact that this amendment is subject to a point of order. The bill refers to the creation of a position in the War Department of Deputy Chief of Staff. It deals with one subject. The amendment provides for the promotion of an officer on retirement, which is an entirely different subject and has nothing to do with the subject matter of the bill. I do not believe that the Chair could do otherwise than sustain the point of order.

Mr. CHURCH. Mr. Speaker, may I ask the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. HARTER] to withdraw his amendment under the statement just made?

Mr. HARTER of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I may say to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CHURCH], in explanation of this amendment, that this amendment was considered by the House Military Affairs Committee. I bring it here to the floor as a committee amendment. The amendment is designed to give recognition to the services of Gen. Harley B. Ferguson, who is an officer of the Engineer Corps of the Army and who will retire on August 14 of this year. General Ferguson has had a long and enviable career as an officer of the United States Army. He has been the President of the Mississippi River Commission for the last several years, and largely through his efforts and the courage he displayed in adopting a bold policy in utilizing cut-offs and straightening the Mississippi River flood dangers and damage have largely been eliminated in the Mississippi Valley. Many Members of the House come from the Mississippi River Basin and the Ohio Valley, and they are familiar with the work that has been done by Gen. Harley B. Ferguson. This is a committee amendment. I do not feel that I have the right to withdraw it, if I was inclined to do so.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HARTER of Ohio. Yes.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, when I learned he was soon to retire, I placed in the Record a few days ago a complete statement of General Ferguson's service with the Army. It is a most remarkable record. When he graduated as second lieutenant, he went to Puerto Rico and participated in the Spanish-American War. He also participated in the Philippine Insurrection and in the Boxer Rebellion. On his return from China, he was placed in complete charge of the raising of the Maine. He received decorations for his services abroad during the World War. General Ferguson organized the industrial-preparedness program after the World War, for which he was cited by the War Department. Finally he came to us in the Mississippi Valley, and it was General Ferguson who was responsible for putting in the cut-offs on the Mississippi River that have prevented the floods in recent years. I can conceive of no member of the Army who would have dared to do what General Ferguson did in the Mississippi Valley. Undoubtedly it was a chance, but he had the courage to go through with what he thought was right, and the people of the valley will always feel indebted to him for his contribution.

Mr. HARTER of Ohio. The gentleman is quite correct.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HARTER of Ohio. Yes.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Speaker, my remarks in this instance will be directed more to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CHURCH] than to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. CHURCH. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will permit, I withdraw my request.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois withdraws his request. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the first paragraph of section 5 of the National Defense Act of June 3, 1916 (39 Stat. 166), as amended by the act of June 3, 1938 (52 Stat. 610), be, and the same is hereby, amended by inserting in line 4 of said paragraph, after the words "Chief of Staff", a comma followed by the words "the Deputy Chief of Staff" and a comma; by striking out the word "four" appearing in line 4 of said paragraph and inserting in lieu thereof the word "five"; and by striking out the word "eighty-eight" in line 6 of said paragraph and inserting in lieu thereof the words "one hundred and two."

Mr. HARTER of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. HARTER of Ohio: Add a new section as follows:

"Sec. 2. That the present incumbent of the position of president of the Mississippi River Commission shall, upon retirement from active service in the Army, be retired with the rank of major general and with the pay and allowances authorized by law for an officer on the retired list of such rank."

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order against the amendment that it is not germane.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman from Ohio desire to be heard on the point of order?

Mr. HARTER of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, nothing further than to say that this was regularly voted by the committee. It relates to a matter of the War Department, the Army. It is, in my opinion, germane to this particular bill which is under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. McCORMACK). The mere fact that this is a committee amendment in no way changes the parliamentary situation from that which would exist if an individual Member of the House offered the amendment. The rule of germaneness applies to a committee amendment just the same as to an amendment offered by a Member in his individual capacity.

The bill before the House relates to one subject. The proposed amendment relates to another subject. The bill before the House confines itself to one subject, and the amendment attempts to inject into the bill an entirely different subject from that which is contained in the bill pending before the House. In the opinion of the Chair the amendment is not germane to the pending bill, and for that reason the Chair sustains the point of order.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

AMENDING SECTION 5 OF ACT OF APRIL 3, 1939

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 6070, to amend section 5 of the act of April 3, 1939 (Public, No. 18, 76th Cong.).

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill go over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

CONSTRUCTION OF MEDICAL SCHOOL AT CARLISLE BARRACKS, PA.

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 6225, to authorize appropriation for the construction of a medical school building at Carlisle Barracks, Pa.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a Senate bill, S. 2353, be substituted for the House bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby authorized to be appropriated not to exceed $375,000 to be expended for the construction, rehabilitation, and installation at Carlisle Barracks, Pa., of a medical field service school and such utilities and appurtenances thereto as may be necessary.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

A House bill (H. R. 6225) was laid on the table.

RECEIVING STOLEN PROPERTY FROM THE MAILS

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 6037, to amend section 194 of an act entitled "An act to codify, revise, and amend the penal laws of the United States," approved March 4, 1909 (35 Stat. L. 1088).

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I wonder if some member of the Committee on the Judiciary would inform the House what the penalty is in existing law for receiving stolen property, not necessarily from the mails?

Mr. WALTER. A fine of $2,000 and 5 years' imprisonment.

Mr. WOLCOTT. This bill provides for a fine of $2,000 and 5 years' imprisonment for receiving stolen property, the property being stolen from the mails. What is the penalty for receiving stolen property, knowing it to have been stolen, but not stolen from the mail?

Mr. WALTER. The penalty is the same. This bill is necessitated by an unfortunate decision that was handed down in the third circuit, where a conviction was set aside because the Government could not prove that the man who had received the stolen property knowing it to have been stolen and knowing that it had been stolen from the mail. This merely amends the existing law to strike out "knowing" in the existing act.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I understand the act perfectly; so that the district attorney will not have to prove that the defendant knew it was stolen from the mail?

Mr. WALTER. Yes.

Mr. WOLCOTT. But he must prove, in any event, that the defendant knew it was stolen?

Mr. WALTER. That is correct.

Mr. WOLCOTT. There is no difference between receiving stolen property not stolen from the mail than receiving stolen property stolen from the mail?

Mr. WALTER. As I understand, it is the same.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 194 of the act to codify, revise, and amend the penal laws of the United States, approved March 4, 1909, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 18, sec. 317), be amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 194. Whoever shall steal, take, or abstract, or by fraud or deception obtain, from or out of any mail, post office, or station thereof, or other authorized depository for mail matter, or from a letter or mail carrier, any letter, postal card, package, bag, or mail, or shall abstract or remove from any such letter, package, bag, or mail, any article or thing contained therein, or shall secrete, embezzle, or destroy any such letter, postal card, package, bag, or mail, or any article or thing contained therein; or whoever shall steal, take, or abstract, or by fraud or deception obtain any letter, postal card, package, bag, or mail, which has been left for collection upon or adjacent to a collection box or other authorized depository of mail matter; or whoever shall buy, receive, or conceal, or aid in buying, receiving, or concealing, or shall unlawfully have in his possession, any letter, postal card, package, bag, or mail, or any article or thing contained therein, which has been so stolen, taken, embezzled or abstracted, as herein described, knowing the same to have been stolen, taken, embezzled, or abstracted; or whoever shall take any letter, postal card, or package out of any post office or station thereof, or out of any authorized depository for mail matter, or from any letter or mail carrier, or which has been in any post office or station thereof, or other authorized depository, or in the custody of any letter or mail carrier, before it has been delivered to the person to whom it was directed, with a design to obstruct the correspondence, or to pry into the business or secrets of another, or shall open, secrete, embezzle, or destroy the same, shall be fined not more than $2,000 or imprisoned not more than 5 years, or both."

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Speaker, I offer a committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment offered by Mr. WALTER: On page 1, in line 8, after the word "obtain", insert "or attempt so to obtain."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

AMENDING ACT AUTHORIZING THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES TO LOCATE, CONSTRUCT, AND OPERATE RAILROADS IN ALASKA

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 4868, to amend the act authorizing the President of the United States to locate, construct, and operate railroads in the Territory of Alaska, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

Mr. GREEN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I wonder if the gentleman really understands the purpose of this bill? I think upon a reading of it the gentleman probably would not make objection to it. The Senate has passed a similar bill.

Mr. WOLCOTT. If the gentleman will bear with me, we are very much better legislators than the Senate. I think we go into these matters more thoroughly than the Senate. They assume to be a policy-making body. We are a legislative-enacting body. We are very careful of the legislation which we pass.

Mr. GREEN. I may say that I have no special love for the other body.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Then let me say to the gentleman my reason for asking that this bill go over without prejudice is so that certain matters might be considered and, possibly, by amendment, the bill might be perfected.

As I read this bill, in the first place, it puts the Government in the hotel business.

Mr. GREEN. Yes; it provides—

Mr. WOLCOTT. Perhaps I might give the gentleman all of my reasons for objecting and then he can answer them all at one time. In the next place, there is no estimated cost of the value of the private property which the Government may purchase under the terms of the bill. Indirectly it authorizes an appropriation, although the report says it does not authorize an appropriation. On page 2, line 23, it provides that these payments are to be made out of revenues in the appropriation for the Alaska Railroad. It is a simple matter, of course, to increase the amount of the appropriation for the Alaska Railroad sufficiently to create the authorization to purchase this property. I think that the bill is designed primarily to bail out the Mount McKinley Tourist & Transportation Co., which has made a failure of operating these services. Surely, if private enterprise, under these conditions, cannot make a success of it, we know from our experience with the Government in business, the Government cannot do it. I am trying to protect the Government from having to make annual appropriations for the purpose of providing these services at the Mount McKinley National Park.

Mr. GREEN. The Government has spent huge sums in developing the Alaskan Railway and the Mount McKinley Park. There are not now in the park facilities to take care of tourists and the traveling public. It is believed that if a small hotel were placed there the revenues from it would be adequate—more than enough to pay its cost and the cost of payment to this transit company for its small investment. It is estimated that not more than $35,000 would be required to pay the transit company for its existing physical properties. It is believed that with tourist facilities, which are now sadly lacking, the expenditures already made by the Government would be utilized to better advantage and that the whole thing would be a paying proposition. If the gentleman insists, however, that the bill go over without prejudice I shall not object, but I think this is a very good bill and should be passed to safeguard the Government's investment already existing in the Mount McKinley National Park. I do not think it is at all a matter of bailing out the transportation company. It is an equitable and fair proposition and to the best interest of the Government and the American people to provide the intended public facilities, which are sorely needed and which private capital will not undertake. The Department of the Interior has approved the bill and the Bureau of the Budget has interposed no objection, provided new appropriation is not required, and, of course, none is contemplated. I hope the gentleman will not object to present consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan that the bill be passed over without prejudice?

There was no objection.

RETIREMENT OF EMPLOYEES OF THE ALASKA RAILROAD

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 2178, to amend sections 6 and 7 of the act entitled "An act for the retirement of employees of the Alaska Railroad, Territory of Alaska, who are citizens of the United States", approved June 29, 1936.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, can the gentleman from Georgia tell the House whether the Alaska Railroad is paying its way? How much if any does the Government contribute annually to maintain the Alaska Railroad?

Mr. RAMSPECK. The Alaska Railroad retirement system is similar to the Panama Canal system. It is a little different from the system which governs the retirement of employees in the continental United States, for the employees of the Alaska Railroad pay a higher deduction from their salaries, but by the same token receive a little higher annuity. Generally speaking, however, they are paying their way as is the case with employees in the other retirement systems.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I do not mean that, I mean is the railroad itself self-sustaining, or does the Government have to contribute to it?

Mr. RAMSPECK. What the Government contributes to the railroad has nothing to do with it. It is on the same basis as the civil-service retirement fund. In principle, the Government contributes a part and the employee a part. This bill, however, adds no particular cost. It does bring in a few employees who are employed by the Alaska Railroad.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I think the gentleman has not understood my point. My question probably has not very much to do with the retirement bill. I wanted to know whether the railroad receives enough revenue to sustain it, or whether the Government had to subsidize the operations of the road.

Mr. RAMSPECK. I did not understand the gentleman's question. I cannot answer the question because my committee has no jurisdiction over the railroad. The only jurisdiction my committee has is over the question of civil service and retirement as it affects these Government employees that are under civil service.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Further reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, can the gentleman point out the distinction between this bill and the next one on the calendar, H. R. 2642?

Mr. RAMSPECK. The next bill simply gives the employees who come under this law the right to name a beneficiary, the right to say who will receive the money due them in case of death. There is a similar provision in the civil service retirement law. It costs no money. It is simply a technical amendment to obviate the necessity of administration on the estate where a small amount is involved.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That sections 6 and 7 of the act entitled "An act for the retirement of employees of the Alaska Railroad, Territory of Alaska, who are citizens of the United States," approved June 29, 1936 (49 Stat. 2017), are hereby amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 6. The annuity of an employee retired under the provisions of this act shall be composed of—

"(1) A sum equal to $37.50 multiplied by the number of years of service, not to exceed 30 years, rendered (a) on the Alaska Railroad or (b) in the military or naval service of the United States in the Tropics or in Alaska; and

"(2) The annuity purchasable with the sum to the credit of the employee's individual account, including accrued interest thereon computed as prescribed in section 11 (a) hereof, according to the experience of the Alaska Railroad retirement and disability fund as may from time to time be set forth in tables of annuity values by the board of actuaries; and

"(3) Thirty dollars multiplied by the number of years of service rendered and not allowable under paragraph (1) hereof: Provided, That the number of years of service to be used in computing the allowance under paragraph (3) shall not exceed the difference between 30 and the number of allowable years of service under paragraph (1); and

"(4) Thirty-six dollars multiplied by the number of years' service rendered in the Territory of Alaska in the construction of the Alaska Railroad, either in the employ of the Alaska Engineering Commission and the Alaska Railroad or of either of them, between March 12, 1914, and July 1, 1923, plus the number of years' service, if any, rendered on the Isthmus of Panama either in the employ of the Isthmian Canal Commission or the Panama Railroad Co. between May 4, 1904, and April 1, 1914.

"In no case, however, shall the total annuity paid exclusive of that provided in paragraph (4) hereof, be less than an amount equal to the sum of—

"The average annual basic salary, pay, or compensation, not to exceed $2,000 per annum, received by the employee during any 5 consecutive years of allowable service at the option of the employee, multiplied by the number of years of service used in computing the annuity under paragraph (1) hereof, and divided by 40, and the average annual basic salary, pay, or compensation, not to exceed $1,600 per annum, received by the employee during any 5 consecutive years of allowable service at the option of the employee, multiplied by the number of years of service used in computing the annuity under paragraph (3) hereof, and divided by 40.

"The annuity granted under paragraphs (1), (3), and (4) of this section shall not exceed three-fourths of the average annual basic salary, pay, or compensation received by the employee during any 5 consecutive years of allowable service at the option of the employee.

"Any employee at the time of his retirement may elect to receive, in lieu of the life annuity herein described, an increased annuity of equivalent value which shall carry with it a proviso that no unexpended part of the principal upon the annuitant's death shall be returned. For the purposes of this act all periods of service shall be computed in accordance with section 7 hereof, and the annuity shall be fixed at the nearest multiple of 12.

"The term 'basic salary, pay, or compensation,' wherever used in this act, shall be so construed as to exclude from the operation of the act all bonuses, allowances, overtime pay, or salary, pay, or compensation given in addition to the base pay of the position as fixed by law or regulation.

"Sec. 7. Subject to the provisions of section 8, hereof, the service which shall form the basis for calculating the amount of any benefit provided in this act shall be computed from the date of original employment, whether as a classified or an unclassified employee, in the civil service of the United States or under the municipal government of the District of Columbia, including periods of service at different times and in one or more departments, branches, or independent offices of the Government and service in Alaska with the Alaska Engineering Commission and the Alaska Railroad, or of either of them, and service on the Isthmus of Panama with the Isthmian Canal Commission, the Panama Canal, or the Panama Railroad Co.; also periods of service performed overseas under authority of the United States and periods of honorable service in the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, or Coast Guard of the United States. In the case of an employee, however, who is eligible for and elects to receive a pension under any law, or retired pay on account of military or naval service, or compensation under the War Risk Insurance Act, the period of his military or naval service upon which such pension, retired pay, or compensation is based shall not be included, but nothing in this act shall be so construed as to affect in any manner his right to a pension, or to retired pay, or to compensation under the War Risk Insurance Act in addition to the annuity herein provided.

"In computing length of service for the purposes of this act all periods of separations from the service, and so much of any leave of absence without pay as may exceed 6 months in the aggregate in any calendar year, shall be excluded: Provided, That river-boat employees, who in the past have been, or in the future may be, employed during the navigation season under a working agreement, shall for the purposes of this act be considered in a leave-of-absence-without-pay status for the time prior and subsequent to the season of navigation during the calendar year in which employed.

"In determining the total periods of service upon which the allowances are to be computed under section 6 hereof, the fractional part of a month, if any, shall be eliminated from each respective total period."

With the following committee amendments:

Page 2, line 20, strike the word "Alaska" and insert in lieu thereof the word "Alaskan."

Page 4, line 18, strike the word "Alaska" and insert in lieu thereof the word "Alaskan."

The committee amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

RESERVE OFFICERS WITH CIVILIAN CONSERVATION CORPS

Mr. MAY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to return to Calendar No. 237, and for consideration of the bill (H. R. 6070) to amend section 5 of the act of April 3, 1939 (Public, No. 18, 76th Cong.).

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 5 of the act approved April 3, 1939 (Public, No. 18, 76th Cong.), is hereby amended by inserting after the comma in line 5 of the final proviso of that section the expression "other than for service with the Civilian Conservation Corps."

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

RETIREMENT OF EMPLOYEES OF ALASKA RAILROAD

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 2642, to amend the act entitled "An act for the retirement of employees of the Alaska Railroad, Territory of Alaska, who are citizens of the United States," approved June 29, 1936, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That subsection (c) of section 11 of the act entitled "An act for the retirement of employees of the Alaska Railroad, Territory of Alaska, who are citizens of the United States," approved June 29, 1936, is amended to read as follows:

"(c) In case an annuitant shall die without having received in annuities purchased by the employee's contributions as provided in (2) of section 6 of this act an amount equal to the total amount to his credit at time of retirement, the amount remaining to his credit and any accrued annuity shall be paid, upon the establishment of a valid claim therefor, in the following order of precedence:

"First, to the beneficiary or beneficiaries designated in writing by such annuitant and recorded on his individual account;

"Second, if there be no such beneficiary, to the duly appointed executor or administrator of the estate of such annuitant;

"Third, if there be no such beneficiary, or executor or administrator, payment may be made, after the expiration of 30 days from the date of the death of the annuitant, to such person or persons as may appear in the judgment of the Civil Service Commission to be legally entitled thereto, and such payment shall be a bar to recovery by any other person.

"In the case of an annuitant who has elected to receive an increased annuity as provided in section 6 of this act, the amount to be paid under the provisions of this subsection shall be only the accrued annuity."

Sec. 2. Subsection (d) of said section 11 is amended to read as follows:

"(d) In case an employee shall die without having attained eligibility for retirement or without having established a valid claim for annuity, the total amount of his deductions with interest thereon shall be paid, upon the establishment of a valid claim therefor, in the following order of precedence:

"First, to the beneficiary or beneficiaries designated in writing by such employee and recorded on his individual account;

"Second, if there be no such beneficiary, to the duly appointed executor or administrator of the estate of such employee;

"Third, if there be no such beneficiary or executor or administrator, payment may be made, after the expiration of 30 days from the date of the death of the employee, to such person or persons as may appear in the judgment of the Civil Service Commission to be legally entitled thereto, and such payment shall be a bar to recovery by any other person."

Sec. 3. Subsection (e) of said section 11 is amended to read as follows:

"(e) In case a former employee entitled to the return of the amount credited to his individual account shall become legally incompetent, the total amount due may be paid to a duly appointed guardian or committee of such former employee. If the amount of refund due such former employee does not exceed $1,000, and if there has been no demand upon the Civil Service Commission by a duly appointed guardian or committee, payment may be made, after the expiration of 30 days from date of separation from the service, to such person or persons, in the discretion of the Commission, who may have the care and custody of such former employee, and such payment shall be a bar to recovery by any other person."

Sec. 4. Subsection (f) of said section 11 is amended to read as follows:

"(f) Each employee or annuitant to whom this act applies may, under regulations prescribed by the Civil Service Commission, designate a beneficiary or beneficiaries to whom shall be paid, upon the death of the employee or annuitant any sum remaining to his credit (including any accrued annuity) under the provisions of this act."

Sec. 5. This act shall become effective as of the thirtieth day following the date of its enactment.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

CLASSIFICATION OF CERTAIN UNCLASSIFIED UNITED STATES EMPLOYEES

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 4190, to permit classification of certain unclassified employees of the United States by noncompetitive examination.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 7 of the act entitled "An act to regulate and improve the civil service of the United States," approved January 16, 1883, as amended (U. S. C., title 5, sec. 638), is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "Any laborer, having an unclassified status, who has completed not less than 5 years' satisfactory service in the employ of the United States, may, under such rules and regulations as the President may prescribe, be promoted to the position of classified laborer through noncompetitive examination."

With the following committee amendment:

After the word "status" and before the comma in line 7, insert the words "and having been appointed under the labor regulations."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

UNITED STATES COAST GUARD ACADEMY LIBRARY

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 4306, to make the United States Coast Guard Academy library a public depository for Government publications.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the library of the United States Coast Guard Academy, New London, Conn., is hereby constituted a designated depository of Government publications, and the Superintendent of Documents shall supply to such library one copy of each such publication, in the same form as supplied to other designated depositories.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

FEDERAL AID TO STATE FREE HIGHWAY BRIDGES

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 1109, to amend an act entitled "An act to aid the several States in making or for having made, certain toll bridges on the system of Federal-aid highways free bridges, and for other purposes," by providing that funds available under such act may be used to match regular and secondary Federal-aid road funds.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the act entitled "An act to aid the several States in making, or for having made, certain toll bridges on the system of Federal-aid highways free bridges, and for other purposes", approved August 14, 1937, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"That in the case of each and every State, or political subdivision or subdivisions thereof, which, prior to the date of approval of this act, shall have constructed or acquired any toll bridges on the approved system of Federal-aid highways, and which has caused or shall, prior to July 1, 1939, cause any such toll bridge or toll bridges to be made free, the Secretary of Agriculture shall be, and he is hereby, authorized to pay out of the regular and secondary Federal-aid road funds appropriated to such State not to exceed 50 percent of such amount as may be approved by the Secretary of Agriculture as the reasonable value or construction cost of any such bridge, whichever shall be least: Provided, That no payment of Federal funds shall be made on account of any such bridge which was not constructed in accordance with plans and specifications which would meet the standards required by the Secretary of Agriculture at the time such bridge was constructed, nor on account of any bridge the construction of which was completed prior to March 3, 1927: And provided further, That no such payment shall be made which will exceed 50 percent of the reasonable value or cost of the labor and materials which were actually incorporated in the construction of such bridge, excluding all costs of rights-of-way, property damages, and financing costs, whichever, value or cost, shall be least, and any amount so paid on account of any such bridge from regular Federal-aid road funds shall be used for matching unobligated regular Federal-aid road funds available to the State for expenditure in the improvement of highways on the system of Federal-aid highways, and any amount so paid on account of any such bridge from secondary Federal-aid road funds shall be used for matching unobligated secondary Federal-aid road funds available to the State for expenditure in the improvement of secondary or feeder roads."

With the following committee amendments:

Page 2, line 2, strike out "the date of approval of this act" and insert "July 1, 1941."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

Page 2, line 6, strike out "1939" and insert "1941."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

Page 3, after line 10, insert the following:

"Sec. 2. That section 10 of the Federal Aid Highway Act of 1938 is hereby amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 10. With the approval of the Secretary of Agriculture, not to exceed 1½ percent of the amount apportioned for any year to any State under the Federal Highway Act as amended and supplemented, except sections 3 and 23 thereof, shall hereafter be used with or without State funds for surveys, plans, engineering, and economic investigations of projects for future construction in such State, either on the Federal-aid highway system and extensions thereof or on secondary or feeder roads, or grade-crossing eliminations."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. WHITTINGTON: Page 2, line 7, strike out "Secretary of Agriculture" and insert in lieu thereof "Federal Works Administrator."

Page 3, lines 13 and 14, strike out "Secretary of Agriculture" and insert "Federal Works Administrator."

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Speaker, when this bill was reported by the Committee on Roads the jurisdiction of the Bureau of Roads was under the Secretary of Agriculture. Under one of the two reorganization programs which went into effect on July 1, the jurisdiction of the public roads is now in the Federal Works Administrator. The amendment I have offered is simply a perfecting amendment striking out the words "Secretary of Agriculture" and inserting the words "Federal Works Administrator," where they occur in the bill and the committee amendment.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WHITTINGTON. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I notice in the committee amendment that the Secretary of Agriculture must approve not to exceed 1½ percent of the amount apportioned for surveys, and so forth. Does the gentleman's amendment apply to that as well?

Mr. WHITTINGTON. There are three amendments in one. Wherever the words "Secretary of Agriculture" occur in section 2 constituting said amendment as well as in the previous section of the bill, they are stricken out and the words "Federal Works Administrator" inserted.

Mr. WOLCOTT. The gentleman's amendment applies to "Secretary of Agriculture" wherever it appears in the Committee amendment?

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Yes; in the committee amendment, and in the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. WHITTINGTON].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 2, lines 4 and 6, strike out the word "toll."
Page 2, line 19, strike out "1927" and insert "1924."

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the amendments may be reported again. I could not catch them.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. WHITTINGTON]?

There was no objection.

The Case amendment was again read by the Clerk.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Speaker, I make a point of order against the amendment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state his point of order.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. There are two subject matters embraced in the amendment. One deals with toll bridges, and the other deals with the time of completion of construction of bridges, which are two entirely different subject matters.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman from South Dakota desire to be heard?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, those were offered as separate amendments.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the Chair understand that the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. CASE] offers the amendments as separate amendments?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Yes. I sent them to the desk as separate amendments.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the Clerk will report the first amendment offered by the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. CASE].

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. CASE of South Dakota:
Page 2, lines 4 and 6, strike out the word "toll."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. WHITTINGTON] make a point of order?

Mr. WHITTINGTON. No.

WHY DISCRIMINATE AGAINST STATES THAT BUILT FREE BRIDGES?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, the purpose of this amendment is plain, and those who have the bill before them can tell readily what it means.

The bill before us provides that the States may secure credit on their highway-fund allotment for toll bridges that they may have purchased or made available, provided that those toll bridges are on a Federal-aid highway system, and provided further that those bridges meet the plans and specifications set up by the Secretary of Agriculture for the construction of bridges at the time the bridge was constructed. It seems to me simple justice that the States that have built bridges and paid for the entire cost of them should be entitled to credit for them in the grant of Federal-aid highway funds regardless of whether they set up a toll system or not.

Indeed, one might say in justice that the States that put up the money originally and paid for their bridges are even more entitled to credit for one-half the cost of those bridges than the States that set up toll bridges, collected tolls, and then, when the bridge is partially or fully paid for by tolls, sell a half interest to the Government.

My amendment simply strikes out the word "toll" so as to provide that wherever a State has built a bridge on the regular Federal-aid highway system and paid for it and made it available free of tolls, that it can have credit for one-half the cost, which is the regular allocation of the Federal-aid funds. The bill proposes to do this for toll bridges and for toll bridges only. Why penalize the States that made the bridge free in the first instance?

Mr. DOWELL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. I yield to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. DOWELL. In other words, the gentleman's amendment will have the Government pay to the State one-half the cost of the bridges already constructed, instead of giving the money to the States for building roads. Is that true?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. The bill itself proposes to do that, but limits it to toll bridges.

Mr. DOWELL. Yes, it limits it to toll bridges; but the gentleman's amendment, as I understand, means that this money will be turned over to the State for bridges that have been built in the past.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. That is true under the bill for toll bridges built since 1927.

Mr. DOWELL. Instead of putting the money into the construction of roads.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Not any more than is proposed for toll bridges built in the past.

Mr. DOWELL. That is what it will do.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. The gentleman has not read the bill fully, because the bill states that this credit of 50 percent shall be used for road purposes. This does not give additional money to the States; it only proposes, in effect, to credit them in matching with 50 percent of the cost of toll bridges. My amendment does not change the bill in one particular as to what the bill does in road building. It simply provides that the States which have built bridges and paid for them are just as much entitled to credit for matching purposes as the States which constructed toll bridges.

Mr. DOWELL. But keep in mind that the amount that is given under this bill as it now stands for toll bridges is rather limited, and the committee recommended this bill only because it was limited to certain bridges that were toll bridges, instead of opening it up to all the bridges that have been built by the various States.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. My amendment does not give the State any more credit than the 50 percent provided in the bill.

Mr. DOWELL. But on every bridge that has been built by the State.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Provided that that bridge meets the specifications set up by the Department. There certainly is more justice in crediting the States that have built these bridges and paid for them than there is in saying "If you build a bridge and finance it partly by tolls on the public we will come in and give you credit for 50 percent."

I decline to yield further on that particular question, Mr. Speaker.

I submit to the Members of the House as a matter of simple justice that this credit for 50 percent of the cost of the major bridges on the Federal highway system which meet the specifications and have been paid for in full by the States, should be given to the highway funds of those States as well as to those whose bridges were built by tolls.

I ask your support of the amendment.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

As a member of the Committee on Roads for many years and thoroughly familiar with Federal-highway legislation, I say that this amendment is ill-timed and that its effect will be to disrupt the Federal-aid highway program, whether the gentleman intends to do that or not. It is wholly foreign to the purpose of the bill under consideration and should be voted down unanimously.

Under the Federal Aid Highway Act the Federal Government matches funds for the construction of bridges just as it does for the construction of roads on the Federal-aid highway system. The bill under consideration was passed in 1937 to free toll bridges in order to induce the States to acquire toll bridges and make them free on Federal-aid highways. It authorized the State to use whatever money was expended up to 50 percent of the reasonable value in acquiring toll bridges to match Federal aid for future construction.

The gentleman's amendment would strike out the word "toll" and would destroy the very purpose Congress had in view when it passed the original amendment to the Highway Act which authorized the States to use the money up to 50 percent of the value of labor and material in the bridge they expected to buy or construct so as to free toll bridges, to match Federal aid. In other words, the purpose of the bill passed in 1937 was that the money spent for all toll bridges constructed or acquired that thereafter were made free might be utilized in matching Federal aid for the construction of future bridges and future highways, on the Federal-aid system.

With all deference to the gentleman, this bill was considered in the Senate, and this bill was considered by the Committee on Roads of the House. There were hearings for several days. The gentleman did not present his amendment and it was not considered by the committee. If it had been presented it should and, I believe would have been promptly rejected, because it is absolutely foreign to the purpose of the bill and would defeat the purpose Congress had in passing the bill, which was to encourage States to eliminate toll bridges on Federal-aid highways.

The original act authorized the States, if they acquired or constructed toll bridges prior to July 1, 1939, to match Federal money with the amounts they expended in acquiring or constructing those toll bridges, up to 50 percent of the value of the bridge as stated.

The bill under consideration extends the time for freeing toll bridges until 1941, and it enables the freeing of bridges on secondary roads as well as on primary roads, for the House will keep in mind that Congress now makes an appropriation which the States have to match for the construction of secondary roads as well as primary roads.

In all the circumstances I respectfully submit that the gentleman's amendment is wholly foreign to the purposes of this bill; that the States have, heretofore and prior to the act of August 14, 1937, in an effort to encourage the freeing of toll bridges, been required to match dollar for dollar all Federal-aid money on the primary system and all Federal money on the secondary system. The purpose in the case of toll bridges was to provide that these bridges be freed and that the States might use 50 percent of the money they expended, not to exceed 50 percent of the reasonable value of the bridge, in matching Federal aid.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WHITTINGTON. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. I merely wish to point out that in striking out "toll bridges," you have not eliminated toll bridges from the bill. It would still read "any bridges" and therefore toll bridges would be included. So it does not destroy the purpose of the bill.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. It does destroy the purpose of the bill, because the Federal Government makes a contribution of Federal-aid highway funds in order to provide roads that are to be used by the public. The people of the United States furnish the money. It is appropriated out of the Public Treasury and the States and the local communities have to match it. If you eliminate the matching of Federal aid on all bridges, you would practically eliminate the matching of Federal aid, and I respectfully submit that if the Congress stands for Federal aid and for the continuance of such program, then the amendment is ill-advised and ill-considered and should be voted down promptly.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. CASE].

The amendment was rejected.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

The title was amended.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. ANDERSON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the Record and to include therein an editorial from the Washington Star.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

THE CONSENT CALENDAR

AUTHORIZATION OF CERTAIN OFFICERS OF THE UNITED SERVICE TO MAKE ARRESTS

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 5409, to authorize certain officers of the United States Indian Service to make arrests in certain cases, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. RAYBURN). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from South Dakota?

There was no objection.

CLAIMS OF YAKIMA TRIBES OF INDIANS

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 2390, conferring jurisdiction upon the United States Court of Claims to hear, examine, adjudicate, and render final judgment on any and all claims which the Yakima Indian Tribes may have against the United States, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, I object to the consideration of the bill.

Mr. HILL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman reserve his objection?

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, the committee has paid no attention to the letter of the Attorney General, but for one time I wish to congratulate some members of the Committee on Indian Affairs, as they have presented minority views on an Indian bill. I promised members of the minority who are unavoidably absent I would object to the consideration of the bill. Letters from the Attorney General and General Accounting Office clearly indicate, if this bill passes in its present form, the Government will be unable to properly defend itself before the Court of Claims. I insist this Congress should accept the recommendations of those who must look after the Government's interest before the court. I therefore object to the consideration of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Objection is heard.

MOTORBOAT ACT

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 6273) to amend certain sections of the Motor Boat Act of June 9, 1910, the act of Congress approved June 7, 1897, the act of Congress approved February 8, 1895, and section 4412 of the Revised Statutes, with respect to boats equipped with detachable motors and other motorboats.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill go over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

UNITED STATES COAST GUARD ACADEMY

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 6442) to amend an act entitled "An act to authorize the establishment of a permanent instruction staff at the United States Coast Guard Academy," approved April 16, 1937.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 7 of the act of April 16, 1937 (50 Stat. 67; U. S. C., 1934 ed., Supp. IV, title 14, sec. 15h), is hereby amended by striking out the first paragraph and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"In addition to the Advisory Board, there shall be appointed in January of each year a Board of Visitors to the Coast Guard Academy, which shall consist of two Senators and three Members of the House of Representatives, appointed by the chairmen of the committees of the Senate and the House of Representatives, respectively, having cognizance of legislation pertaining to the Coast Guard Academy, the chairmen of said committees being ex officio members of the Board, and of one Senator and two Members of the House of Representatives appointed by the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives, respectively: Provided, That whenever a member or an ex officio member is unable to attend the annual meeting as provided in paragraph (b) of this section another member may be appointed in his stead in the manner as herein provided but without restriction as to month of appointment."

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

STANOLIND PIPE LINE CO.

The Clerk called the bill (S. 504) to provide a right-of-way.

Mr. PLUMLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill go over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

NATIONAL DEFENSE

The Clerk called the bill (S. 2096) to amend section 4a of the act entitled "An act for making further and more effectual provision for the national defense, and for other purposes," approved June 3, 1916, as amended.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 4a of the act entitled "An act for making further and more effectual provision for the national defense, and for other purposes," approved June 3, 1916, as amended (41 Stat. 761), be, and the same is hereby, amended by striking out the last clause thereof, reading as follows: "and shall take rank next below second lieutenants and among themselves according to the dates of their respective warrants" and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "and all warrant officers, including those of the Army Mine Planter Service, shall take rank next below second lieutenants and among themselves according to the dates of their respective warrants: Provided, That for command purposes aboard their vessels, warrant officers of the Army Mine Planter Service shall take rank among themselves, in the order, master, chief engineer, first mate, assistant engineer, second mate, each according to the date of appointment to such rating."

With the following committee amendment:

Page 2, line 5, strike out the words "for command purposes."

The committee amendment was agreed to and the bill as amended was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

GEORGE ROGERS CLARK NATIONAL MEMORIAL

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 6528) to provide for the creation of the George Rogers Clark National Memorial, in the State of Indiana and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That when title to the George Rogers Clark Memorial, in Vincennes, Ind., on the site of Fort Sackville, including such real and personal property in connection therewith, as may be designated by the Secretary of the Interior as necessary or desirable for national memorial purposes shall have been vested in the United States without cost, the same shall be called The George Rogers Clark National Memorial.

Sec. 2. That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized, in his discretion, to accept on behalf of the United States title to such property within 1 mile of the said memorial, after establishment thereof, as may be donated for addition to said memorial and upon acceptance thereof the same shall be a part of the said memorial.

Sec. 3. That the administration, protection, and development of the aforesaid national memorial shall be exercised under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior by the National Park Service, subject to the provisions of the act of August 25, 1916 (39 Stat. 535), entitled "An act to establish a National Park Service, and for other purposes," as amended.

Sec. 4. All acts or parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act are hereby repealed to the extent of such inconsistency.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GOLDEN GATE BRIDGE AND HIGHWAY DISTRICT

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 2168), to authorize the Secretary of War to make contracts for the supplying of water to the Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That power and authority are hereby granted to the Secretary of War to make and enter into contracts, agreements, or other arrangements, whereby the Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District will receive water through the water-pipe lines on the military reservation of the Presidio of San Francisco, Calif., for use at the toll plaza of the Golden Gate Bridge. Such contracts, agreements, or other arrangements, will be for periods of not more than 5 years each, and shall provide that the water received through the Government's lines shall be metered and delivered at the water mains on the military reservation. Water so delivered shall be replaced in kind from the water mains of the city of San Francisco, Calif., or other acceptable source, at the expense of the Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District, by an equal quantity of water plus 5 percent additional to cover wastage. Any expense incident to the extension of the lines or additional equipment necessary to bring the water to the toll plaza must be met by the Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District.

With the following committee amendment:

Page 2, line 9, after the word "extension", insert the words "and maintenance."

The committee amendment was agreed to and the bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; was read the third time and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to authorize the Secretary of War to make contracts, agreements, or other arrangements for the supplying of water to the Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District."

A motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

GRANTING TO CALIFORNIA JURISDICTION OVER CERTAIN RIGHTS-OF-WAY

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 2967) to grant to the State of California a retrocession of jurisdiction over certain rights-of-way granted to the State of California over a certain road about to be constructed in the Presidio of San Francisco Military Reservation.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby granted to the State of California a retrocession of jurisdiction over the rights-of-way covered by a certain grant from the Secretary of War to the State of California and the Department of Public Works of the State of California, dated February 14, 1938, to extend, maintain, and operate a State road, across the Presidio of San Francisco Military Reservation, as heretofore or hereafter amended by the Secretary of War, subject to all of the terms and conditions contained in said permit as so granted and any amendments thereof as aforesaid. The land and premises over which such retrocession of jurisdiction is hereby granted shall be the whole of the rights-of-way so granted in said permit and any amendments thereof throughout their entire length and width and for the entire distance granted therein.

SEC. 2. Should the United States assume exclusive control and management of said road as provided in said permit and any amendments thereof, the jurisdiction herein retroceded shall be suspended and revert in the United States for the duration of such control and management. Whenever the State of California shall cease to occupy said rights-of-way and land for the purpose authorized in said permit and any amendments thereof, then the same, including all jurisdiction thereover, shall revert to the United States.

SEC. 3. The retrocession of jurisdiction herein granted shall not become effective until the same is accepted by the Legislative of the State of California.

With the following committee amendments:

On page 1, lines 6 and 7, delete the words "and the Department of Public Works of the State of California"; line 7, strike out the following language, "February 14, 1938" and insert in lieu thereof "July 27, 1938"; line 8, after the word "road", add a comma and the following language "known as the Funston Avenue approach."

On page 2, line 20, strike out the word "Legislative" and insert in lieu thereof the word "Legislature."

The committee amendments were agreed to and the bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

PROBATIONARY APPOINTMENTS, REGULAR ARMY

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 3654) to provide for probationary appointments of officers in the Regular Army.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. BARDEN. Mr. Speaker, I object.

AMENDING FLOOD-CONTROL ACTS

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 6634) amending previous flood-control acts and authorizing certain preliminary examinations and surveys for flood control, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 2 of the Flood Control Act of August 28, 1937, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"That the Secretary of War is hereby authorized to allot not to exceed $300,000 from any appropriations heretofore or hereafter made for any one fiscal year for flood control, for removing accumulated snags and other debris and clearing channels in navigable streams and tributaries thereof when in the opinion of the Chief of Engineers such work is advisable in the interest of flood control: Provided, That not more than $25,000 shall be allotted for this purpose for any single tributary from the appropriations for any one fiscal year."

SEC. 2. Funds heretofore or hereafter appropriated for construction and maintenance of flood-control works by the War Department shall be available for expenditure by the War Department in making examinations and surveys for flood control heretofore or hereafter authorized, or in preparing reports in review thereof as authorized by law, in addition to funds heretofore authorized to be expended for such purposes by the War Department.

SEC. 3. That section 2 of the River and Harbor Act of June 20, 1938, is hereby made applicable to authorized works of flood control.

SEC. 4. The flood-control plan for the Ohio River Basin, authorized in section 2 of the act of Congress June 28, 1938 (Public, No. 761, 75th Cong.), shall include the Muskingum River Valley dams and reservoirs as set forth in the official plan of the Muskingum Watershed Conservancy District and the provisions of section 2 of the said act shall apply thereto: Provided, however, That the reimbursements in connection with the Muskingum project shall be made from funds heretofore or hereafter appropriated and shall not exceed actual expenditures made by the Muskingum Watershed Conservancy District that are deemed reasonable by the Secretary of War and the Chief of Engineers nor include any expenditures for the relocation of highways nor any funds provided by the State of Ohio nor by any State or Federal agency other than the Muskingum Watershed Conservancy District.

SEC. 5. The Secretary of War is hereby authorized and directed to cause to be performed under the supervision of the Chief of Engineers preliminary examinations and surveys for flood control, including floods aggravated by or due to tidal effect, at the following-named localities, and the Secretary of Agriculture is authorized and directed to cause preliminary examinations and surveys for run-off and water-flow retardation and soil-erosion prevention on the watersheds of such localities; the cost thereof to be paid from appropriations heretofore or hereafter made for such purposes: Provided, That the surveys authorized to be performed under the direction of the Secretary of War as well as all duties performed by the Chief of Engineers under the direction of the Secretary of War shall be functions of the Engineer Corps, United States Army, and its head, to be administered under the direction of the Secretary of War and the supervision of the Chief of Engineers except as otherwise specifically provided by Congress: Provided, That no preliminary examination, survey, project, or estimate for new works other than those designated in this or some prior act or joint resolution shall be made: Provided further, That after the regular or formal reports made as required by law on any examination, survey, project, or work under way or proposed, are submitted, no supplemental or additional report or estimate shall be made unless authorized by law: And provided further, That the Government shall not be deemed to have entered upon any project for the improvement of any waterway or harbor mentioned in this act until the project for the proposed work shall have been adopted by law:

With the following committee amendments:

On page 2, line 17, strike out the figure "2" and insert the figure "4."

On page 3, line 6, change the period to a colon and insert the following: "And provided further, That the Muskingum Watershed Conservancy District is hereby relieved of any obligation to maintain and operate the dams."

On page 4, line 12, after the name "Coolidge", insert the word "Bridge."

On page 5, between lines 2 and 3, add a new paragraph, as follows:

"Kissimmee River, Fla., including regulation and stabilization of water levels."

On page 5, line 12, strike out the words "Crow Creek" and insert "both creeks having the name Crow."

The committee amendments were agreed to.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Speaker, I offer two amendments, which are at the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. WHITTINGTON: Page 5, after line 15, insert a new paragraph, as follows:

"Mississinewa River and its tributaries, Ind. "Pium River and its tributaries, Carroll County, Ill."

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment offered by Mr. WHITTINGTON: Section 4, page 2, at the end of line 23, insert the following: "shall include, in addition to payments to landowners, the reasonable expenses of acquiring lands, easements, or rights-of-way heretofore transferred to the United States, as well as those hereafter transferred, and the reasonable expenditures made in acquiring lands or rights-of-way transferred to railroads or other utilities in connection with the relocation of such facilities other than highways. Such reimbursements."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. LUDLOW. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. LUDLOW: On page 2, after the word "department" in line 12, insert a new section, as follows:

"Sec. 3. Section 3 of the act entitled 'An act authorizing the construction of certain public works on rivers and harbors for flood control, and for other purposes', approved June 22, 1936, as amended, is amended by adding before the period at the end thereof a colon and the following: 'And provided further, That if, after investigation, the President finds that any city or town is, by reason of its financial condition, unable to comply with the requirements of this section as to local cooperation, he is hereby authorized to waive such requirements on any individual levee or flood-wall project not to exceed 50 percent of the estimated costs of the lands, easements, and rights-of-way.'

"The first paragraph of section 2 of the act entitled 'An act authorizing the construction of certain public works on rivers and harbors for flood control, and for other purposes', approved June 28, 1938, is amended to read as follows:

"That section 3 of the act of June 22, 1936 (Public, No. 738, 74th Cong.), as heretofore amended, as herein further modified, and as amended after June 28, 1938, shall apply to all flood-control projects, except as otherwise specifically provided by law."

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order against the amendment that it is not germane to the bill under consideration, and, second, it is not germane to any section of the bill under consideration.

Mr. LUDLOW. Will the gentleman withhold the point of order until I can make a statement?

Mr. WHITTINGTON. I will withhold the point of order for the gentleman to make a statement. I reserve the point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. LUDLOW. Mr. Speaker, I am offering this amendment on behalf of my colleague from Indiana, Representative EUGENE B. CROWE, who is unavoidably away from the Capitol at this time.

In explanation of the purpose of the amendment, Mr. CROWE has written me a letter which, with the indulgence of the House, I would like to read for the information of the House upon this subject.

Mr. Crowe's district borders on the Ohio River, and in the past it has suffered much damage from floods. Mr. Crowe has been very zealous in trying to secure relief for cities in his district where floods have been, and are likely to be, a major affliction. No other Member of this House has done more to promote sound and adequate flood-control measures than Mr. Crowe, and this amendment is further evidence of his desire to serve his constituents in the flood areas of Indiana, as well as the victims of flood ravages in many other sections of the country, where the towns and cities are not able to qualify under existing laws.

Mr. Crowe's letter explaining the amendment now before the House follows:

JULY 1, 1939.

Hon. LOUIS LUDLOW,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR CONGRESSMAN: Because of my necessary absence from Washington, I desire to have you introduce H. R. 6809 as an amendment to Mr. WHITTINGTON's flood-control bill.

I am introducing this in the interest of cities which are unable to provide all the expense of lands, easements, and rights-of-way for levees and water walls.

I have, however, in mind the city of Jeffersonville, Ind., which is utterly unable to provide all of these funds. Two-fifths of that city is Government-owned property, housing millions of dollars of value, which should be considered by the membership of the House.

This is not a new departure. The 1937 act carried such provision which was taken advantage of by only several cities.

I submit Jeffersonville, Ind., is utterly unable to provide all this expense and cannot take advantage of allotment for Federal funds now provided to start their levees unless this amendment I am offering becomes written into law.

Furthermore, when levees are constructed across the river at Louisville, Ky., the next floods pouring more water in Jeffersonville because of the levees across the river, will entirely wash Jeffersonville away.

I urge acceptance of this amendment.

Sincerely,

EUGENE B. CROWE.

Mr. Speaker, that explains the purpose of the amendment.

In respect to the point of order, I am not so sure but what it is well made. However, I should like to submit to the Chair this observation: That under the very title of this bill it is an act to amend previously enacted flood-control laws. The purpose of the amendment I submit is to amend two previously enacted flood-control laws. I would like, therefore, to call the Chair's attention to the fact that this amendment is merely an extension of the central thought and purpose of the bill introduced by the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. WHITTINGTON], and therefore may well be held to be relevant and germane.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that, as I said, this amendment is not germane to the bill. The bill undertakes to amend the Flood Control Act of 1937 and the Flood Control Act of 1938. They are perfecting amendments. The gentleman's amendment is an amendment to the act of 1936, that is in no way involved in this bill, as it relates to local contributions for levees and flood walls.

So I make the point of order that the amendment is not germane to the bill under consideration or any section thereof.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair is ready to rule.

Mr. DOWELL. Mr. Speaker, the amendment submitted by the gentleman from Indiana merely asks to relieve the city from the payment of what is due under the law and is in no way germane to the question before the House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. RAYBURN). The Chair is ready to rule.

The bill before the House is a bill to amend the Flood Control Act of 1937. That act had one purpose. The Flood Control Act of 1936 had another purpose. The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. LUDLOW] offers an amendment as an amendment to the Flood Control Act of 1936. The amendment clearly is not germane to this bill, and the Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. WHITTINGTON. Mr. Speaker, under the leave just granted to extend my remarks, I should like to say with respect to the merits of the amendment introduced by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. LUDLOW], at the request of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. CROWE], that the proposed amendment is really an exact copy of the bill, H. R. 6809, introduced by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. CROWE]. This bill authorizes the President to waive up to 50 percent of the local contribution. Such a provision obtained in the Emergency Flood Control Act of August 28, 1937. It was inserted in the Senate and agreed to in conference.

It has been the uniform policy of the Committee on Flood Control to sponsor a definite yardstick for local contributions. Under existing law, all local interests are required to provide lands and rights-of-way for flood walls and for levees. The proposed amendment would make indefinite a definite yardstick. I am familiar with the purpose of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. CROWE]. There are Government depots and large Army investments at Jeffersonville, Ind. I am sympathetic with a more liberal contribution on the part of the Government to protect Federal property. I would have opposed the amendment to the pending bill on its merits. It has not been considered by the War Department; it has not been reported on by the Chief of Engineers. Only matters that have been favorably reported on by the Chief of Engineers are included in the pending bill.

In this connection it is proper for me to say that the amendment that I introduced and which was first adopted to section 4 of the pending bill in connection with the Muskingum project, was recommended by the Chief of Engineers. It is really a perfecting amendment.

I may also state that the two amendments for preliminary examinations and surveys are covered by bills introduced by Members after the reporting of the bill under consideration, but the Chief of Engineers has approved the projects for preliminary examinations and surveys of the said streams.

In this connection I think it might be well for me to make a general statement with respect to the bill. It is really an omnibus flood-control bill with perfecting amendments to existing law, and, as I have said, it provides for no additional appropriations.

The pending bill carries no additional authorizations and was unanimously reported by the Committee on Flood Control. It embraces clarifying and perfecting amendments to existing law and contains authorizations for preliminary examinations and surveys of streams on which bills have been introduced with favorable reports by the Department of War and the Department of Agriculture.

Many bills are introduced by Members of Congress for preliminary examinations and surveys. These bills are referred to the Chief of Engineers of the War Department and to the Department of Agriculture. Instead of reporting and considering the individual bills it is the policy of the committee to combine all of the bills into an omnibus bill. All preliminary examinations and surveys that have been favorably reported by the Department of War and the Department of Agriculture during the present session are included in section 5 of the pending bill.

ANALYSIS OF THE BILL

SECTION 1

Section 2 of the Flood Control Act of August 28, 1937, authorized the expenditure of $300,000 annually for removing accumulated snags and other debris, and clearing channels in navigable streams and tributaries, from any appropriations for flood control. The language of the section, however, was such that the amount of $25,000, which is the maximum amount that could be spent on any single stream, had to be expended during the fiscal year in which it was allotted.

On account of weather conditions in some cases the expenditure could not be made in the fiscal year in which the allocation was made. Section 1 of the pending bill is, therefore, an amendment to section 2 of August 28, 1937, to remove the technical objections that required the allotment to be expended during the fiscal year prior to an additional allotment being made. Again, it often happens that there are accumulated snags and other debris and channels that should be cleared in more than one tributary of a navigable river, in which improvements have been made for flood control. Section 1 of the bill, therefore, clarifies section 2 of the act of 1937, but nevertheless, it limits the expenditure to $25,000 on any one tributary, as provided in the original act.

SECTION 2

Section 2 of the Flood Control Act of June 28, 1938, authorized the sum of $5,000,000 to be appropriated and expended by the Department of War, and an equal amount was authorized to be expended by the Department of Agriculture. A similar provision obtained in the act of June 22, 1936. River and harbor annual appropriation bills are so worded that all river and harbor funds are available for examinations and surveys. Annual flood-control appropriations are not so worded, and, therefore, section 2 of the pending bill is needed.

SECTION 3

Section 2 of the River and Harbor Act of June 20, 1938, authorizes the Secretary of War to exchange land or other property of the Government for private property in the execution of river and harbor improvements. Such authority should be extended to flood-control improvements, as it might prove desirable and in the interest of economy in certain cases to make such exchanges.

SECTION 4

The Flood Control Act of June 28, 1938, provided that the costs of dams and reservoir projects, including the maintenance and operation thereof, should be borne by the Federal Government. This provision was made applicable to the reservoirs authorized in the flood control acts of 1936. Section 4 of the act of June 28, 1938, authorized the Secretary of War to reimburse the Muskingum watershed conservancy district in Ohio, a sum not to exceed the actual expenditures made by it in acquiring lands, easements, and rights-of-way for reservoirs in the Muskingum River Valley, not to exceed $4,500,000. It now develops that the reimbursements will aggregate about $6,500,000 rather than $4,500,000. These reservoirs have been constructed by the Chief of Engineers. The State of Ohio appropriated $2,000,000 as disclosed by the hearings to assist the district in purchasing lands and rights-of-way. The State of Ohio also agreed to relocate the highways and has expended something like $4,000,000 for the purpose of relocating highways. It is estimated that the total cost of relocating highways will be around $9,000,000.

The Muskingum project was originally begun as a Public Works project, although allocations have been made to the project out of relief and emergency funds. It is felt that the Muskingum project is entitled to the same consideration accorded to other projects in the Ohio River Valley.

H. R. 4291 was introduced for the purpose of bringing the Muskingum dams and reservoirs within the provisions of the act of June 28, 1938, and it was referred to the Department of War. The Department of War submitted a favorable report but suggested certain amendments. These amendments were adopted by the committee. Section 4 of the pending bill is, therefore, favorably recommended by the Department of War and the Bureau of the Budget. The favorable recommendation of the Secretary of War and the Bureau of the Budget is embraced in the report of the committee on the pending bill.

SECTION 5

As has been stated, this section contains the preliminary examination and survey bills that have been introduced and favorably reported by the Chief of Engineers. All of the items embraced in the bill were recommended by the Chief of Engineers. Hearings were conducted and printed and they are available to the Members of Congress.

NO MAJOR FLOODS IN 1939

While there have been destructive floods, including the New England hurricane and flood in the fall of 1938, and the Ohio River floods in the early spring of 1939, and while in recent days there have been floods along the Tallahatchie River in Mississippi and along the tributaries of the Ohio River in Kentucky, there have been no major floods in the United States since the approval of the Flood Control Act of June 28, 1938, authorizing the appropriation of $375,000,000 for flood-control works over the period of 5 years ending June 30, 1944.

Inasmuch as appropriations have just been made under the act of June 28, 1938, the committee felt that while there are a number of worthy projects on which favorable reports have been submitted by the Chief of Engineers up to the time the bill was reported on June 7, 1939, nevertheless the objective of the committee during the present session has been to cooperate to secure adequate appropriations for works already authorized rather than report additional authorizations. The committee plans to report an authorization bill during the next session of the Congress. This bill will embrace worthy projects, including a project on the Connecticut River at East Hartford, Conn., including projects for the protection of Adams and North Adams, Mass., Bennington, Vt., Hoosic Falls, N. Y., and including a project on the White River, Ark. Inasmuch as other works have been authorized in the general areas mentioned, it is believed that the emergency is not such as to require a separate authorization bill during this session covering said projects. Moreover, there are other areas where the flood problem is equally serious that are entitled to consideration.

FLOOD CONTROL ACT OF JUNE 28, 1938

The Flood Control Act of June 28, 1938 was not signed by the President until after the Congress adjourned. Prior to the present session no appropriations have been made for the execution of the projects authorized in the said act. This act reaffirms the national policy declared in the act of 1936. No new agencies have been established, but existing agencies familiar with the problems involved, that have devoted years to studies and investigations, as well as to construction of works, are utilized in the policy declared in the act of 1938 as they were in the act of 1936.

There is a definite plan for each great drainage basin of the country. All of the projects authorized will fit into that plan. Authorizations were made to initiate the plans, but each project authorized will fit into the comprehensive plan approved. Funds cannot be diverted from one drainage basin to another; they must be spent where they are authorized or they cannot be spent at all.

Authorizations are made for local protective improvements, especially along the Ohio River and for reservoirs along the principal headwater drainage basins of the country. It is contemplated that priority projects will have first consideration.

The Department of War and the Department of Agriculture has cooperated; their work has been coordinated; there has been no conflict.

Under the terms of the act of 1938 local interests will provide the rights-of-way for levees and river walls, but the Federal Government pays the entire cost of reservoirs for flood control. They will be constructed in the order of their priority as selected by the Chief of Engineers. I invite the attention of the members to the report of the committee on the pending bill. As I have stated, the hearings were printed and are available to the Members.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to return to Calendar No. 249, H. R. 6442, to authorize the establishment of a permanent instruction staff at the United States Coast Guard Academy, to vacate the proceedings by which the bill was passed, and to substitute in lieu of the House bill, an identical Senate bill, S. 2503.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 7 of the act of April 16, 1937 (50 Stat. 67; U. S. C., 1934 ed., Supp. IV, title 14, sec. 15h), is hereby amended by striking out the first paragraph and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"In addition to the Advisory Board, there shall be appointed in January of each year a Board of Visitors to the Coast Guard Academy, which shall consist of two Senators and three Members of the House of Representatives, appointed by the chairman of the committees of the Senate and the House of Representatives, respectively, having cognizance of legislation pertaining to the Coast Guard Academy, the chairmen of said committees being ex officio members of the Board, and of one Senator and two Members of the House of Representatives appointed by the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives, respectively: Provided, That whenever a member or an ex officio member is unable to attend the annual meeting as provided in paragraph (b) of this section another member may be appointed in his stead in the manner as herein provided but without restriction as to month of appointment."

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

By unanimous consent, the proceedings by which the bill H. R. 6442 was passed were vacated and the bill was laid on the table.

WENATCHEE NATIONAL FOREST

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 5747, to authorize the addition of certain lands to the Wenatchee National Forest.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That any of the following-described lands which are found by the Secretary of Agriculture to be chiefly valuable for national-forest purposes may be exchanged under the provisions of the act entitled "An act to consolidate national forest lands," approved March 20, 1922, as amended, and upon acceptance of title therefor shall become parts of the Wenatchee National Forest: Township 25 north, range 21 east, Willamette meridian, section 5; section 6, north half. Township 26 north, range 21 east, Willamette meridian, sections 1 to 8, inclusive; section 17, west half; sections 18 and 19; section 20, west half; section 29, west half; sections 30 and 31. Township 27 north, range 21 east, Willamette meridian, sections 19 to 36, inclusive.

SEC. 2. All public lands within the areas described in section 1 are hereby added to the Wenatchee National Forest and shall hereafter become subject to all laws and regulations applicable to national forests. The addition of such lands shall not affect any entry or vested right under the public-land laws initiated prior to the passage of this act.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

KANIKSU NATIONAL FOREST

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 2752, to include within the Kaniksu National Forest certain lands owned or in course of acquisition by the United States.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That all lands of the United States situated within the area hereinafter described, including those acquired, or in course of acquisition, under the provisions of the National Industrial Recovery Act, approved June 16, 1933 (48 Stat. 195), the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act, approved April 8, 1935 (49 Stat. 115), or the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act, approved July 22, 1937 (50 Stat. 522), are hereby added to and made parts of the Kaniksu National Forest, Wash., and shall hereafter be subject to the rules and regulations applicable to national-forest lands, but claims, entries, filings, or appropriations under the public-lands laws, or special provisions included in conveyances of title to the United States, valid and subsisting at the date of this act and thereafter legally maintained, shall not be affected by this act.

SEC. 2. Any of the lands described in the first section of this act which are privately owned may be accepted in exchange by the Secretary of the Interior under the provisions of the act entitled, "An act to consolidate national-forest lands", approved March 20, 1922, as amended (U. S. C., title 16, secs. 495, 496). All such lands so accepted in exchange shall thereupon be added to and made a part of the Kaniksu National Forest in the State of Washington and shall thereafter be administered under the laws and regulations relating to the national forests.

With the following committee amendments:

Page 2, line 23, add a comma after the word "half."

Page 3, line 9, strike out all of the line after the semicolon; strike out all of line 10; line 11 is a continuation of line 9 and not a new paragraph.

Page 3, line 16, following the word "inclusive" change the period to a semicolon and add "township 34 north, range 40 east."

Page 4, line 25, following the word "half" insert a comma.

Page 8, line 7, insert a comma after the word "half."

Page 8, line 16, insert a comma after the word "half."

Page 9, line 2, insert a comma before the word "and"; on the same line strike out the words "section 11."

Page 9, line 3, between the number "4" and the semicolon insert the following "section 11"; on the same line insert a comma after the word "half."

Page 9, line 20, insert a comma after the word "half."

The committee amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EQUALIZATION OF LETTER CARRIERS

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 2001, for the equalization of letter carriers.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill may be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

TO AMEND CIVILIAN CONSERVATION CORPS ACT

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 2990, to amend the act entitled "An act to establish a Civilian Conservation Corps, and for other purposes," approved June 28, 1937, as amended.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. MOSER. Mr. Speaker, I object.

AMENDMENT OF AGRICULTURAL ADJUSTMENT ACT OF 1938

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 6538, to amend the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938.

Mr. BEAM. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the author of the bill state what it does?

Mr. COOLEY. This bill was introduced by the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. CHAPMAN], to whom I yield to answer the gentleman's question.

Mr. CHAPMAN. Mr. Speaker, it might be said that this is one of a series of bills which have for their purpose the amendment of the tobacco sections of the Agricultural Adjustment Act.

Mr. BEAM. It applies only to tobacco?

Mr. CHAPMAN. The gentleman is correct. These four bills which appear on the calendar in sequence come as the result of conferences that have been held over the last 5 or 6 months between representatives of the tobacco growers of all the major tobacco-producing areas of the United States, officials of the Department of Agriculture, and Members of Congress who represent tobacco sections. They represent the consensus of opinion of those interested in the tobacco program.

Mr. SCHULTE. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, what does the bill do? The gentleman has not yet told us what it does.

Mr. CHAPMAN. This first bill prohibits the holding of more than one referendum on one crop of tobacco. For example, last fall a referendum was held and the quotas were agreed to and the growers proceeded to plant their crops. This bill makes it impossible to call another referendum after the crops have already been set out.

Mr. SCHULTE. Are the other bills of similar character?

Mr. CHAPMAN. The other bills amend different sections of the act, but they constitute the program that is supported by those interested in tobacco. I will explain them as we come to them.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That subsection (b) of section 312 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended, is amended by striking out the period at the end of the last sentence and inserting in lieu thereof a comma and the following: "nor for any marketing year for which a marketing quota was proclaimed pursuant to the provisions of subsection (a) of this section."

AMENDMENT OF AGRICULTURAL ADJUSTMENT ACT OF 1938

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 6539, to amend the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That subsection (a) of section 312 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended, is amended by striking out the expression "on the fifteenth day of November of any calendar year" and the commas immediately preceding and following said expression.

With the following committee amendment:

At the end of line 7, change the period to a semicolon and add the following new wording: "and by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: 'The amount of the national marketing quota so proclaimed may, not later than December 31, be increased by not more than 10 percent if the Secretary determines that such increase is necessary in order to meet market demands.'"

The committee amendment was agreed to.

AMENDMENT OF AGRICULTURAL ADJUSTMENT ACT OF 1938

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 6540, to amend the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 313 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended, is amended by addition of the following new subsection:

"(g) Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, the Secretary on the basis of average yield per acre of tobacco for the State during the 5 years last preceding the year in which the national marketing quota is proclaimed, adjusted for abnormal conditions of production, may convert the State marketing quota into a State acreage allotment, and allot the same through the local committees among farms on the basis of the factors set forth in subsection (b), using past acreage (harvested and diverted) in lieu of the past marketing of tobacco; and the Secretary on the basis of the national average yield during the same period, similarly adjusted, may also convert into an acreage allotment the amount reserved from the national quota pursuant to the provisions of subsection (c), and on the basis of the factors set forth in subsection (c) and the past tobacco experience of the farm operator, allot the same through the local committees among farms on which no tobacco was produced during the last 5 years. Except for farms last mentioned or a farm operated, controlled, or directed by a person who also operates, controls, or directs another farm on which tobacco is produced, the farm-acreage allotment shall be increased by the smaller of (1) 20 percent of such allotment or (2) the percentage by which the normal yield of such allotment (as determined through the local committees in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary) is less than 3,200 pounds in the case of flue-cured tobacco, and 2,400 pounds in the case of other kinds of tobacco. The actual production of the acreage allotment established for a farm pursuant to this subsection shall be the amount of the farm marketing quota. If any amount of tobacco shall be marketed as having been produced on the acreage allotment for any farm which in fact was produced on a different farm, the acreage allotments next established for both such farms shall be reduced by that percentage which such amount was of the respective farm marketing quota, except that such reduction for any such farm shall not be made if the Secretary through the local committees finds that no person connected with such farm caused, aided, or acquiesced in such marketing; and if proof of the disposition of any amount of tobacco is not furnished as required by the Secretary, the acreage allotment next established for the farm on which such tobacco is produced shall be reduced by a percentage similarly computed."

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. COOLEY: On page 2, in line 21, following the word "tobacco", change the period to a semicolon and add the following: "Provided, That the normal yield of the estimated number of acres so added to farm acreage allotments in any State shall be considered as a part of the State marketing quota in applying the provision of subsection (a)."

Mr. COOLEY. Mr. Speaker, this amendment is offered not as a committee amendment nor as an amendment agreed to or approved by Congressmen representing districts in which tobacco is grown who have heretofore considered and approved the provisions of the four bills on this calendar amending the tobacco section of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, but is offered by me at the suggestion of officials of the Department of Agriculture.

The bill now under consideration changes the small-grower provision in existing law. This change in the small-grower provision was approved by those of us who have worked on these bills. As has been stated by the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. CHAPMAN], these bills represent the considered judgment of many Members of Congress representing tobacco districts.

The proviso in subsection 313 (a) of the present act was intended to apply to the total allotment for each State. Under the present wording of H. R. 6540 the increase for small growers would be in addition to the minimum allotment of 75 percent of the 1937 production which is fixed by the proviso. With the change provided by the amendment I am offering, the proviso will continue to apply to the total allotment, including the increase for small growers, just as it did in the act as approved in 1938.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COOLEY. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. May I say to the gentleman I have a high regard for the legislation proposed by the tobacco bloc. I want to know with reference to this particular amendment, will it increase the State quota for tobacco acreage?

Mr. COOLEY. It will permit an increase in State allotments to the extent that may be necessary to take care of the little growers. In other words, rather than have a limitation of a certain percentage of the State quota set apart, and have that turn out to be inadequate, what we want to do is protect the little grower who produces less than 3,200 pounds of flue-cured or 2,400 pounds of burley tobacco, and with this new provision the little grower can be taken care of.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. I join with the gentleman in his effort to take care of the small growers. They are entitled to consideration.

Mr. BARDEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COOLEY. I yield to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. BARDEN. Where did the gentleman say the amendment came from?

Mr. COOLEY. It is offered at the suggestion of officials of the Department of Agriculture.

Mr. BARDEN. Was the amendment discussed by the committee?

Mr. COOLEY. No. This is an amendment I am offering in my own right.

Mr. BARDEN. How much does this amendment change the conclusions reached by us?

Mr. COOLEY. I am sure that the gentleman knows that the bill now under consideration changes the little-grower provision, and I am sure that the gentleman will recall that the present law provides that no State can be reduced more than 75 percent of its 1937 production. I understand that under existing law allotments made to little growers are taken into consideration in arriving at the minimum of 75 percent of 1937 production, below which no State can be reduced.

Now that we are about to change the little-grower provision, the amendment I am offering will permit the Department to take into consideration allotments made to the little growers under the new provision in arriving at the minimum of 75 percent of the 1937 production of any State. I understand that unless this amendment is adopted the Department will not be able to take into consideration allotments made to little growers under this new provision. It seems only fair that allotments made to little growers should be taken into consideration by the Department in fixing State quotas, and I therefore hope that this amendment will be adopted.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. COOLEY].

The amendment was agreed to.

AMENDMENT OF AGRICULTURAL ADJUSTMENT ACT OF 1938

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 6541, to amend the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 314 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended, is amended by striking out the first sentence of said section and inserting in lieu thereof the following new sentence: "The marketing of any tobacco in excess of the marketing quota for the farm on which the tobacco is produced shall be subject to a penalty of 10 cents per pound in the case of flue-cured, Maryland, or Burley tobacco and 5 cents per pound in the case of all other kinds of tobacco."

EXTENSION OF BOUNDARIES OF HOT SPRINGS NATIONAL PARK, ARK.

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 3409, to amend the act of June 15, 1936 (49 Stat. 1516), authorizing the extension of the boundaries of the Hot Springs National Park, in the State of Arkansas, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the proviso in the act of June 15, 1936 (49 Stat. 1516), reading as follows: "Provided, That the lands hereinabove described may be acquired within funds already appropriated and at a cost not to exceed $15,000", is hereby repealed, and the said act of June 15, 1936, is hereby further amended by the addition thereto of the following new sections:

"Sec. 2. That there is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any funds in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of not to exceed $8,000 to supplement funds in the amount of $15,000 heretofore made available for the purchase of the lands described in section 1 hereof.

"Sec. 3. The Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized, in his discretion, to accept on behalf of the United States donations of lands or interests in land within the city limits of Hot Springs, Ark., the title to such lands or interests in land to be satisfactory to said Secretary. Upon the acquisition of such lands or interests in land, they shall become a part of the Hot Springs National Park and shall be subject to all laws and regulations applicable thereto."

With the following committee amendment:

Page 2, after "Sec. 2", strike out the balance of line 1 and all of lines 2 and 3 and insert the following: "That there is hereby authorized to be used not to exceed $8,000 of the unexpended balance allotted from the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act for 1935 for the acquisition of certain property for addition to Yosemite National Park."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

CLEVELAND NATIONAL FOREST, CALIF.

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 168, to add to the Cleveland National Forest, Calif., certain contiguous lands of the United States which can be most effectively and economically protected and administered as parts of said national forest.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That subject to any valid subsisting rights which hitherto have been established and hereafter are maintained under any of the land laws of the United States, the lands herein-after described hereby are added to and made parts of the Cleveland National Forest and hereafter shall be subject to all laws, rules, and regulations applicable to the national forests:

Township 15 south, range 6 east, San Bernardino meridian: Lots 3 and 4, section 7; lots 1 and 2, section 18.

Township 8 south, range 6 west, San Bernardino meridian: Sections 2, 11, and 14, exclusive of the parts thereof within the boundaries of the Santa Margarita grant.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GOVERNMENT LOSSES IN SHIPMENT ACT

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 6614, to amend the Government Losses in Shipment Act.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the second proviso of section 3 of the Government Losses in Shipment Act, approved July 8, 1937 (50 Stat. 480; U. S. C., 1934 ed., Supp. IV, title 5, sec. 134b), is hereby amended to read as follows: "Provided further, That the fund shall be available for the replacement of any loss or destruction of, or damage to, valuables shipped by or on behalf of the Public Debt Service of the Treasury Department prior to the effective date of this amendment, the replacement of which was chargeable against the securities trust fund established under authority of the indefinite appropriation 'Expenses of loans, act of September 24, 1917, as amended and extended (U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 31, secs. 760, 761); and the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to transfer on the books of the Treasury Department the amount standing to the credit of the securities trust fund and credit the same to the fund."

Sec. 2. The Government Losses in Shipment Act (50 Stat. 479; U. S. C., 1934 ed., Supp. IV, title 5, secs. 134-134h; title 31, secs. 528, 738a), is hereby amended by adding the following sections to the end of section 3 thereof:

"Sec. 3a. All losses or destruction of, or damage to, internal revenue or other stamps, United States securities, or other obligations of the United States, and funds, occurring heretofore or hereafter, but not prior to February 4, 1935, while such stamps, securities, obligations, or funds were in the custody or possession of, or charged to, the Post Office Department or Postal Service while it was acting as agent for, or on behalf of, the Treasury Department for the sale of such stamps, securities, or obligations and for the collection of such funds, irrespective of the manner in which such loss, destruction, or damage occurred, shall be replaced out of the fund under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe: Provided, however, That no postmaster, Navy mail clerk, or assistant Navy mail clerk having the custody or possession of such stamps, securities, obligations, or funds at the time of the loss, destruction, or damage shall be relieved of any liability to the United States or receive credit in his accounts for such loss, destruction, or damage under the provisions of the act of March 17, 1882, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 39, sec. 49), until the Postmaster General and the Secretary of the Treasury have jointly determined that such loss, destruction, or damage resulted from no fault or negligence on the part of such postmaster, Navy mail clerk, or assistant Navy mail clerk.

"Sec. 3b. The Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to execute and deliver, on behalf of the United States, such binding agreements of indemnity as he may deem necessary and proper to enable the United States to obtain the replacement of any instrument or document received by the United States or any agent of the United States in his official capacity which, after having been so received, became lost, destroyed, or so mutilated as to impair its value: Provided, however, That no such agreement of indemnity shall operate to obligate the United States in any case in which the obligee named therein makes any payment or delivery not required by law on the original of the instrument or document covered thereby. The fund shall be available for the payment of any obligation arising out of any agreement executed by the Secretary of the Treasury under this section."

Sec. 3. Section 7 (a) of the Government Losses in Shipment Act (50 Stat. 480; U. S. C., 1934 ed., Supp. IV, title 5, sec. 134f (a)), is hereby amended to read as follows:

"(a) The term 'valuables' means any articles or things or representatives of value in which the United States has any interest, or in connection with which it has any obligation or responsibility, direct or indirect, and which are declared to be valuables within the meaning of this act by the Secretary of the Treasury. No articles or things shall be declared to be valuables by the Secretary of the Treasury unless he determines that replacement thereof in accordance with the procedure established herein, in the event of loss, destruction, or damage in the course of shipment, would be in the public interest. The term 'United States' as used in this subsection and in section 3b means the United States, its executive departments, independent establishments, and agencies, including wholly owned corporations, and officers and employees of any of the foregoing while acting in their official capacity."

Sec. 4. So much of section 8 (b) (4) of the Government Losses in Shipment Act (50 Stat. 482; U. S. C., 1934 ed., Supp. IV, title 31, sec. 738a (b) (4)), as precedes the proviso is hereby amended to read as follows:

"(4) if the owner or holder is the United States or an officer or employee thereof in his official capacity, a State, the District of Columbia, a Territory or possession of the United States, including the Commonwealth of the Philippine Islands, a municipal corporation or political subdivision of any of the foregoing, a corporation the whole of whose capital is owned by the United States, a foreign government, or a Federal Reserve bank:"

Sec. 5. Section 9 (b) (1) of the Government Losses in Shipment Act (50 Stat. 483; U. S. C., 1934 ed., Supp. IV, title 31, sec. 528 (b) (1)), is hereby amended by changing the phrase included within the parentheses to read as follows: "including the Postal Service when carrying mail for any officer, employee, agent, or agency of the United States when performing services in connection with an official function of the United States, but not including the Postal Service when otherwise acting solely in its capacity as a public carrier of the mail."

Sec. 6. So much of section 9 (b) (5) of the Government Losses in Shipment Act (50 Stat. 483; U. S. C., 1934 ed., Supp. IV, title 31, sec. 528 (b) (5)), as precedes the proviso is hereby amended to read as follows:

"(5) if the owner or holder is the United States or an officer or employee thereof in his official capacity, a State, the District of Columbia, a Territory or possession of the United States, including the Commonwealth of the Philippine Islands, a municipal corporation or political subdivision of any of the foregoing, a corporation the whole of whose capital is owned by the United States, a foreign government, or a Federal Reserve bank:"

With the following committee amendment:

Page 6, after line 8, insert a new section, as follows:

"Sec. 7. Section 9 (f) of the Government Losses in Shipment Act (50 Stat. 484; U. S. C., 1934 ed., Supp. IV, title 31, sec. 528 (f)), is hereby amended to read as follows:

"(f) The term 'original' check wherever used in this section means any check, warrant, or other order for the payment of money, payable upon demand and not bearing interest, drawn by a duly authorized officer or agent of the United States, the District of Columbia, or the District Unemployment Compensation Board, on their behalf against an account or funds of the United States, the District of Columbia, or the District Unemployment Compensation Board, whether upon a bank or upon the Treasurer or other paying officer of the United States, but does not include money, coins, or currency of the United States nor instruments issued by any corporation or other entity owned or controlled by the United States, whether in whole or in part, against such corporation's or entity's own funds; as used in subsection (d) of this section it means such an instrument drawn by a duly authorized officer or employee of the Post Office Department."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read a third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

MOTORBOAT ACT, 1939

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 6039, to amend laws for preventing collisions of vessels, to regulate equipment of certain motorboats on the navigable waters of the United States, and for other purposes.

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill may be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BLAND]?

There was no objection.

DEPORTATION OF ALIENS ENGAGING IN ESPIONAGE OR SABOTAGE, ALIEN CRIMINALS, AND OTHER UNDESIRABLE ALIENS

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 6724, to provide for the prompt deportation of aliens engaging in espionage or sabotage, alien criminals, and other undesirable aliens.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. GEYER of California. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the author of the bill just what is taken in by the phrase "other undesirable aliens"?

Mr. POAGE. The author of the bill, the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. STARNES], is not here, but I may say to the gentleman that this bill simply provides that we will automatically issue an order of deportation against any alien who has admitted in writing or who has been convicted of espionage or sabotage for a foreign government in the United States since his entry into the United States, or who has been convicted of a violation of or conspiracy to violate any narcotic law of the United States, or who has been lawfully committed to a public or private institution as a habitual user of drugs in the United States.

Mr. GEYER of California. That is all it takes in?

Mr. POAGE. Yes.

Mrs. O'DAY. And it is not retroactive.

Mr. POAGE. No; it is not retroactive.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That an alien who entered the United States either from a foreign territory or an insular possession, either before or after the passage of this act, shall be promptly deported in the manner provided in sections 19 and 20 of the Immigration Act of February 5, 1917, as amended, regardless of when he entered, if he—

(1) Has admitted in writing that he has engaged in, or been convicted of, espionage or sabotage for a foreign government since entry into the United States; or

(2) Has at any time after entry been convicted of a violation of, or conspiracy to violate, any narcotic law of the United States, or of any State, Territory, insular possession, or of the District of Columbia; or

(3) Has been lawfully committed to a public or private institution as a habitual user of narcotic drugs.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

UNION CHURCH OF THE CANAL ZONE

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 4781, to incorporate the Union Church of the Canal Zone.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill as follows:

Whereas the Union Church of the Canal Zone is an unincorporated evangelical religious organization which has established and maintained union churches at various points in the Canal Zone since its organization in 1914, succeeding in that year separate union churches which had been maintained for a number of years previously; and

Whereas it has parsonages and church buildings at the following points, to wit: Balboa, Pedro Miguel, Gatun, and Colon; and

Whereas the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, a corporation of the State of New York, and the boards of various cooperating churches in the United States desiring to make provision for worship by the adherents of their respective denominations who from time to time reside temporarily on the Isthmus of Panama and who do not desire to sever their denominational ties in the United States have contributed toward the establishment of the Union Church of the Canal Zone; and

Whereas the said Union Church of the Canal Zone is not related to any of such denominations in the way of ecclesiastical subordination or subjection thereto; and

Whereas it is desired to insure the continuance of the work in which the said Union Church of the Canal Zone has been engaged: Therefore

Be it enacted, etc.:

OBJECT AND PURPOSE OF THE CORPORATION

SEC. 3. The object and purpose of the corporation shall be to continue in corporate form The Union Church of the Canal Zone. Its activities shall be interdenominational and its teachings evangelical.

MEMBERSHIP

SEC. 4. The membership of The Union Church of the Canal Zone shall consist of persons admitted to membership in any local church thereof, either through the said members' own connection with an evangelical denomination in the United States, or as may be otherwise provided in the constitution and bylaws established in accordance with this act.

CHURCH ORGANIZATION

SEC. 5. (a) There shall be (1) a general council which, except as otherwise provided in this act, shall exercise the corporate powers and have general control over matters common to all local churches; (2) a board of trustees which shall hold for the use of the membership of The Union Church all property and property rights of The Union Church, subject to proper orders of the general council or the membership of the corporation; and (3) a local council for each of the local churches.

(b) The constitution and bylaws authorized to be established by this act (1) shall prescribe the number, qualifications, the method of selection and the terms of office of members of the general council, the board of trustees, and the local councils: Provided, That the board of trustees thereafter selected shall consist of not more than 19 persons and not less than 9, all of whom shall be citizens of the United States: Provided further, That each of the local churches shall elect at least 1 member of the board of trustees, the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America shall elect or appoint 4 members, and the general council shall elect the other members, if any; (2) shall specify the officers of the said councils and board and prescribe the methods of their selection, the terms of office, and their respective duties and responsibilities: And provided further, That the local councils shall, with the approval of the general council, select their own pastors who shall be citizens of the United States and shall be entitled to all the privileges of employees of the Panama Canal; (3) shall prescribe the duties and delimit the jurisdiction of the local councils; and (4) shall determine the relationship between The Union Church of the Canal Zone as represented by the general council and board of trustees, and the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America and the various denominational boards.

COMPLETION OF ORGANIZATION

SEC. 6. The persons specifically named in section 1 shall constitute the first board of trustees, and the members of the general or executive council in office the date this act becomes effective with such changes as may be made in accordance with the constitution and bylaws of the existing unincorporated Union Church shall constitute the general council, and the members of both shall continue in office until their successors are elected in accordance with the constitution and bylaws adopted by the incorporators.

With the following committee amendment:

Page 5, line 20, after the word "and" strike out the remainder of line 20 and all of line 21 and insert "shall be entitled to receive such privileges of employees of the Panama Canal as the Governor of the Panama Canal may grant."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. COSTELLO: On page 4, line 8, after the words "shall be", strike out the remainder of line 8 and all of line 9 and insert in lieu thereof the following: "determined in the constitution and bylaws established under this act."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I offer a further amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. COSTELLO: On page 5, in line 25, after the word "councils", strike out the words "and (4)" and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"(4) shall determine the nature of the activities and teachings of the Union Church of the Canal Zone; and (5)."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

FEDERAL SURPLUS COMMODITIES CORPORATION

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 5681, to authorize the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation to purchase and distribute surplus products of the fishing industry.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the funds transferred by the Secretary of Agriculture to the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation to carry out the provisions of clause (2) of section 32 of the act of August 24, 1935 (49 Stat. 774), as amended, may also be used by such Corporation for the purpose of diverting surplus fish (including shellfish) and the products thereof from the normal channels of trade and commerce by acquiring them and providing for their distribution through Federal, State, and private relief channels. The provisions of law relating to the acquisition of materials or supplies for the United States shall not apply to the acquisition of commodities under this act.

With the following committee amendment:

"That any part of the funds transferred by the Secretary of Agriculture to the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation created under and to carry out the provisions of section 32 of the act of August 24, 1935 (49 Stat. 774), as amended, may also be used by such Corporation for the purpose of diverting surplus fishery products (including fish, shellfish, crustacea, and similar forms of aquatic life and byproducts thereof) from the normal channels of trade and commerce by acquiring them and providing for their distribution through Federal, State, and private relief channels: Provided, That none of the funds made available to the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation under this act shall be used to purchase any of the commodities designated in this act which may have been produced in any foreign country. The provisions of law relating to the acquisition of materials or supplies for the United States shall not apply to the acquisition of commodities under this act."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

RETIREMENT OF OFFICERS AND EMPLOYEES, LIGHTHOUSE SERVICE

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 6747, relating to the retirement of employees to whom the provisions of section 6 of the act approved June 20, 1918 (40 Stat. 608; U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 33, sec. 763), as amended, apply.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That any officer or employee to whom section 6 of the act approved June 20, 1918 (40 Stat. 608; U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 33, sec. 763), as amended or supplemented, applies at the date of this act, who shall reach the age of 64 years prior to July 1, 1940, or whose position to which he is now appointed may be abolished or discontinued prior to July 1, 1940, may be retired on an annuity computed in the manner provided in said section of the act of June 20, 1918: Provided, That any such officer or employee shall have been in the service of the Government not less than 30 years.

With the following committee amendments:

Page 1, line 6, after the word "applies," strike out "at the date of this act," and insert "on June 30, 1939";

Page 1, line 9, after the word "may," insert "in the discretion of the head of the executive department."

The committee amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PROCUREMENT, WITHOUT ADVERTISING, OF CERTAIN AIRCRAFT PARTS

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 1018, to authorize the procurement, without advertising, of certain aircraft parts and instruments or aeronautical accessories, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That whenever proposals are invited for the furnishing of aircraft parts or instruments or aeronautical accessories for the War Department, the character of which or the ingredients thereof are of such a nature that the interests of the public service would be injured by publicly divulging them, the Chief of the Air Corps is authorized to purchase such aircraft parts or instruments or aeronautical accessories in such manner as he may deem most economical and efficient: Provided, That this act will not be construed as in any way amending the act of July 2, 1926 (44 Stat. 780), or as authorizing the open-market purchase of airplanes for purposes other than as provided in that act. All laws and parts of laws which are inconsistent herewith or in conflict with the provisions hereof are hereby repealed.

With the following committee amendments:

On page 1, line 8, after the word "purchase", insert "without advertising."

On page 2, line 5, after the word "Act", change the period to a semicolon and insert: "And provided further, That no purchase shall be made under this act until the Secretary of War shall have certified that a secret order is necessary, and only then after submitting the proposal to three reputable concerns for their respective bids."

The committee amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

UNION PACIFIC RAILROAD CO.

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 1307, authorizing the Secretary of War to grant a revocable license to the Union Pacific Railroad Co. to maintain certain railroad trackage on the Fort Leavenworth Military Reservation.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War (hereinafter referred to as the Secretary) is authorized to grant to the Union Pacific Railroad Co. and its successors in interest a license to maintain, operate, repair, renew, and reconstruct, at its own expense, upon the Fort Leavenworth Military Reservation such railroad trackage as, in the opinion of the Secretary, will not conflict with the use of such reservation for any governmental purpose: Provided, however, That nothing herein, or in such license, shall be construed as relieving said railroad company of compliance with any of the provisions of the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended, or as it may hereafter be amended. Any license so granted shall (1) be revocable at the will of the Secretary, (2) provide that the Secretary may, in lieu of revoking such license, require the grantee to relocate any such trackage for the purpose of preventing such trackage from interfering with the use of such reservation for governmental purposes, and (3) provide that the privileges granted thereby shall be exercised subject to such rules and regulations as the Secretary, or the commanding officer at such reservation with the approval of the Secretary, may prescribe in the interests of maintenance of good order, sanitation, discipline, public safety, and the interests of the United States.

AMENDMENT OF THE CIVIL SERVICE RETIREMENT ACT

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 281, to amend further the Civil Service Retirement Act, approved May 29, 1930.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. SCHULTE. I object, Mr. Speaker.

PURCHASE OF EQUIPMENT AND SUPPLIES FOR EXPERIMENTAL AND TEST PURPOSES

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 1020, to authorize the purchase of equipment and supplies for experimental and test purposes.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War may, at his discretion, purchase abroad or in the United States, with or without competition, by contract or otherwise, such ordnance, signal, and chemical-warfare equipment, supplies, parts, accessories, or designs thereof, as may be necessary in his judgment for experimental or test purposes in the development of the best kind of equipment and supplies required for the national defense.

With the following committee amendment:

Page 1, line 10, after the word "defense", insert the following: "Nothing herein contained shall be construed to waive or alter the provisions of Revised Statutes, section 3709, when purchases are made in quantity."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

UMATILLA INDIAN RESERVATION, OREG.

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 4540, authorizing the restoration to tribal ownership of certain lands upon the Umatilla Indian Reservation, Oreg., and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized in his discretion to restore to tribal ownership the undisposed-of surplus lands of the Umatilla Indian Reservation, Oreg., heretofore opened to entry or other form of disposal under the public-land laws: Provided, That restoration shall be subject to any existing valid rights.

SEC. 2. For the purpose of effecting land consolidations between Indians and non-Indians within the reservation, the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized, under such rules and regulations as he may prescribe, to acquire through purchase, exchange, or relinquishment, any interest in lands, water rights, or surface rights to lands within said reservation. Exchanges of lands hereunder shall be made on the basis of equal value and the value of improvements on lands to be relinquished to the Indians or by Indians to non-Indians shall be given due consideration and allowance made therefor in the valuation of lieu lands. This section shall apply to tribal, trust, or otherwise restricted Indian allotments whether the allottee be living or deceased.

SEC. 3. Title to lands or any interest therein acquired pursuant to this act for Indian use shall be taken in the name of the United States of America in trust for the tribe or individual Indian for which acquired.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

ERECTION OF COLUMBIAN FOUNTAIN IN WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Clerk called the next business, House Joint Resolution 159, authorizing the selection of a site and the erection thereon of the Columbian fountain in Washington, D. C.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman withhold that request a moment?

Mr. COSTELLO. I shall be pleased to withhold it temporarily.

Mr. KELLER. The facts are that this is a monument that the people of Chicago offer to present to Washington City, a very beautiful piece of sculpture, without any cost to the Government of the United States whatever. All we are asked to do is to give the ground for the erection of the monument. The bill also provides very clearly that the expending of the money when raised shall be under the proper department and that the work shall not be undertaken until a sufficient amount of money is in hand to finish the thing. So we will not have on our hands a request sometime or other to finish the job; and the reason I call your attention to that is this: We have been compelled during the past few years, out of a sense of decency, to finish a number of monuments that have been undertaken by private sources and not finished.

During the past 2 years every time a bill of this kind has been introduced the Committee on the Library has written into the measure a provision that the money must be in hand and must be expended under the direction of the proper department of this Government, and I hope under those conditions the gentleman will permit the bill to be considered.

Mr. COSTELLO. Will the gentleman inform the House how much money they anticipate it will be necessary to raise in order to construct this fountain?

Mr. KELLER. A sufficient amount, whatever that may be, will be raised, because the bill provides that in case a sufficient amount is not raised in 5 years the entire matter lapses. The amount must be sufficient to satisfy the department concerned.

Mr. COSTELLO. I understand this money is to be raised by popular subscription.

Mr. KELLER. That is correct.

Mr. COSTELLO. My recollection is that the last statue or fountain of this character to be placed in the city of Washington was the Marine Memorial on the banks of the Potomac, and if I am not mistaken, 2 or 3 months after we passed the legislation the Federal Government had to assume the cost of the completion of that monument, which involved the construction of marble steps and the base of the fountain.

Mr. KELLER. Right. Provided, instead of 3 months, you say some years after the authorization was passed, after the panic and depression had ruined many of the men who were presenting this lovely memorial to our men who have gone down to the sea in ships, after these things had prevented the completion of this outstanding tribute to our sailor men.

Mr. COSTELLO. And although that was constructed under legislation similar to this and the Federal Government was not expected to bear any part of the cost of that fountain, nevertheless, although it gave the ground, it also had to move that statue or fountain from its place of construction to Washington and pay the cost and, finally, had to pay the cost of the construction of the base.

Mr. KELLER. The gentleman is entirely correct in every statement he has made except the authorization was not similar to the authorization for the beautiful Columbian fountain we are asking for here today. But because of that and two or three other similar cases that the Committee on the Library 2 years ago decided to provide in every bill of this kind that the money must be in hand and expended by the department concerned so that there cannot be a recurrence of that experience of asking the Government to finish jobs for individuals.

Mr. COSTELLO. May I ask what would happen if they raised about one-half or three-fourths of the money and presumed they were going to raise the balance and after they start constructing the fountain or after they get the fountain constructed, they do not have the money with which to transport it to Washington? Would we not find ourselves in identically the same situation as the one we were in with respect to the Marine Memorial?

Mr. KELLER. If the gentleman will read the bill he will find that it provides absolutely that no such thing can occur, because the fountain cannot be begun at all until the full amount necessary is in hand and under control of the Government.

Mr. COSTELLO. I can assure the gentleman that although we provide certain things in legislation, the Congress 2 or 3 years later decides it is going to change those provisions, and as a result our legislation has no effect, because another Congress comes in and asks for the money in any event.

Mr. Speaker, I renew my request that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

Mr. KELLER. The gentleman is depriving the city of Washington of a beautiful, historic monument by his action.

And if the same course had been pursued in regard to the National Gallery of Art that glorious institution would not now be taking shape.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California that the bill be passed over without prejudice?

There was no objection.

NEW YORK WORLD'S FAIR, 1939

The Clerk called the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 278) to authorize the appropriation of an additional sum of $851,111.59, for Federal participation in the New York World's Fair, 1939.

The Clerk read the title of the joint resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the joint resolution?

Mr. KRAMER. Mr. Speaker, I object.

INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION OF POLAR EXPLORATION

The Clerk called House Joint Resolution 291, authorizing and requesting the President to accept the invitation of the Government of Norway to the Government of the United States to participate in an International Exhibition of Polar Exploration, which will be held at Bergen, Norway, in 1940, and authorizing an appropriation to cover the expenses of such participation.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. CHIPERFIELD. Mr. Speaker, I object.

INCREASED COMPENSATION TO CIVILIAN EMPLOYEES

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 5333) to amend the acts granting increased compensation to civilian employees for the period July 1, 1917, to June 30, 1924.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That no claim for additional or increased compensation incident to services rendered by civilian employees of the Government of the United States or of the District of Columbia between July 1, 1917, and June 30, 1924, authorized by acts making appropriations for the payment of such increased or additional compensation for the fiscal years ending June 30, 1918, to June 30, 1924, inclusive, shall be considered by the General Accounting Office unless presented to it within 6 months from the date of the enactment of this act.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

RELIEF OF DISBURSING OFFICERS

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 1961) for the relief of disbursing officers and other officers and employees of the United States from disallowances and charges on account of airplane travel.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate bill (S. 884) be substituted for the House bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Comptroller General of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to allow credit in the accounts of disbursing officers of the United States, to remove charges raised against officers and employees of the United States, and to refund to such officers and employees upon application amounts collected from them, representing the excess in cost of airplane transportation used by such officers and employees on official business prior to December 10, 1935, as compared with the cost by rail: Provided, That action as herein provided shall be taken only when the head of the department or establishment shall certify that the use of airplane transportation was necessary in the interest of the United States: Provided further, That in cases of refunds there shall be charged the appropriations to which the collections were credited, and the amounts found due certified for payment in the usual manner.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

A House bill, H. R. 1961, was laid on the table.

PIKE NATIONAL FOREST

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 2548) to include within the Pike National Forest certain lands acquired or in course of acquisition by the United States.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That all lands situated within the area hereinafter described, which have been acquired by the United States, or are in course of acquisition under the provisions of the National Industrial Recovery Act, approved June 16, 1933 (48 Stat. 195), the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act, approved April 8, 1935 (49 Stat. 115), or the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act approved July 22, 1937 (50 Stat. 522), are hereby added to and made parts of the Pike National Forest, Colo., and shall hereafter be subject to the rules and regulations applicable to national-forest lands, but special provisions included in conveyances of title to the United States, valid and subsisting at the date of this act and thereafter legally maintained, shall not be affected by this act.

Sixth principal meridian: Township 10 south, range 69 west, sections 19 to 36, inclusive.

Township 11 south, range 68 west, sections 5, 6, 7, 8, 17, 18, 19, 20, 29, 30, 31, and 32.

Township 11 south, range 69 west, sections 1 to 36, inclusive.

Township 12 south, range 68 west, sections 3 to 10, inclusive; 15 to 22, inclusive; 27 to 34, inclusive.

Township 12 south, range 69 west, sections 1 to 36, inclusive.

Township 12 south, range 70 west, sections 12, 13, 23, 24, 25, 26, 35, and 36.

Township 13 south, range 68 west, sections 2 to 11, inclusive; 14 to 23, inclusive; 26 to 30, inclusive.

Township 13 south, range 69 west, sections 1 to 30, inclusive.

Township 13 south, range 70 west, sections 1, 2, 11, 12, 13, 14, 23, 24, 25, and 26.

With the following committee amendment:

Page 2, line 1, after the word "lands", insert "acquired under the act of March 1, 1911 (36 Stat. 961), as amended.

The committee amendment was agreed to and the bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

ARMY OFFICERS OF RETIRED LIST

The Clerk called the bill (S. 2539) to amend section 1223 of the Revised Statutes of the United States.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 1223 of the Revised Statutes of the United States be amended by adding at the end thereof the following proviso: "Provided, however, That the foregoing provision shall not apply to any officer of the Army on the retired list."

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

REPATRIATING NATIVE-BORN WOMEN

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 4185) to repatriate native-born women residents of the United States who have heretofore lost their citizenship by marriage to an alien.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Speaker, I object.

ANNIVERSARY OF SETTLEMENT OF GALLIPOLIS, OHIO

The Clerk called House Joint Resolution 272, to provide for the observance of the celebration of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the settlement of the city of Gallipolis, Ohio.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman reserve his objection?

Mr. COSTELLO. Yes.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I introduced this bill. It is a bill of considerable importance. The amount called for is really small when one considers the nature of the bill. Gallipolis, Ohio, is the first French settlement in what is known as the Northwest Territory of the United States of America. It is the third settlement in Ohio. This settlement was made under circumstances that have been the basis of many a song and ballad. The French "five hundred" have a place in the chronicles of American pioneer life. This little community of 4,000 people is putting on a celebration this year that will cost $40,000 or $50,000 of their own money. They are expecting to invite the French Ambassador and hope to have a representative from the French Embassy. They will show to the French people that that part of the United States has yet a fine regard for the contribution of Lafayette and the French Nation in helping us gain our freedom. The descendants of these people do not ask anything for themselves. They will provide a celebration that will be fitting and proper regardless of whether the United States Government participates.

The trials and tribulations of that colony of French people who came directly from Paris were very great. They were persuaded to come to America by representations of people in whom they had confidence, but when they arrived at their destination they found that they had been deceived. They had been told of the mild climate and the fertile soil, all ready for the sower, and of the abundance of fish and game. They were expecting a Utopia. When they found the dark forests and the swampy lands along the Ohio River they were dismayed. They landed on the present site of Gallipolis and named that city Gallipolis, meaning the city of the Gauls. The city of Gallipolis has kept the place of the first landing and the location of the first buildings as a public park. It was on the site of this park that the undaunted "five hundred," in order to keep up their morale, held their weekly dances and entertainments so long as their fashionable clothes lasted. They were an honest and faithful people, and, although few if any of them knew how to use an ax or a mattock, they soon adjusted themselves to their life of hardship. The few white trappers in the community came to their assistance and taught them how to make their way as pioneers. While many of them died of unaccustomed hardships and while their discouragements were terrible, they fought on, and now among the residents of that section are to be found the proud and useful descendants of these valiant people. History reports that Napoleon, then a young man in France, would have been among these five hundred except for the objections of his mother. Lafayette, on the occasion of his triumphant visit to America about 1824, visited Gallipolis, and the house in which he stayed is kept intact by patriotic citizens of this little city.

Mr. COSTELLO. I will state in response to the gentleman that while I do not like to object to his bill, at the same time I feel that the passage of such legislation would create a very dangerous precedent in this regard, that if the Federal Government is going to participate in the local celebrations of particular communities, which is, after all, purely localized, then we will find the Federal Government called upon to participate in any number of similar projects. I base my objection upon the precedent which was established by the gentleman's own side when a similar bill was being considered for a celebration at Prattville, Ala. They were only asking for $5,000, but at that time the Members on the gentleman's own side of the aisle raised the objection that it would be a very dangerous precedent to allow the bill to pass. They therefore consistently objected to the bill. I think at that time they acted very wisely, because here is a thing of a similar character coming in.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. I do not remember that incident. I am sure that the Republican side, in the days when I sat behind this desk as an official objector such as my friend Mr. COSTELLO is doing so efficiently now, never took a position like that. We considered every case on its merits. Of course, if you consider this proposition as applicable only to one town, then I agree with the gentleman, but this is not a one-town proposition. This is a national proposition in a small community. In fact, we are bold enough to claim that it has international aspects. At least we hope so. Congress votes millions of dollars to the New York World's Fair, and millions of dollars to other world's fairs. I have voted for all these appropriations to these many fairs. Here is a community that will do more good in proportion with this small sum than any of the large world's fairs. I am not asking this for this community in my district, simply as a personal matter. I guarantee, however, that this gesture that we make with this small sum of money will do as much to warm the hearts of the French people in this country and the French people in their own country toward us as a Nation as any money we contribute to these world's fairs. I hope the gentleman will not object.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I renew my request that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BEAM). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

PAYMENT OF AWARDS OF SPECIAL MEXICAN CLAIMS COMMISSION

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 1821, to provide for the payment in full of the principal of awards of the Special Mixed Claims Commission.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

SAN FRANCISCO BAY EXPOSITION

The Clerk called the next business, House Joint Resolution 242, to authorize the appropriation of an additional sum of $606,650 for Federal participation in the world's fair to be held by the San Francisco Bay Exposition, Inc., in the city of San Francisco during the year 1939.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this resolution be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

AUTHORIZING POSTMASTERS WITHIN THE TERRITORY OF ALASKA TO ADMINISTER OATHS

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 6114, to authorize postmasters within the Territory of Alaska to administer oaths and affirmations, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That each postmaster within the Territory of Alaska is hereby authorized to administer oaths and affirmations, and to take acknowledgments, and to make and execute certificates thereof, and to perform all other functions of a notary public within said Territory, whenever an oath, affirmation, or acknowledgment or a certificate thereof is authorized, permitted, or required by any act or acts of Congress.

Sec. 2. Each certificate of oath, affirmation, or acknowledgment executed by a postmaster within the Territory of Alaska under the authority of this act shall be signed by the postmaster, with a designation of his title as such postmaster, shall have affixed thereto the cancellation stamp of the post office, and shall state the name of the post office and the date on which such oath or affirmation is administered or such acknowledgment is taken.

Sec. 3. For administering an oath or affirmation, or taking an acknowledgment, or performing any other function of a notary public within the Territory of Alaska as herein provided, the postmaster is authorized to charge and receive the fees prescribed by law for a notary public for similar services in said Territory.

With the following committee amendments:

Page 1, line 4, after the word "authorized" insert "and directed."
Page 2, line 9, after "Sec. 3" strike out the word "For" and insert "Except as otherwise provided or required by an Act of Congress, for."

The committee amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

ACQUISITION OF ADDITIONAL LANDS FOR NATIONAL MILITARY PARKS, NATIONAL HISTORICAL PARKS, NATIONAL BATTLEFIELD PARKS, AND BATTLEFIELD SITES

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 4938, to provide for the acquisition of additional lands for the national military parks, national historical parks, national battlefield parks, and battlefield sites administered by the National Park Service of the Department of the Interior, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. TARVER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman reserve his objection?

Mr. COSTELLO. I will reserve my objection.

Mr. TARVER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman be kind enough to indicate the nature of his objection to the bill?

Mr. COSTELLO. Yes. I will state very definitely that I think the legislation is most unwise. About 3 or 4 years ago the Congress passed legislation directing the Department of the Interior to go out and search the country from top to bottom for historical sites, looking for historical buildings, monuments, and parks, with a view to recommending back to the Congress what ones should be made national parks and which ones should be made national monuments. The gentleman's bill provides for the acquisition of additional land for national military parks, national historical parks, national battlefield parks, and battlefield sites, and he would confer upon the Department of the Interior the power to acquire those sites without having direct legislation from the Congress in each individual instance. All that would be required would be to apply to the Committee on Appropriations to obtain funds with which to acquire the sites. I think that in that regard it would be an authorization that the Congress should not give to a department.

Mr. TARVER. I think I can obviate the gentleman's objections. This is a bill which was prepared by the National Park Service itself, and it proposes to convey such general powers as the gentleman has described. However, after conference with the gentlemen on the other side of the aisle who entertained similar objections to those which have been voiced by the gentleman from California, I have prepared an amendment which would limit the proposal to the acquisition of lands for the Kennesaw Mountain National Battlefield Park in Georgia, which is the particular proposal that I had in mind—the necessary lands for the completion of that park, and section 1 of the bill will be identical, after the amendment, with the subject matter of another bill, H. R. 4937, which I have introduced and which has received Budget approval.

The amount involved is very small and is certainly very badly needed to secure places of great historical interest for addition to the park.

Mr. COSTELLO. Has the gentleman a copy of the bill?

Mr. TARVER. Yes; I have a copy of the bill and I have also a copy of the Department's report showing Budget approval. The amount involved will be very small.

Mr. COSTELLO. I ask the gentleman whether he intends to strike out all after the enacting clause of the bill now before the House for consideration and insert in lieu thereof the language of the other bill.

Mr. TARVER. I propose to strike out section 1 and substitute in lieu thereof section 1 of this bill. This would leave in the bill no authority on the part of the Department to acquire land elsewhere than in connection with this particular park.

Mr. COSTELLO. I think it would be much wiser to have reported out the other bill rather than this one. The authority granted in this bill certainly should not be given to the Department. I do not, of course, know what the House may do in regard to the amendment. They may or may not accept it.

Mr. TARVER. I am sure the House, after the conversation which has occurred between the gentleman and myself, would not disapprove the amendment.

Mr. COSTELLO. I have no objection to the first section of the second bill being substituted for the first section of the bill now under consideration, but certainly no blanket authority should be given to the Department.

Mr. HORTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TARVER. I yield.

Mr. HORTON. I think it would be much wiser if this bill were withdrawn and a new bill introduced to accomplish the specific purposes the gentleman has in mind.

Mr. TARVER. There is no reason why this matter should not receive further consideration, but I see no reason for not passing the amended bill relating only to Kennesaw Mountain, which is the one proposition in which I am interested.

Mr. HORTON. As I understand it, the gentleman intends to offer an amendment striking out all of sections 1 and 2 of the pending bill and inserting language which will limit the bill to the particular park in which he is interested.

Mr. TARVER. I propose to make it apply to this particular case, Kennesaw Mountain, the one in which I am primarily interested. The matter of general legislation can be taken up later.

The regular order was demanded.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The regular order is, Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I object.

CLARENCE R. EDWARDS MEMORIAL BRIDGE

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 6870, to grant to the Commonwealth of Massachusetts a retrocession of jurisdiction over the General Clarence R. Edwards Memorial Bridge, bridging Watershops Pond of the Springfield Armory Military Reservation in the city of Springfield, Mass.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby granted to the Commonwealth of Massachusetts a retrocession of jurisdiction over the General Clarence R. Edwards Memorial Bridge, bridging Watershops Pond of the Springfield Armory Military Reservation in the city of Springfield, Mass., covered by a certain grant from the Secretary of War to the city of Springfield, Mass., dated October 15, 1936, authorized by act of Congress approved July 14, 1932 (47 Stat. 663), as heretofore or hereafter amended by the Secretary of War, and subject to all the terms and conditions contained in said permit as so granted, and any amendments thereof, as aforesaid. The land, premises, and bridge over which such retrocession of jurisdiction is hereby granted shall be the whole of the bridge constructed under said permit and any amendments thereof, throughout its entire length and width, and for the entire distance granted therein.

Sec. 2. Whenever the city of Springfield, Mass., shall cease to occupy and use the land, premises, and bridge for highway purposes as authorized in said permit, and any amendments thereof, then all jurisdiction thereover shall revert to the United States.

Sec. 3. The retrocession of jurisdiction granted shall not become effective until the same is accepted by the General Court of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PERMANENT FORCE TO CLASSIFY PATENTS

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 6721, to provide a permanent force to classify patents in the Patent Office, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 2 of the act of June 10, 1898 (30 Stat. L. 440), be, and the same is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 2. That for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this act, the Commissioner of Patents is hereby authorized and directed to maintain a Classification Division in the Patent Office, and, in addition to the principal examiner of classification, the Commissioner of Patents is authorized and directed to maintain in said Classification Division not less than 3 assistant chiefs and 25 examiners in the professional grades 2 to 4, inclusive, whose time shall be devoted exclusively to the revision and perfection of the classification of letters patent and printed publications, and that for the purpose of maintaining the minimum number of examiners specified in this section in the work of revision and perfection of the classification, without reducing the number of examiners engaged in the other work of the Classification Division, including the classification of the weekly issue of patents, and without reducing the number of examiners engaged in the examination of patent applications, the Commissioner of Patents is authorized to appoint, in the manner now provided by law, 25 additional examiners and such additional clerks to those now employed as he may deem necessary to maintain the efficiency of said Classification Division."

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

SIMPLIFYING INTERFERENCE PRACTICE IN UNITED STATES PATENT OFFICE

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 6873, to amend sections 4904, 4909, 4911, and 4915 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. C., title 35, secs. 52, 57, 59a, and 63).

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 4904 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. C., title 35, sec. 52) be amended to read as follows:

"Whenever an application is made for a patent which, in the opinion of the Commissioner, would interfere with any pending application, or with any unexpired patent, he shall give notice thereof to the applicants, or applicant and patentee, as the case may be, and shall direct a board of three examiners of interference to proceed to determine the question of priority of invention. And the Commissioner may issue a patent to the party who is adjudged the prior inventor."

Sec. 2. That section 4909 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. C., title 35, sec. 57) be amended to read as follows:

"Every applicant for a patent or for the reissue of a patent, any of the claims of which have been twice rejected, may appeal from the decision of the primary examiner to the Board of Appeals, having once paid the fee for such appeal."

Sec. 3. That section 4911 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. C., title 35, sec. 59a) be amended by changing the words "Board of Appeals" in the second sentence to read "Board of interference examiners", and by canceling the last sentence of said section.

Sec. 4. That section 4915 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. C., title 35, sec. 63) be amended by changing the first sentence thereof to read:

"Whenever a patent on application is refused by the Board of Appeals or whenever any applicant is dissatisfied with the decision of the board of interference examiners, the applicant, unless appeal has been taken to the United States Court of Customs and Patent Appeals, and such appeal is pending or has been decided, in which case no action may be brought under this section, may have remedy by bill in equity, if filed within 6 months after such refusal or decision; and the court having cognizance thereof, on notice to adverse parties and other due proceedings had, may adjudge that such applicant is entitled, according to law, to receive a patent for his invention, as specified in his claim or for any part thereof, as the facts in the case may appear."

Sec. 5. That this act shall take effect 2 months after its approval; but it shall not affect interferences then pending, which may be heard and decided and appeals and other proceedings taken under the statutes in force at the time of approval of this act as if such statutes had not been amended.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to return to Calendar No. 275.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

Mr. CHURCH. Mr. Speaker, I must object to returning to any bill previously called until the call of the calendar has been completed.

Mr. TARVER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to return to Calendar No. 293.

Mr. CHURCH. Mr. Speaker, I regret, but I shall be forced to object to returning to any bill until we complete the call of the calendar. I object.

FINAL FEES ON ALLOWED APPLICATIONS FOR PATENTS

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 6874, to repeal section 4896 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. C., title 35, sec. 8), and amend sections 4885 and 4934 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. C., title 35, secs. 41 and 78).

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 4896 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. C., title 35, sec. 38) be repealed.

Sec. 2. That section 4885 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. C., title 35, sec. 41) be amended by striking out the word "six" and substituting therefor the word "three", and by adding at the end thereof the following: "Provided, however, That upon proof satisfactory to the Commissioner of Patents that the delay is or was justifiable the final fee may be paid within 1 year after the 3 months' period for payment has passed and the patent shall issue."

Sec. 3. That section 4934 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. C., title 35, sec. 78) be amended by changing the last sentence to read: "On filing each petition for the revival of an abandoned application for a patent or for the delayed payment of the fee for issuing each patent, $10."

Sec. 4. This act shall take effect upon approval: Provided, however, That in all cases in which the notice of allowance had been sent prior to the time at which this act takes effect the final fee may be paid and other proceedings may be taken under the statutes in force at the time of approval of this act as if such statutes had not been amended or repealed.

With the following committee amendments:

In the title, "4896" is changed to "4897" and "sec. 8" to "sec. 38." On page 1, line 3, "4896" is changed to "4897." On page 1, line 10, after "Patents", insert "filed at any time after the application is allowed."

The committee amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to repeal section 4897 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. C., title 35, sec. 38), and amend sections 4885 and 4934 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. C., title 35, secs. 41 and 78)."

PUBLIC USE AND PUBLICATION BEFORE FILING FOR PATENT

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 6872, to amend sections 4886, 4887, 4920, and 4929 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. C., title 35, secs. 31, 32, 69, and 73).

Mr. BARDEN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will somebody from the Committee on Patents explain the bill?

Mr. SIROVICH. The purpose of the bill is to reduce the period of 2 years where it appears in various sections of the patent statute to 1 year. The present patent law specifies that any person who has made an invention may obtain a patent. Nevertheless, a patent cannot be obtained if the invention was described in any printed publication or was in public use, or on sale in this country more than 2 years prior to the application.

Mr. LANHAM. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BARDEN. I yield.

Mr. LANHAM. This bill, the bill preceding it, and the bills succeeding it are procedural bills which have been recommended by the Commissioner of Patents.

Mr. SIROVICH. And by the National Council.

Mr. LANHAM. By the National Council, by the Patent Law Association, by inventors and manufacturers. All these bills relate simply to speeding up the rather slow process under certain cumbersome decisions of the court that inventors may get action quicker on their applications for patents.

Mr. BARDEN. Do they in any way change the basic law?

Mr. LANHAM. Not at all; they are simply procedural.

Mr. BARDEN. I do not mind saying to the gentleman that I am a little skeptical of bills sent up by bureau heads, and feel we should go rather slowly in accepting their recommendations.

Mr. LANHAM. I may say to the gentleman from North Carolina that these bills were recommended only after very serious consideration by the people who would be involved in such legislation.

It is unanimously recommended, and is in the interest of all who have business with the Patent Office.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That sections 4886, 4887, 4920, and 4929 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. C., title 35, secs. 31, 32, 69, and 73) be amended by striking out the words "two years" wherever they appear in said sections and substituting therefor the words "one year".

Sec. 2. This act shall take effect 1 year after its approval and shall apply to all applications for patent filed after it takes effect and to all patents granted on such applications: Provided, however, That all applications for patents filed prior to the time this act takes effect and all patents granted on such applications are to be governed by the statutes in force at the time of approval of this act as if such statutes had not been amended.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

AUTHORITY FOR SHORTENING OF TIME FOR REPLY TO PATENT OFFICE ACTIONS

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 6878, to amend section 4894 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. C., title 35, sec. 37).

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 4894 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. C., title 35, sec. 37) be amended by inserting after "6 months," second occurrence, the words "or such shorter time, not less than 30 days, as shall be fixed by the Commissioner of Patents in writing to the applicant."

Mr. VAN ZANDT. Mr. Speaker, this is a bill to give the Commissioner of Patents authority to set times within which replies to communications from the Patent Office must be made by applicants for patents.

For many years past patentees have been severely criticized for permitting their patent applications to remain in the Patent Office for unnecessarily long periods of time so that while the application has been lying in the Patent Office industry has been going ahead and making the articles in question covered by the application. Then when the patent is issued the manufacturing industry finds itself in the position of an infringer. This produces great uncertainty in industry, which should be remedied by the present bill, H. R. 6878.

Furthermore, since the patent runs for 17 years from the date of issue, by allowing the application to stay in the Patent Office for inordinately long periods the useful term of the patent is, in effect, extended beyond the 17 years of grant. With the Patent Office willing and anxious to cooperate to reduce the time during which an application may be pending in the Patent Office, the present bill gives the Commissioner of Patents the right to fix the time which an applicant may take to reply to an official letter of the Patent Office with the proviso that this time shall never be less than 30 days.

Several years ago the period allowed to answer a letter of the Patent Office was 1 year. This was a longer period than was allowed by the patent offices of any other country in the world, and was probably due to bad communications at the time when communications in the United States were in their early development. This opportunity to wait a year before answering each letter from the Patent Office was taken advantage of by malingerers to such an extent that the period was later cut down to 6 months. This had the desired effect, to a considerable extent, in shortening the prosecution of a patent application before the United States Patent Office. Nevertheless, anywhere from 3 to 10 letters might be written to an applicant, and in view thereof it is manifest that even the period of 6 months for a reply to each action of the Patent Office still gives opportunity for malingerers to hold their applications in the Patent Office for unnecessarily long periods. The present bill enables the Commissioner of Patents to fix the term for a period between 30 days and 6 months according to his discretion, and no doubt this discretion will be wisely used so that where the invention is of a complicated character, a longer time will be given to the applicant to reply to an official action, while when the amendment required is of minor nature, the Commissioner would be justified in setting the minimum period of 30 days as a term within which the necessary amendment should be made.

The patent offices of most of the other countries of the world seldom give a period as long as 6 months for replying to an official action. Therefore, under this bill, our Patent Office may continue to be the most liberal in this respect so far as inventors are concerned, yet at the same time it will be entirely in the Commissioner's hands to prevent malingerers in the Patent Office.

At the same time the present contemplated legislation does not penalize the applicant for a patent where the delay in securing the patent is due to complicated interference proceedings or appeals which necessarily consume time. Thus the bona fide applicant for a patent is protected, while the would-be malingerer can be made to push his application through the Patent Office promptly.

Finally this legislative measure enables the Commissioner of Patents to take cognizance of the greatly improved means of transportation under present-day conditions of mail and air mail service in which all parts of the world can be reached within a relatively short time.

I believe that industry will greatly welcome the passage of this bill, because it will tend to remove the uncertainty which hangs over inventors as to whether or not they are free to go ahead with the manufacture of a new device without being confronted, some years later, with a patent granted on an application which has lain dormant for many years in the Patent Office.

The bill has the approval of the Commissioner of Patents, and is in substance one of the recommendations made by him when he was called upon by the Temporary National Economic Committee for suggestions to improve the patent laws. It also has the approval of the Department of Commerce and the Patent Office Advisory Committee to the Secretary of Commerce. Various patent-law organizations have endorsed it and it has likewise been approved by the National Advisory Council to the House Committee on Patents. This council has a membership of 24, selected from inventors, scientists, engineers, industrialists, economists, labor people, lawyers—both general- and patent-law specialists—judges and other, to give a representative cross section of the country.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. THOMAS F. FORD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include a short article from the Baltimore Sun.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California [Mr. Ford]?

There was no objection.

CONSENT CALENDAR

REDUCING THE TIME WITHIN WHICH INTERFERENCE WITH AN ISSUED PATENT MAY BE PERMITTED

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 6875, to amend section 4903 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. C., title 35, sec. 51).

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 4903 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. C., title 35, sec. 51) be amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"No amendment presenting or asserting a claim which is the same or substantially the same as a claim of an issued patent may be made in any application unless such amendment is filed within 1 year from the date on which said patent was granted."

Sec. 2. This act shall take effect 1 year after its approval.

With the following committee amendments:

Page 1, line 6, after the word "amendment", insert "for the first time."

Page 1, line 7, strike out "or substantially the same as" and insert "as, or for substantially the same subject matter as."

The committee amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PLACER MINING CLAIMS FOR DEPOSITS

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 6560, relating to placer mining claims for deposits of phosphate, sodium, potassium, oil, oil shale, or gas on the public domain.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will some one on the floor explain this bill?

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, this applies to about 30,000 acres of oil-shale land, nearly all in my home county. People have been holding it for years and years without complying with the law and without being entitled to it. This is to require them to comply with the law or else let the land revert back to the control of the United States. It is in the interest of good, decent government, and the Secretary of the Interior has made a very forceful and lengthy report on it. I feel this bill is in the interest of orderly procedure.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Does the bill apply solely to this land in Colorado?

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. There is a little of it over in Utah, and I think possibly a little in Idaho, but nearly all of this is in western Colorado.

Mr. MURDOCK of Utah. Are not the holders of these claims, instead of using the ground for mining purposes, controlling it under their locations and leasing it for grazing purposes?

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Yes; they do, and they do not pay the Government anything at all.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Are they not subject to existing laws, so that they can be ousted?

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. No. The courts have held that cannot be done. They have been holding these lands for years and paying nothing. They prevent anybody else from getting the land.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. This bill applies to all land of this character in the United States.

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. It applies only to these claims.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. It applies to land of this character, which comes under this law, located anywhere in the United States.

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. If anybody else is holding land of this character without complying with the law, it requires those people to comply with the law.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. But it applies to the whole of the United States?

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Yes; but it is located mostly in my district.

Mr. HORTON. There are several hundred thousand acres of such land in Wyoming. It is a very controversial question in my State as to whether this is the proper solution, and I am therefore constrained to object.

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill may be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. Taylor]?

There was no objection.

EXCHANGE OF CERTAIN LAND IN THE STATE OF OREGON

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 6503, relating to the exchange of certain lands in the State of Oregon.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior, in the administration of the act entitled "An act relating to the reversion of Oregon & California Railroad and reconveyed Coos Bay Wagon Road grant lands situated in the State of Oregon," approved August 28, 1937 (50 Stat. 874), is hereby authorized and empowered, in his discretion, to exchange any land formerly granted to the Oregon & California Railroad Co., title to which was reversioned in the United States pursuant to the provisions of the act of June 9, 1916 (39 Stat. 218), and any land granted to the State of Oregon, title to which was reconveyed to the United States by the Southern Oregon Co. pursuant to the provisions of the act of February 26, 1919 (40 Stat. 1179), for lands of approximately equal aggregate value held in private, State, or county ownership, either within or contiguous to the former limits of such grants, when by such action the Secretary of the Interior will be enabled to consolidate advantageously the holdings of lands of the United States: Provided, That all lands and timber secured by the United States pursuant to any such exchange shall be administered in accordance with the same provisions of law as such reversioned or reconveyed lands exchanged therefor: Provided further, That either party to any such exchange may make reservations of easements, rights of use, and other interests and rights. No fee shall be charged for any such exchange with respect to land owned by the State of Oregon or any county thereof, except one-half of the cost of publishing notice of such proposed exchange.

Sec. 2. The Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to perform any and all acts and to make such rules and regulations as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this act.

Sec. 3. The act of May 31, 1918 (40 Stat. 593), section 3 of the act of June 4, 1920 (41 Stat. 758), and all other acts or parts of acts in conflict with the provisions of this act, to the extent of such conflict, are hereby repealed.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. KEE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a short article in the Washington Star.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. KEE]? There was no objection.

CONSENT CALENDAR

CONSTRUCTION OF BRIDGE OVER MISSISSIPPI RIVER AT OR NEAR DUBUQUE, IOWA

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 955, creating the City of Dubuque Bridge Commission and authorizing said commission and its successors to purchase and/or construct, maintain, and operate a bridge or bridges across the Mississippi River at or near Dubuque, Iowa, and East Dubuque, Ill.

Be it enacted, etc., That in order to facilitate interstate commerce, improve the postal service, and provide for military and other purposes, the City of Dubuque Bridge Commission (hereinafter created, and hereinafter referred to as the "Commission"), and its successors and assigns be, and are hereby, authorized to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge or bridges and approaches thereto, across the Mississippi River at or near the cities of Dubuque, Iowa, and East Dubuque, Ill., at a point suitable to the interest of navigation, in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters," approved March 23, 1906, subject to the conditions and limitations contained in this act. For like purposes said Commission, or its successors and assigns, are hereby authorized to purchase, maintain, and operate all or any existing bridge for vehicular traffic crossing the Mississippi River at or near the city of Dubuque, Iowa, and may acquire control of any or all such existing bridges by purchase of stock in any corporation owning any such bridges, or by a conveyance from such corporation and in any case, said Commission shall be authorized to maintain and operate said bridge or bridges subject to the conditions and limitations contained in this act.

Sec. 2. There is hereby conferred upon the Commission and its successors and assigns the right and power to enter upon such lands and to acquire, condemn, occupy, possess, and use such real estate and other property in the State of Iowa and the State of Illinois as may be needed for the location, construction, operation, and maintenance of any such bridge and its approaches, upon making just compensation therefor, to be ascertained and paid according to the laws of the State in which such real estate or other property is situated, and the proceedings therefor shall be the same as in the condemnation of private property for public purpose in said State, respectively. The Commission, its successors, and assigns, is further authorized to enter into agreements with the States of Illinois and Iowa, and any political subdivision thereof, for the acquisition, lease, or use of any lands or property owned by such State or political subdivision.

Sec. 3. The Commission and its successors and assigns are hereby authorized to fix and charge tolls for transit over such bridge or bridges in accordance with the provisions of this act, subject to the approval of the Secretary of War as provided by the act of Congress approved March 23, 1906.

Sec. 4. The Commission and its successors and assigns are hereby authorized to provide for the payment of the cost of such bridge or bridges as may be purchased or constructed, as provided herein, and approaches (including the approach highways which, in the judgment of the Commission, it is necessary or advisable to construct or cause to be constructed to provide suitable and adequate connection with existing improved highways) and the necessary land easements, and appurtenances thereto, by an issue or issues of negotiable bonds of the Commission, bearing interest at the rate or rates of not more than 6 percent per annum, the principal and interest of which bonds, and any premium to be paid for retirement thereof before maturity, shall be payable solely from the sinking fund provided in accordance with this act, and such payments may be further secured by mortgage of the bridge or bridges. All such bonds may be registerable as to principal alone or both principal and interest, shall be in such form not inconsistent with this act, shall mature at such time or times not exceeding 20 years from their respective dates, shall be in such denominations, shall be executed in such manner, and shall be payable in such medium and at such place or places as the Commission may determine. The Commission may repurchase and may reserve the right to redeem all or any of said bonds before maturity in such manner and at such price or prices, not exceeding 105 and accrued interest, as may be fixed by the Commission prior to the issuance of the bonds. The Commission, when it deems it to be to the best interest of the Commission, may issue refunding bonds to repurchase and redeem any outstanding bonds, before the maturity thereof: Provided, That the refunding bonds shall mature at such time or times, not exceeding 20 years from the date of the bonds, as the Commission may determine. The Commission may enter into an agreement with any bank or trust company in the United States as trustee having the power to make such agreement, setting forth the duties of the Commission in respect to the purchase, construction, maintenance, operation, repair, and insurance of the bridge or bridges, the conservation and application of all funds, the security for the payment of the bonds, the safeguarding of money on hand or on deposit, and the rights and remedies of said trustee and the holders of the bonds, restricting the individual right of action of the bondholders as is customary in trust agreements respecting bonds of corporations. Such trust agreement may contain such provisions for protecting and enforcing the rights and remedies of the trustee and the bondholders as may be reasonable and proper and not inconsistent with the law.

Said bonds shall be sold in such manner and at such time or times and at such price as the Commission may determine, but no such sale shall be made at a price so low as to require the payment of more than 5-percent interest on the money received therefor, computed with relation to the absolute maturity of the bonds in accordance with standard tables of bond values, and the face amount thereof shall be so calculated as to produce, at the price of their sale, the cost of the bridge or bridges, acquired and/or constructed, and approaches and the land, easements, and appurtenances used in connection therewith when added to any other funds made available to the Commission for the use of said purposes. The cost of the bridge or bridges acquired hereunder and the cost of the bridge to be constructed as provided herein, together with approaches and approach highways, shall be deemed to include interest during construction of the said bridge, and for 12 months thereafter, and all engineering, legal, architectural, traffic-surveying, and other expense incident to the construction of the bridge and the acquisition of the necessary property, incident to the financing thereof, including the cost of acquiring existing franchises, riparian rights, plans, and works of and relating to the bridge or bridges now owned by any person, firm, or corporation, and the cost of purchasing all or any part of the shares of stock of any such corporate owner, or by conveyance from such corporation, if, in the judgment of the Commission, such purchases should be found expedient. If the proceeds of the bonds issued shall exceed the cost as finally determined, the excess shall be placed in the sinking fund hereinafter provided. Prior to the preparation of definite bonds the Commission may, under like restrictions, issue temporary bonds or interim certificates, with or without coupons, of any denomination whatsoever, exchangeable for definite bonds when such bonds that have been executed are available for delivery.

Sec. 5. In fixing the rates of toll to be charged for the use of such bridge or bridges, in accordance with the act of Congress approved March 23, 1906, the same shall be so adjusted as to provide a fund sufficient to pay for the reasonable cost of maintaining, repairing, and operating the bridge or bridges and approaches under economical management, and to provide a sinking fund sufficient to pay the principal and interest of such bonds as the same shall fall due and the redemption or repurchase price of all or any thereof redeemed or repurchased before maturity as herein provided. All tolls and other revenues from said bridge or bridges are hereby pledged to such uses and to the application thereof as hereinafter in this section required. After payment or provision for payment therefrom of all such cost of maintaining, repairing, and operating and the reservation of an amount of money estimated to be sufficient for the same purpose during an ensuing period of not more than 6 months, the remainder of tolls collected shall be placed in the sinking fund, at intervals to be determined by the Commission prior to the issuance of the bonds. An accurate record of the cost of the bridge or bridges and approaches; the expenditures for maintaining, repairing, and operating the same; and of the daily tolls collected, shall be kept and shall be available for the information of all persons interested. The Commission shall classify in a reasonable way all traffic over the bridge or bridges so that the tolls shall be so fixed and adjusted by it as to be uniform in the application thereof to all traffic falling within reasonable classes, regardless of the status or character of any person, firm, or corporation participating in such traffic, and shall prevent all use of such bridge or bridges for traffic except upon payment of tolls so fixed and adjusted. No toll shall be charged officials or employees of the Commission, nor shall toll be charged officials of the Government of the United States while in the discharge of duties incident to their office or employment, nor shall toll be charged members of the fire department or peace officers when engaged in the performance of their official duties.

Within a reasonable time after the construction of any bridge or bridges, or the purchase of any bridge or bridges, the Commission shall file with the Bureau of Public Roads of the United States Department of Agriculture, a sworn itemized statement showing the cost of constructing or purchasing the bridge or bridges and their approaches, the cost of acquiring any interest in real or other property necessary therefor, and the amount of bonds, debentures, or other evidence of indebtedness issued in connection with the construction or purchase of said bridge or bridges.

Sec. 6. Nothing herein contained shall require the Commission or its successors to maintain or operate any bridge or bridges purchased hereunder, if and when all bonds issued for account of such bridge or bridges shall have been retired or provision for the payment of interest on and retirement of such bonds from the revenues from any other bridge or bridges shall have been made at the time of issuance of such bonds. Any bridge or bridges so purchased, with appurtenances and property thereto connected and belonging, may be sold or otherwise disposed of or may be abandoned or dismantled whenever in the judgment of the Commission or its successors, and subject to the approval of the Chief of the Bureau of Public Roads, United States Department of Agriculture, and the United States Secretary of War, it may be declared expedient so to do, and provisions with respect to and regulating any such sale, disposal, abandonment, or dismantlement may be included in proceedings for the issuance and sale of bonds for account of any such bridge or bridges. The Commission and its successors may fix such rates of toll for the use of such bridge or bridges as it may deem proper, subject to the same conditions as are hereinabove required as to tolls for traffic over the bridge to be constructed provided tolls shall be fixed and revised from time to time for traffic over all bridges so as not to adversely reflect upon the earnings of any bridge or bridges for account of which bonds may be outstanding. An accurate record of the cost of purchasing or constructing each such bridge; the expenditures for maintaining, repairing, and operating the same; and of the daily tolls collected shall be kept and shall be available for the information of all persons interested.

SEC. 7. (a) After payment of the bonds and interest, or after a sinking fund sufficient for such payment shall have been provided and shall be held for that purpose, the commission shall deliver deeds or other suitable instruments of conveyance of the interest of the Commission in and to the bridge or bridges extending between the State of Iowa and the State of Illinois, that part of said bridge or bridges within Iowa to the State of Iowa or any municipality or agency thereof as may be authorized by or pursuant to law to accept the same (hereafter referred to as the "Iowa interests"), and that part of said bridge or bridges within Illinois to the State of Illinois or any municipality or agency thereof as may be authorized by or pursuant to law to accept the same (hereafter referred to as the "Illinois interests"); likewise the Commission shall deliver deeds or other suitable instruments of conveyance of the interest of the Commission in and to any bridge that may cross the Mississippi River between the city of Dubuque, Iowa, and the State of Wisconsin, that part of said bridge within Iowa to the State of Iowa or any municipality or agency thereof as may be authorized by or pursuant to law to accept the same (hereafter referred to as the "Iowa interests"), and that part of said bridge within Wisconsin to the State of Wisconsin or any municipality or agency thereof as may be authorized by or pursuant to law to accept the same (hereafter referred to as the "Wisconsin interests"), under the condition that the bridge or bridges shall thereafter be free of tolls and be properly maintained, operated, and repaired by the Iowa interests, the Illinois interests, and the Wisconsin interests, as may be agreed upon; but if the Iowa, Illinois, or Wisconsin interests, as the case may be, fail to accept, or are not authorized to accept, their respective portions of said bridge or bridges, then the Commission may deliver deeds, or other suitable instruments or conveyance of said portions, to any other interest which may accept and may be authorized to accept the same, under the condition that the bridge or bridges shall thereafter be free of toll and be properly maintained, operated, and repaired by said interests to whom said conveyances are delivered; but if either the Iowa interests, or the Illinois interests, or the Wisconsin interests, or any other interest hereinabove mentioned shall not be authorized to accept or shall not accept the same under such conditions, then the bridge or bridges shall continue to be owned, maintained, operated, and repaired by the Commission, and the rates of tolls shall be so adjusted as to provide a fund of not to exceed the amount necessary for the proper maintenance, repair, and operation of the bridge or bridges and approaches under economical management, until such time as the Iowa interests, the Illinois interests, the Wisconsin interests, or any other interest hereinabove mentioned, shall be authorized to accept and shall accept such conveyance under such conditions. The rate or rates of toll for crossing any bridge now existing or hereafter constructed which abuts upon or enters into the corporate limits of the city of Dubuque, Iowa, shall not be reduced below the rate or rates now in effect on existing bridges so long as any indebtedness of said Commission for the account of any bridge or bridges shall be outstanding and unpaid.

(b) Notwithstanding any restrictions or limitation imposed by the act entitled "An act to provide that the United States shall aid the States in the construction of rural post roads, and for other purposes," approved July 11, 1916, or by the Federal Highway Act, or by an act amendatory of or supplemental to either thereof, the Secretary of Agriculture or any other Federal department or agency of the United States Government may extend Federal aid under such acts for the construction of said bridge or bridges out of any moneys allocated to the State of Iowa with the consent of the State highway commission of said State, and out of moneys allocated to the State of Illinois with the consent of the department of highways of said State.

SEC. 8. For the purpose of carrying into effect the objects stated in this act, there is hereby created the City of Dubuque Bridge Commission, and by that name, style, and title said body shall have perpetual succession; may contract and be contracted with, sue and be sued, implead and be impleaded, complain and defend in all courts of law and equity; may make and have a common seal; may purchase or otherwise acquire and hold or dispose of real estate and other property; may accept and receive donations or gifts of money or property and apply same to the purposes of this act; and shall have and possess all powers necessary, convenient, or proper for carrying into effect the objects stated in this act.

The Commission shall consist of W. M. Clemens, Charles G. Kretschmer, Charles T. Landon, Thomas M. Stampfer, of Dubuque, Iowa, and R. E. Werner, of East Dubuque, Ill.; such Commission shall be a public body corporate and politic. Each member of the Commission shall qualify within 30 days after the approval of this act by filing in the office of the Secretary of Agriculture an oath that he will faithfully perform the duties imposed upon him by this act, and each person appointed to fill a vacancy shall qualify in like manner within 30 days after his appointment. Any vacancy occurring in said Commission by reason of failure to qualify as above provided, or by reason of death or resignation, shall be filled by the Secretary of Agriculture. Before the issuance of bonds as hereinabove provided, each member of the Commission shall give such bond as may be fixed by the Chief of the Bureau of Public Roads of the Department of Agriculture, conditioned upon the faithful performance of all duties required by this act, the cost of such surety prior to and during the construction of the bridge shall be paid or reimbursed from the bond proceeds and thereafter such costs shall be deemed an operating expense. The Commission shall elect a chairman and a vice chairman from its members, and may establish rules and regulations for the government of its own business. A majority of the members shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business.

SEC. 9. The Commission shall have no capital stock or shares of interest or participation, and all revenues and receipts thereof shall be applied to the purposes specified in this act. The members of the Commission shall be entitled to a per diem compensation for their services of $10 for each day actually spent in the business of the Commission, but the maximum compensation of the chairman in any year shall not exceed $1,200, and of each other member shall not exceed $600. The members of the Commission shall also be entitled to receive traveling-expense allowance of 10 cents a mile for each mile actually traveled on the business of the Commission. The Commission may employ a secretary, treasurer, engineers, attorneys, and other such experts, assistants, and employees as they may deem necessary, who shall be entitled to receive such compensation as the Commission may determine. All salaries and expenses shall be paid solely from the funds provided under the authority of this act. After all bonds and interest thereon shall have been paid and all other obligations of the Commission paid or discharged, or provision for all such payment shall have been made as hereinbefore provided and after the bridge or bridges shall have been conveyed to the Iowa interests, the Illinois interests, and the Wisconsin interests, as herein provided, or otherwise disposed of as provided herein, the Commission shall be dissolved and shall cease to have further existence by an order of the Chief of the Bureau of Public Roads made upon his own initiative or upon application of the Commission or any member or members thereof, but only after a public hearing in the city of Dubuque, Iowa, notice of the time and place of which hearing and the purpose thereof shall have been published once, at least 30 days before the date thereof, in a newspaper published in the city of Dubuque, Iowa. At the time of such dissolution all moneys in the hands of or to the credit of the Commission shall be divided and distribution made between the interests of the States, as may be determined by the Chief of the Bureau of Public Roads of the United States.

SEC. 10. Notwithstanding any of the provisions of this act, the commission shall have full power and authority to negotiate and enter into a contract or contracts with the State Highway Commission of Iowa and the Department of Highways of Illinois, the State Highway Department of Wisconsin, the city of Dubuque, Dubuque County, Iowa, or any county or municipality in the State of Illinois, whereby the commission may receive financial aid in the construction or maintenance of a bridge or bridges and approaches thereto, and said commission in its discretion may avail itself of all of the facilities of the State Highway Commission of the State of Iowa and the Department of Highways of the State of Illinois with regard to the construction of said proposed bridge or bridges, and the commission may make and enter into any contract or contracts which it deems expedient and proper with the State Highway Commission of Iowa and the Department of Highways of Illinois, whereby said highway departments or either of them may construct, operate, and maintain or participate with the commission in the construction, operation, maintenance of said bridge or bridges to be constructed hereunder, and approaches. It is hereby declared to be the purpose of Congress to facilitate the construction of a bridge and proper approaches across the Mississippi River at or near Dubuque, Iowa, and East Dubuque, Illinois, and to authorize the commission to promote said object and purposes, with full power to contract with either the State Highway Commission of Iowa or the Department of Highways of Illinois or with any agency or department of the Federal Government, or both, in relation to the purchase or condemnation, construction, operation, and maintenance of said bridges and approaches.

SEC. 11. Nothing herein contained shall be construed to authorize or permit the commission or any member thereof to create any obligation or incur any liability other than such obligations and liabilities as are dischargeable solely from funds contemplated to be provided by this act. No obligation created or liability incurred pursuant to this act shall be a personal obligation or liability of any member or members of the commission but shall be chargeable solely to the funds herein provided, nor shall any indebtedness created pursuant to this act be an indebtedness of the United States.

SEC. 12. The design and construction of any bridge which may be built pursuant to this act shall be in accordance with the standard specifications for highway bridges adopted by the American Association of State Highway Officials.

SEC. 13. In the event that the State of Iowa, or some political subdivision or agency thereof, shall appoint or constitute, pursuant to statute duly enacted, the commission hereby created as a bridge commission or board for the city of Dubuque, with authority to construct, purchase, or acquire bridges across the Mississippi River, abutting upon or entering the corporate limits of the city of Dubuque, then such bridge commission or board shall have authority to construct, purchase, or acquire the bridge or bridges referred to in this act in the manner herein set forth, or in the manner prescribed by State law, and if said commission or board shall elect to proceed in the manner prescribed by State law, it shall ipso facto succeed to all right of the City of Dubuque Bridge Commission under this act, and all right, title, and interest of the City of Dubuque Bridge Commission under this act to any bridge and bridges referred to in this act, subject to any outstanding obligations of said commission as hereby created, which obligations shall thereby be assumed by, and become the obligations of, the new bridge commission or board.

Sec. 14. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Be it enacted, etc., That in order to facilitate interstate commerce, improve the Postal Service, and provide for military and other purposes, the county of Allegheny, Pa., its successors and assigns, is hereby authorized to construct, maintain, and operate bridges and approaches thereto at any or all of the following points within the county of Allegheny, Pa.:

(a) Across the Monongahela River, at a point suitable to the interests of navigation, from Dravosburg, Pa., to a terminus at or near the dividing line between the city of McKeesport and the borough of Glassport, Pa., to replace the existing Dravosburg Bridge from Dravosburg to McKeesport, Pa.

(b) Across the Monongahela River, at a point suitable to the interests of navigation, from the borough of Rankin, Pa., to the borough of Whitaker, Pa., to replace the existing Rankin Bridge, all in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters," approved March 23, 1906, and subject to the conditions and limitations contained in this act.

Sec. 2. Construction of the bridges authorized by this act shall commence within 3 years after its approval by the President of the United States, and shall be completed within 5 years from the time of the said approval.

With the following committee amendments:

Page 1, strike out all of lines 3 to 9, inclusive, and insert: "That the consent of Congress is hereby granted to the county of Allegheny, Pa., its successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate free highway bridges and approaches thereto."

Page 2, line 14, after "Bridge", strike out the remainder of line 14 and all of lines 15 to 22, and in lieu thereof insert "all in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled 'An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters,' approved March 23, 1906, and subject to the conditions and limitations contained in this act."

"Sec. 2. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved."

The committee amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill granting the consent of Congress to the county of Allegheny, Pa., to construct, maintain, and operate free highway bridges across the Monongahela River, in Allegheny County, State of Pennsylvania."

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

TOLL BRIDGE ACROSS THE MISSISSIPPI RIVER BETWEEN CASSVILLE, WIS., AND GUTTENBERG, IOWA

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 6049, authorizing the village of Cassville, Wis., or its assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a toll bridge across the Mississippi River at or near Cassville, Wis., and to a place at or near the village of Guttenberg, Iowa.

There being no objection the Clerk read the bill as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in order to promote interstate commerce, improve the postal service, and provide for military and other purposes, the village of Cassville, Wis., or its assigns, be, and is hereby, authorized to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge and approaches thereto across the Mississippi River, at a point suitable to the interests of navigation, at or near Cassville, Wis., and to a place at or near Guttenberg, Iowa, in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters," approved March 23, 1906, and subject to the conditions and limitations contained in this act.

Sec. 2. There is hereby conferred upon the village of Cassville, Wis., or its assigns, all such rights and powers to enter upon lands and to acquire, condemn, occupy, possess, and use real estate and other property needed for the location, construction, maintenance, and operation of such bridge and its approaches as are possessed by railroad corporations for railroad purposes or by bridge corporations for bridge purposes in the State in which such real estate or other property is situated, upon making just compensation therefor, to be ascertained and paid according to the laws of such State, and the proceedings therefor shall be the same as in the condemnation or expropriation of property for public purposes in such State.

Sec. 3. The said village of Cassville, Wis., or its assigns, is hereby authorized to fix and charge tolls for transit over such bridge, and the rates of toll so fixed shall be the legal rates until changed by the Secretary of War under the authority contained in the act of March 23, 1906.

Sec. 4. In fixing the rates of toll to be charged for the use of such bridge the same shall be so adjusted as to provide a fund sufficient to pay for the reasonable cost of maintaining, repairing, and operating the bridge and its approaches under economical management, and to provide a sinking fund sufficient to amortize the cost of such bridge and its approaches, including reasonable interest and financing cost, as soon as possible, under reasonable charges, but within a period of not to exceed 30 years from the completion thereof. After a sinking fund sufficient for such amortization shall have been so provided, such bridge shall thereafter be maintained and operated free of tolls. An accurate record of the cost of the bridge and its approaches, the expenditures for maintaining, repairing, and operating the same, and of the daily tolls collected shall be kept and shall be available for the information of all persons interested.

Sec. 5. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

With the following committee amendment:

Page 3, line 6, strike out "thirty" and insert "twenty-five."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

BRIDGE ACROSS BLACK RIVER, BLACK ROCK, ARK.

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 6079, granting the consent of Congress to the Arkansas State Highway Commission to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge across the Black River at or near the town of Black Rock, Ark.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the consent of Congress is hereby granted to the Arkansas State Highway Commission to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge and approaches thereto across the Black River, at a point suitable to the interests of navigation, at or near the town of Black Rock, Ark., in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters," approved March 23, 1906, and subject to the conditions and limitations contained in this act.

SEC. 2. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

BRIDGE ACROSS RED RIVER, WALSH COUNTY, N. DAK.

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 6111, to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Red River at or near a point suitable to the interests of navigation, from a point in Walsh County, N. Dak., at or near the terminus of North Dakota State Highway No. 17.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Red River, at or near a point suitable to the interests of navigation from a point in Walsh County, N. Dak., at or near the terminus of North Dakota State Highway No. 17, such point being located near the dividing line between sections 18 and 19, township 157 north, range 51 west, fourth principal meridian, to a point in Marshall County, Minn., located near the dividing line between sections 17 and 20, township 157 north, range 50 west, fourth principal meridian, authorized to be built by the North Dakota State Highway and the Department of Highways of the State of Minnesota, by an act of Congress approved June 16, 1938, are hereby extended 1 and 3 years, respectively, from June 16, 1938.

SEC. 2. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

With the following committee amendments:

The committee amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

BRIDGE OVER CONNECTICUT RIVER NEAR HARTFORD, CONN.

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 6353, granting the consent of Congress to the State of Connecticut, acting by and through any agency or commission thereof, to construct, maintain, and operate a toll bridge across the Connecticut River at or near Hartford, Conn.

Mr. CLASON. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, in view of the fact that the Army engineers have reported favorably a project for navigation between Hartford and Holyoke, which may be adopted by some future Congress, I would like to have the author of this bill advise me whether or not provision is made whereby this bridge will provide at least for a clearance of 20 feet when the high water on the gage at Hartford is at 16 feet, so that it will not in any way interfere with the passage of barges and other ships which can proceed under a bridge where there is that much clearance.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Speaker, I may say to my colleague from Massachusetts that I can assure him the bridge to be built will not interfere with any navigation going north of Hartford.

Mr. CLASON. But does it provide the necessary clearance; in other words, you may be assuming that the project might not be completed in the near future, while I want to make sure that at any rate the bridge would give sufficient clearance to cover what is required under the Army project.

Mr. MILLER. I cannot say positively, except it is higher than the existing bridge at Hartford. I believe that would qualify with respect to your 20 feet at 16.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the consent of Congress is hereby granted to the State of Connecticut, acting by and through any agency or commission thereof, to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge and approaches thereto across the Connecticut River, at a point suitable to the interests of navigation, at or near Hartford, in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters," approved March 23, 1906, and subject to the conditions and limitations contained in this act.

SEC. 2. If tolls are charged for the use of such bridge, the rates of toll shall be so adjusted as to provide a fund sufficient to pay the reasonable cost of maintaining, repairing, and operating the bridge and its approaches under economical management, and to provide a sinking fund sufficient to amortize the cost of the bridge and its approaches, including reasonable interest and financing cost, as soon as possible under reasonable charges, but within a period of not to exceed 40 years from the completion thereof. After a sinking fund sufficient for such amortization shall have been so provided, such bridge shall thereafter be maintained and operated free of tolls or the rate of toll shall thereafter be so adjusted as to provide a fund of not to exceed the amount necessary for the proper maintenance, repair, and operation of the bridge and its approaches under economical management. An accurate record of the costs of the bridge and its approaches, the expenditure for maintaining, repairing, and operating the same, and of the daily tolls collected shall be kept and shall be available for the information of all persons interested.

SEC. 3. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

With the following committee amendments:

Page 2, line 11, strike out "forty", and insert "twenty-five."

Page 2, line 14, after "tolls", insert a period and strike out the balance of line 14, all of lines 15, 16, 17, and "ment." in line 18.

The committee amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

TOLL BRIDGE OVER ST. LOUIS RIVER BETWEEN MINNESOTA AND WISCONSIN

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 6475, to authorize the city of Duluth, in the State of Minnesota, to construct a toll bridge across the St. Louis River, between the States of Minnesota and Wisconsin, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the consent of Congress is hereby granted to the city of Duluth, in the State of Minnesota, to acquire and thereafter operate and maintain either or both of the existing vehicular-toll bridges across the St. Louis River, between St. Louis County in the State of Minnesota and Douglas County in the State of Wisconsin, and should said city be unable, after negotiation, to agree with the owners of the respective bridges upon a mutually satisfactory purchase price, then said city is hereby authorized to require the transfer of such bridge or bridges to said city upon payment of the price or prices computed according to the provisions for public acquisition of the bridges by the respective acts of Congress which authorized the original construction of such bridges.

SEC. 2. In order to facilitate interstate commerce, improve the postal service, and provide for military and other purposes, said city of Duluth is authorized to construct, maintain, and operate an additional vehicular-toll bridge and approaches across the St. Louis River, at a point suitable to the interests of navigation from St. Louis County in the State of Minnesota to Douglas County in the State of Wisconsin, in accordance with the provisions of an act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters", approved March 23, 1906, and subject to the conditions and limitations contained in this act. There is hereby conferred upon said city all rights and powers to enter upon lands and to acquire, condemn, occupy, possess, and use such real estate and other property as may be needed for the location, construction, operation, and maintenance of such bridge or bridges and approaches thereto as are possessed by railroad corporations for railroad purposes, or by bridge corporations for bridge purposes in the State in which such real estate or other property is situated, upon making just compensation therefor to be ascertained and paid according to the laws of the State in which such property may be located, and the proceedings therefor shall be the same as in condemnation or expropriation of property for public purposes in such State.

SEC. 3. Said city of Duluth is hereby authorized to fix and charge tolls for transit over any bridge or bridges acquired or constructed under the provisions of this act, and the rates of toll so fixed shall be such as will pay costs of operation and maintenance and amortize the cost, within the period provided herein, of such bridge or bridges as evidenced by an issue or issues of bonds to pay the cost of such bridge or bridges, which bonds may be so issued subject to and in accordance with the pertinent laws of the State of Minnesota. All such bonds shall be in a form not inconsistent with this act, and shall mature at such time or times as the city may determine, not exceeding 25 years from the date of approval of this act. The city, when it deems it to be in the best interests of the city, may issue refunding bonds to repurchase and redeem any outstanding bonds before the maturity thereof: Provided, That the refunding bonds shall mature at such time or times, not exceeding 40 years from the date of approval of this act, as the city may determine. An accurate record of the cost of any bridge or bridges and their approaches acquired or constructed, the expenditures for maintaining, repairing, and operating the same, and of the daily tolls collected, shall be kept and shall be available for the information of all persons interested.

Sec. 4. After payment of the bonds and interest, or after a sinking fund sufficient for such payment shall have been provided and shall be held for that purpose, the city shall deliver deeds or other suitable instruments of conveyance of the interest of the city in and to the bridge or bridges extending between the State of Minnesota and the State of Wisconsin, that part of said bridge or bridges within Minnesota to the State of Minnesota or any municipality or agency thereof as may be authorized by or pursuant to law to accept the same (hereafter referred to as the "Minnesota interests"), and that part of said bridge or bridges within Wisconsin, to the State of Wisconsin, or any municipality or agency thereof as may be authorized by or pursuant to law to accept the same (hereafter referred to as the "Wisconsin interests"), under the condition that the bridge or bridges shall thereafter be free of tolls and be properly maintained, operated, and repaired by the Minnesota interests and the Wisconsin interests as may be agreed upon; but if the Minnesota interests and the Wisconsin interests fail to accept or are not authorized to accept, their respective portion of said bridge or bridges, then the city may deliver deeds, or other suitable instruments of conveyance of said portions, to any other interest which may accept and may be authorized to accept the same, under the condition that the bridge or bridges shall thereafter be free of toll and be properly maintained, operated, and repaired by said interest to whom said conveyances are delivered; but if either the Minnesota interests, or the Wisconsin interests, or any other interest hereinabove mentioned shall not be authorized to accept or shall not accept the same under such conditions, then the bridge or bridges shall continue to be owned, maintained, operated, and repaired by the city of Duluth, and the rates of tolls shall be so adjusted as to provide a fund of not to exceed the amount necessary for the proper maintenance, repair, and operation of the bridge or bridges and approaches under economical management, until such time as the Minnesota interests, or the Wisconsin interests, or any other interest hereinabove mentioned shall be authorized to accept and shall accept such conveyance under such conditions. The rate or rates of toll for any bridge now or hereafter constructed across the St. Louis River, between St. Louis County in Minnesota and Douglas County in Wisconsin, shall not be reduced below the rate or rates now in effect so long as any bonds of said city of Duluth issued for account of any bridge or bridges acquired or constructed under the provisions of this act may be outstanding, subject, however, to the provisions regulating toll contained in the act of March 23, 1906.

Sec. 5. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

With the following committee amendments:

- Page 2, line 14, after "to", insert "a point in."

BRIDGE ACROSS MISSISSIPPI RIVER AT WINONA, MINN.

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 6748) to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Mississippi River at or near Winona, Minn.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Mississippi River, at or near Winona, Minn., authorized to be built by the States of Minnesota and Wisconsin, jointly or separately, by an act of Congress approved June 28, 1938, are hereby extended 1 and 3 years, respectively, from the date of approval of this act.

Sec. 2. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

BRIDGE OVER LAKE SABINE, PORT ARTHUR, TEX.

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 5525) to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge over Lake Sabine at or near Port Arthur, Tex., to amend the act of June 18, 1934 (48 Stat. 1008), and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge over Lake Sabine at or near Port Arthur, Tex., authorized to be built by the city of Port Arthur, Tex., or the Port Arthur Bridge Commission and its successors, by an act of Congress approved June 18, 1934 (48 Stat. 1008), and heretofore amended and extended by acts of Congress approved April 10, 1936, August 12 1937, and June 18, 1938, are hereby further extended 1 and 3 years, respectively, from August 12, 1938.

SEC. 2. The said act approved June 18, 1934 (48 Stat. 1008), as heretofore amended and extended, is further amended as follows: (a) The second sentence of section 4 of said act is amended to read: "After a sinking fund sufficient for such amortization shall have been so provided, such bridge shall thereafter be maintained and operated free of tolls."

(b) Section 5 of said act is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 5. There is hereby created a body corporate and politic to be known as the 'Port Arthur Bridge Commission,' which shall have and possess all powers necessary, convenient, or proper for carrying into effect the objects stated in this act, as amended."

(c) Section 6 of said act is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 6. The Commission shall consist of Fred L. Bachert, Frank J. Imhoff, Henry J. LeBlanc, C. W. Loeb, B. T. McWhorter, Jr., Benson Vincent, and W. E. Holbrook.

"Each member of the Commission shall qualify within 30 days after the approval of this amendatory act by filing in the office of the Secretary of Agriculture an oath that he will faithfully perform the duties imposed upon him by this act, as amended, and each person hereafter appointed to fill a vacancy shall qualify in like manner within 30 days after his appointment. Any vacancy occurring in said commission by reason of failure to qualify as above provided, or by reason of death, expiration of term, or resignation, shall be filled by the Secretary of Agriculture. The commission shall elect a chairman and a vice chairman from its members, may employ a secretary, treasurer, engineers, attorneys, experts, and fix their compensation, and may establish rules and regulations for the government of its own business. A majority of the members shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business. Before the issuance of bonds as herein provided, each member of the commission shall give such bond as may be fixed by the Chief of the Bureau of Public Roads of the Department of Agriculture, conditioned upon the faithful performance of all duties required by this act, as amended. Each member of the commission shall serve for a term of 5 years and until his successor has been appointed and has qualified as herein provided, except that the initial terms of the above-named members shall be, respectively, in the order above named, 1, 2, 3, 4, and 5 years. No member shall receive a salary for his services as a member, but each member shall be paid his actual expenses not exceeding per day in the performance of his duties hereunder. All salaries and expenses shall be paid solely from funds provided under the authority of this act, as amended."

(d) The portion of section 9 of said act which reads as follows: "Then the bridge shall continue to be owned, maintained, operated, insured, and repaired by the Commission, and the rates of tolls shall be so adjusted as to provide a fund not to exceed the amount necessary for the proper maintenance, repair, insurance, and operation of the bridge and its approaches under economical management, including reasonable reserves, until such time as the Texan interests or the Louisiana interests, or both, shall be authorized to accept and shall accept such conveyance under the conditions aforesaid," is amended so as to read as follows: "then the bridge shall continue to be owned, maintained, operated, insured, and repaired by the Commission as a free bridge until such time as the Texas interests or the Louisiana interests, or both, shall be authorized to accept and shall accept such conveyance under the conditions aforesaid."

SEC. 3. The Commission created by section 2 (b) and (c) of this amendatory act, when its members have qualified as provided, shall be deemed the successor commission to any commission heretofore operating and functioning pursuant to the provisions of the said act approved June 18, 1934 (48 Stat. 1008), as heretofore amended and extended.

SEC. 4. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

With the following committee amendments:

Page 2, line 1, after "June", strike out "18" and insert "14."

RESERVE LANDS, THE TERRITORY OF ALASKA

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 3025) to amend an act entitled "An act to reserve lands to the Territory of Alaska for educational uses, and for other purposes," approved March 4, 1915 (38 Stat. 1214-1215).

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the act of Congress approved March 4, 1915 (38 Stat. L. 1214-1215), being an act to reserve lands of the Territory of Alaska for educational uses, and for other purposes, be, and the same is hereby, amended by adding to the second proviso of the first section of said act at the end of said proviso the following: "and to sell from the said land all timber and mineral products, or either, on the land or beneath the same."

With the following committee amendment:

Strike out all of lines 7, 8, 9, and 10, and insert the following: "the first section of the act the following: 'Timber on the reserved lands may be sold by the Secretary of the Interior under the provisions of section 11 of the act of Congress approved May 14, 1898 (30 Stat. 409-414), and such lands and the minerals therein shall be subject to disposition under the mining and mineral leasing laws of the United States, upon conditions providing for compensation to any Territorial lessee for any resulting damages to crops or improvements on such lands, but the entire proceeds or income derived by the United States from such sale of timber and disposition of the lands or the minerals therein are hereby appropriated and set apart as permanent funds in the Territorial treasury, to be invested and the income expended for the same purposes and in the manner hereinbefore provided for. Any leases issued by the Territory after a valid appropriation of such reserved lands under the mining laws or the mineral leasing laws of the United States shall be with due regard to the rights of the mineral claimant.'

"The Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to make all necessary rules and regulations in harmony with the provisions and purposes of this act for the purpose of carrying the same into effect."

The committee amendment was agreed to, and the bill, as amended, was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

UNITED STATES EMPLOYEES' COMPENSATION ACT

The Clerk called the bill (S. 1021) to extend the benefits of the United States Employees' Compensation Act to members of the Officers' Reserve Corps and of the Enlisted Reserve Corps of the Army who are physically injured in line of duty while performing active duty or engaged in authorized training, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That if in time of peace any member of the Officers' Reserve Corps or of the Enlisted Reserve Corps of the Army is physically injured in line of duty (1) while on active duty, or (2) when engaged in authorized travel to and from such duty, or (3) when engaged in authorized training without pay, or dies as the result of such physical injury, he or his beneficiary shall be entitled to all the benefits prescribed by law for civil employees of the United States who are physically injured in line of duty or who die as a result thereof, and the United States Employees' Compensation Commission shall have jurisdiction in such cases and shall perform the same duties with reference thereto as in the cases of civil employees of the United States so injured: Provided, That in no case shall sickness or disease be regarded as an injury within the meaning of this act relating to members of the Officers' Reserve Corps and of the Enlisted Reserve Corps of the Army: Provided further, That employees' compensation under this act shall not be paid concurrently with active-duty pay or pension based upon military service, and in the event a person becomes eligible for the benefits of the United States Employees' Compensation Act and is also eligible for, or is in receipt of, a pension based upon military service, he shall elect which benefit to receive: Provided further, That authorized training without pay is defined as inactive-status training under written authorization by competent military authority covering a specific training assignment and prescribing a time limit: Provided further, That Reserve Officers entitled to the benefits of the last proviso of section 5 of the act of April 3, 1939 (Public, No. 18, 76th Cong.), shall not be entitled to the benefits of this act: And provided further, That nothing herein shall be construed to authorize compensation benefits for any period prior to the approval of this act.

With the following committee amendments:

Strike out all language beginning on page 2, line 8, down to and including the word "Army" in line 11, and substitute for the clause stricken out the following: "That the benefits shall accrue to any such member, or his beneficiary, whether the disability or death is the result of sickness or disease contracted in line of duty while on active duty when such sickness or disease is proximately caused by service on active duty."

On page 2, line 21, following the colon after the word "limit", insert the following: "Provided further, That for the purpose of determining the benefits to which entitled under the provisions of this act members of the Officers' Reserve Corps or of the Enlisted Reserve Corps of the Army physically injured when engaged in authorized training without pay will be held and considered as receiving the pay and allowances they would have received if in a pay status."

The committee amendments were agreed to and the bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

COMMISSIONED PERSONNEL OF COAST GUARD

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 5611) to amend section 9 of the act of July 3, 1926 (44 Stat. 817), entitled "An act to readjust the commissioned personnel of the Coast Guard, and for other purposes."

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the second sentence of section 9 of the act of July 3, 1926 (44 Stat. 817), entitled "An act to readjust the commissioned personnel of the Coast Guard, and for other purposes," is amended to read as follows: "A district commander of less than 5 years' commissioned service as district commander shall have the rank, pay, and allowances of a lieutenant, and, after 5 years' commissioned service as district commander, he shall have the rank, pay, and allowances of a lieutenant commander, and, after 15 years' commissioned service as district commander, he shall have the rank, pay, and allowances of a commander"; and that the third sentence of said section is amended to read as follows: "An original appointment as district commander shall be made under regulations prescribed by the President from the chief boatswains (lifelines) of the Coast Guard: Provided, That all officers commissioned as district commanders prior to the passage of this act shall continue in precedence among themselves as district commanders as set forth in the Official Register of the United States Coast Guard, dated July 1, 1938, and the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, is hereby authorized to advance in rank and to issue a new commission to any such officer when necessary to maintain such precedence: Provided further, That no officer now serving as district commander shall suffer any reduction in rank, pay, or allowances, or lose any right to promotion which he would have except for the enactment of this act, by reason of the provisions of this act: And provided further, That any officer hereafter appointed a district commander shall not suffer any loss of pay or allowances by reason of such appointment."

With the following committee amendment:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

"That section 9 of the act entitled 'An act to readjust the commissioned personnel of the Coast Guard, and for other purposes,' approved July 3, 1926 (44 Stat. 817), is hereby amended by striking out the second and third sentences and substituting in lieu thereof the following:

"All officers in the grades of district commander and constructor on active duty are hereby transferred to the line of the Coast Guard and shall be commissioned in the grades of commander, lieutenant commander, and lieutenant, according to the ranks held by them on the date of such transfer, and shall when so transferred and commissioned take precedence (1) with each other in their respective grades, according to length of commissioned service as district commander or constructor, as the case may be, (2) with other line officers in such grades, according to length of service in the ranks held by them on the date of such transfer, and (3) in higher grades to which they may be promoted, according to the dates of commissions in such higher grades: Provided, That the President is hereby authorized to appoint Charles Walker to the grade of lieutenant commander with precedence next after Irwin B. Steele. Each officer commissioned pursuant to this section shall be an extra number in his grade and in the grades to which he may be promoted, and shall be eligible for promotion, if otherwise qualified, whenever the officer in a regular number in line of promotion next above him on the seniority list becomes eligible for promotion; or if there be no such officer in his grade, he shall be eligible for promotion, if otherwise qualified, when a vacancy occurs in the next higher grade. Any officer commissioned pursuant to this section shall be assigned to duty in his specialty and the professional examination of such officer for promotion shall embrace only those subjects pertaining to such specialty."

"Sec. 2. Each vacancy existing in the grade of constructor and in the grade of district commander on the date of the approval of this act, and each vacancy which shall hereafter occur in the extra number of officers commissioned pursuant to this act, shall operate to increase by one the total number of line officers in the Coast Guard authorized by section 1 of the act of March 2, 1929 (45 Stat. 1533), as amended.

"Sec. 3. No officer commissioned pursuant to this act shall suffer any reduction in rank, pay, or allowances by reason of the provisions of this act, or lose any right to promotion which he would have had but for the enactment of this act.

"Sec. 4. The grades of district commander and constructor on the active list in the Coast Guard are hereby abolished, and all provisions of law in conflict with this act are hereby repealed."

The committee amendment was agreed to and the bill, as amended, was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

RECLAMATION PROJECT ACT OF 1939

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (H. R. 6984) to provide a feasible and comprehensive plan for the variable payment of construction charges on United States reclamation projects, to protect the investment of the United States in such projects, and for other purposes.

Mr. HOLMES. Reserving the right to object—

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will state that the calendar has been called as far as bills that are eligible under the rule, but, of course, by unanimous consent any bill may be called up.

The Clerk will report the bill by title.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Reserving the right to object, do I understand this is the bill to which the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CRAWFORD] objected?

Mr. CRAWFORD. No. This is not the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That for the purpose of providing for United States reclamation projects a feasible and comprehensive plan for variable payments of construction charges which can be met regularly and fully from year to year during periods of decline in agricultural income and unsatisfactory conditions of agriculture as well as during periods of prosperity and good prices for agricultural products, and which will protect adequately the financial interest of the United States in said projects, obligations to pay construction charges may be revised or undertaken pursuant to the provisions of this act.

Sec. 2. As used in this act—

(a) The term "Federal reclamation laws" shall mean the act of June 17, 1902 (32 Stat. 388), and all acts amendatory thereof or supplementary thereto.

(b) The term "Secretary" shall mean the Secretary of the Interior.

(c) The term "project" shall mean any reclamation or irrigation project, including incidental features thereof, authorized by the Federal reclamation laws, or constructed by the United States pursuant to said laws, or in connection with which there is a repayment contract executed by the United States, pursuant to said laws, or any project constructed or operated and maintained by the Secretary through the Bureau of Reclamation for the reclamation of arid lands or other purposes.

(d) The term "construction charges" shall mean the amounts of principal obligations payable to the United States under water-right applications, repayment contracts, orders of the Secretary, or other forms of obligation entered into pursuant to the Federal reclamation laws, excepting amounts payable for water rental or power charges, operation and maintenance and other yearly service charges, and excepting also any other operation and maintenance, interest, or other charges which are not covered into the principal sums of the construction accounts of the Bureau of Reclamation.

(e) The term "repayment contract" shall mean any contract providing for payment of construction charges to the United States.

(f) The term "project contract unit" shall mean a project or any substantial area of a project which is covered or is proposed to be covered by a repayment contract. On any project where two or more repayment contracts in part cover the same area and in part different areas, the area covered by each such repayment contract shall be a separate project contract unit. On any project where there are either two or more repayment contracts on a single project contract unit or two or more project contract units, the repayment contracts or project contract units may be merged by agreements in form satisfactory to the Secretary.

(g) The term "organization" shall mean any conservancy district, irrigation district, water users' association, or other organization, which is organized under State law and which has capacity to enter into contracts with the United States pursuant to the Federal reclamation laws.

(h) The term "annual returns" shall mean the amount of the annual gross crop returns per acre of the area in cultivation within the project contract unit involved; and the term "normal returns" for any year shall mean the weighted average of the annual returns of those 10 years, of the 13-year period covering said year, and the 12 years preceding it, in which the annual returns are the highest.

(i) The term "division of a project" shall mean any part of a project designated as a division by order of the Secretary or any phase or feature of project operations given a separate designation as a division by order of the Secretary for the purposes of orderly and efficient administration.

(j) The term "development unit" shall mean a part of a project which, for purposes of orderly engineering or reclamation development, is designated as a development unit by order of the Secretary.

(k) The term "irrigation block" shall mean an area of arid or semiarid lands in a project in which, in the judgment of the Secretary, the irrigable lands should be reclaimed and put under irrigation at substantially the same time, and which is designated as an irrigation block by order of the Secretary.

Sec. 3. In connection with any repayment contract or other form of obligation, existing on the date of this act, to pay construction charges, providing for repayment on the basis of a definite period, the Secretary is hereby authorized, upon request by the water users involved or their duly authorized representatives for amendment under this section of said contract or other form of obligation, and if in the Secretary's judgment such amendment is both practicable and in keeping with the general purpose of this act, to amend said contract or other form of obligation so as to provide that the construction charges remaining unaccrued on the date of the amendment, or any later date agreed upon, shall be spread in definite annual installments on the basis of a longer definite period fixed in each case by the Secretary: Provided, That for any construction charges said longer period shall not exceed 40 years, exclusive of 1931 and subsequent years to the extent of moratoria or deferments of construction charges due and payable for such years effected pursuant to acts of Congress, from the date when the first installment of said construction charges became due and payable under the original obligation to pay said construction charges and in no event shall the unexpired part of said longer period exceed double the number of remaining years, as of the date of the amendment made pursuant to this act, in which installments of said construction charges would become due and payable under said existing repayment contract or other form of obligation to pay construction charges.

Sec. 4. (a) In connection with any existing project on which construction charges are payable to the United States, the Secretary is hereby authorized to negotiate and enter into a contract or an amendatory contract, in a form satisfactory to him, with an organization, satisfactory in form and powers to him, representing the water users of the project contract unit involved, which contract shall provide for the payment of construction charges on said project contract unit in the manner hereinafter provided in this section. The negotiation and execution of such a contract shall be undertaken only upon request by duly authorized representatives of the water users involved for such a contract and upon a determination by the Secretary that, in his judgment, such a contract is both practicable and in keeping with the general purpose of this act.

(b) All of the construction charges for the project contract unit remaining unaccrued on the date of the contract entered into pursuant to this section or on any later date agreed upon shall be merged in a total and general repayment obligation of the organization. Said repayment obligation of said organization shall be scheduled in such annual installments as, in the judgment of the Secretary, constitute an equitable, practicable, and definite consolidated schedule of the existing obligations in said project contract unit to pay construction charges: Provided, That said schedule of installments shall be so arranged that in the judgment of the Secretary it does not involve for any of said construction charges merged into said general obligation an extension of the time permitted under the existing obligations for payment of said charges excepting the adjustment of the repayment period permitted for certain charges by the last sentence of this subsection. For the purpose of scheduling said installments of said general obligation in accordance with this subsection, in connection with each project contract unit under an existing contract made pursuant to section 4 of the act of December 5, 1924 (43 Stat. 672, 701), the Secretary shall fix a weighted average gross crop return per acre, of which 5 percent shall be the measure for determining the schedule of the unaccrued construction charges in a definite number of annual installments. In the event the said existing obligations to pay construction charges in said project contract unit or units are based in part on section 4 of the act of December 5, 1924 (43 Stat. 672, 701), and in part on other acts of the Federal reclamation laws, said charges may be consolidated into two general repayment contract obligations of said organization, each of which shall be scheduled in such installments as, in the judgment of the Secretary, constitute an equitable, practicable, and definite consolidated schedule of all of the respective parts of said existing obligations to pay construction charges. Any of said unaccrued construction charges, which under said existing obligations are payable on the basis of a definite period, first may be adjusted by the Secretary, if in his judgment such adjustment is both practicable and in keeping with the general purpose of this act, to a repayment basis of a longer definite period fixed in each case by him: Provided, That for any such construction charges said longer period shall not exceed the limitations contained in the proviso of section 3 of this act.

(c) For each project contract unit where a repayment contract is entered into pursuant to this section, a census of annual returns shall be taken each year. The normal returns each year, for each such project contract unit, shall be determined by the Secretary: Provided, That in any year, if the Secretary deems it necessary, an estimate of the annual returns of that year, in lieu of a final determination thereof, shall be considered with the annual returns of the preceding 12 years: Provided further, That in the event records of annual returns of the lands involved are not available for 12 preceding years, the Secretary, until such records for 12 preceding years have been established, in his discretion may consider established annual returns of other and similar lands in other and similar project contract units for the purpose of determining each year the normal returns. The estimates and final determinations of annual returns and the determinations of normal returns provided for in this act shall be made by the Secretary with such assistance from the water users and organization involved as he requests, and said estimates and determinations made by him shall be conclusive.

(d) For each project contract unit where a repayment contract is entered into pursuant to this section, each year the percent of the normal returns for said year by which the annual returns of said year exceed or are less than said normal returns shall be determined by the Secretary. For each unit or major fraction of a unit of said percentage of said increase or decrease there shall be an increase or decrease, respectively, of 2 percent in the amount or amounts of the installment or installments for said year under the organization's obligation or obligations as determined under subsections (b) and (e) of this section. Said latter amount or amounts as thus increased or decreased shall be the payment or payments of construction charges due and payable for said year, except that in no event shall the amount of the said payment or payments due and payable for any year be less than 15 percent of the amount or amounts of the installment or installments for said year under the organization's obligation or obligations as determined under subsections (b) and (e) of this section.

(e) In each contract entered into pursuant to this section, there shall be such provisions as the Secretary deems equitable, necessary, and proper to provide that any part of the amount of any installment of an organization's obligation, as determined under subsection (b) of this section, which, in the year for which said installment is designated under said subsection (b), does not, by reason of the operation of subsection (d) of this section, become due and payable as construction charges for said year, shall be added to an installment or installments of subsequent years for which installments are designated under said subsection (b) or shall be established as an installment or installments or parts thereof of years subsequent to the last year for which an installment is designated under said subsection (b), or both; and there shall be similar provisions respecting any such part of the amount of any installment modified or established under this subsection: Provided, That under this subsection no installment may be revised to or established in an amount exceeding the amount of the largest installment as determined under said subsection (b), and there shall be included in the contract such provisions as the Secretary deems proper for offsetting the increases and decreases in annual installments which result from the operation of said subsection (d).

(f) In any contract entered into pursuant to the authority of this section, it shall be provided that from and after the date of the last installment of the organization's repayment contract obligation or obligations as determined under subsection (b) of this section, a charge of 3 percent per annum shall be payable by the organization on any balance or balances of said organization's obligation or obligations which have not become due and payable by reason of the operation of subsection (d) of this section, until the same have become due and payable as construction charges under said subsection (d), and said charge of 3 percent shall be payable by the organization to the United States on the same dates as, and in addition to, the annual payments otherwise required under this section.

(g) There may be included in any contract entered into pursuant to the authority of this section provisions requiring the organization to vary its distribution of construction charges in a manner that takes into account the productivity of the various classes of lands and the benefits accruing to the lands by reason of the irrigation thereof: Provided, That no distribution of construction charges over the lands included in the organization shall in any manner be deemed to relieve the organization, or any party or any land therein, of the organization's general obligation to repay to the United States in full the total amount of the organization's repayment contract obligation or obligations as determined under subsection (b) of this section.

Sec. 5. The Secretary in his discretion may require, in connection with any contract entered into pursuant to the authority of this act, that the contract provide (1) that the payments for each year to be made to the United States shall become due and payable on such date or dates, not exceeding two, in each year as the Secretary determines will be substantially contemporaneous with the time or times in each year when water users receive crop returns; and (2) if the contract be with an organization, that assessments or levies for the purpose of obtaining moneys sufficient to meet the organization's payments under said contract shall be made and shall become due and payable within a certain period or periods of time prior to the date or dates on which the organization's payments to the United States are due and payable, said period or periods of time to be agreed upon in each said contract.

The Secretary may provide such deferments of construction charges as in his judgment are necessary to prevent said requirements from resulting in inequitable pyramiding of payments of said charges.

Sec. 6. In connection with any contract, relating to construction charges, entered into pursuant to the authority of this act, the Secretary is hereby authorized to require such provisions as he deems proper to secure the adoption of proper accounting, to protect the condition of project works and to provide for the proper use thereof, and to protect project lands against deterioration due to improper use of water. Any such contract shall require advance payment of adequate operation and maintenance charges. The Secretary is further authorized, in his discretion, to require such provisions as he deems proper to penalize delinquencies in payments of construction charges or operation and maintenance charges: Provided, That in any event there shall be penalties imposed on account of delinquencies of not less than one-half of 1 percent per month of the delinquent charge from and after the date when such charge becomes due and payable: Provided further, That any such contract shall require that no water shall be delivered to lands or parties which are in arrears in the advance payment of operation and maintenance or toll charges, or to lands or parties which are in arrears for more than 12 months in the payment of construction charges due from such lands or parties to the United States or to the organization in which the lands or parties are included, or to any lands or parties included in an organization which is in arrears in the advance payment of operation and maintenance or toll charges or in arrears more than 12 months in the payment of construction charges due from such organization to the United States.

Sec. 7. (a) The Secretary is hereby authorized and directed to investigate the repayment problems of any existing project contract unit in connection with which, in his judgment, a contract under section 3 or 4 of this act would be impracticable, and to negotiate a contract which, in his judgment, both would provide fair and equitable treatment of the repayment problems involved and would be in keeping with the general purpose of this act.

(b) For any project, division of a project, development unit of a project, or supplemental works on a project, now under construction or for which appropriations have been made, and in connection with which a repayment contract has not been executed, allocations of costs may be made in accordance with the provisions of section 9 of this act and a repayment contract may be negotiated, in the discretion of the Secretary, (1) pursuant to the authority of subsection (a) of this section or (2) in accordance, as near as may be, with the provisions in subsection 9 (d) or 9 (e) of this act. In connection with any such project, division, or development unit, on which the majority of the lands involved are public lands of the United States, the Secretary, prior to entering into a repayment contract, may fix a development period for each irrigation block, if any, of not to exceed 10 years from and including the first year in which water is delivered for the lands in said block: Provided, That in the event a development period is fixed prior to execution of a repayment contract, execution thereof shall be a condition precedent to delivery of water after the close of the development period. During any such development period water shall be delivered to the lands in the irrigation block involved only on a toll-charge basis, at a charge per annum per acre-foot to be fixed by the Secretary each year and to be collected in advance of delivery of water. Pending negotiation and execution of a repayment contract for any other such project, division, or development unit, water may be delivered for a period of not more than 5 years from the date of this act on the same toll-charge basis. Any such toll charges collected and which the Secretary determines to be in excess of the cost of operation and maintenance during the toll-charge period shall be credited to the construction cost of the project in the manner determined by the Secretary.

(c) The Secretary from time to time shall report to the Congress on any proposed contracts negotiated pursuant to the authority of subsection (a) or (b) (1) of this section, and he may execute any such contract on behalf of the United States only after approval thereof has been given by act of Congress.

Sec. 8. (a) The Secretary is hereby authorized and directed in the manner hereinafter provided to classify or to reclassify, from time to time but not more often than at 5-year intervals, as to irrigability and productivity those lands which have been, are, or may be included within any project.

(b) No classification or reclassification pursuant to the authority of this act shall be undertaken unless a request therefor, by an organization or duly authorized representatives of the water users, in the form required by subsection (c) of this section has been made of the Secretary. The Secretary shall plan the classification work, undertaken pursuant to the authority of this section, in such manner as in his judgment will result in the most expeditious completion of the work.

(c) In any request made to the Secretary for a land classification or reclassification under this section, the organization or representatives of the water users shall furnish a list of those lands which are considered to be of comparatively low productivity or to be nonproductive, and of those lands which are considered to be of greater or lesser productivity than indicated by existing classifications, if any, made pursuant to the Federal reclamation laws, and shall furnish also such data relating thereto as the Secretary by regulation may require.

(d) Upon receipt of any such request the Secretary shall make a preliminary determination whether the requested land classification or reclassification probably is justified by reason of the conditions of the lands involved and other pertinent conditions of the project, including its contractual relations with the United States.

(e) If the Secretary finds probable justification and if the advance to the United States hereinafter required is made, he shall undertake as soon as practicable the classification or reclassification of the lands listed in the request, and of any other lands which have been, are, or may be included within the project involved and which in his judgment should be classified or reclassified.

(f) As soon as practicable after completion of the classification work undertaken pursuant to this section, or from time to time, the Secretary shall report to Congress on the classifications and reclassifications made and shall include in his report, as to each project involved, his recommendations, if any, for remedial legislation.

(g) One-half of the expense involved in any classification work undertaken pursuant to this section shall be charged to operation and maintenance administration nonreimbursable; and one-half shall be paid in advance by the organization involved. On determining probable justification for the requested classification or reclassification as provided in this section, the Secretary shall estimate the cost of the work involved and shall submit a statement of the estimated cost to said organization. Said organization, before commencement of the work, shall advance to the United States one-half of the amount set forth in said statement and also shall advance one-half of the amount of supplementary estimates of costs which the Secretary may find it necessary to make from time to time during the progress of the work; and said amounts shall be and remain available for expenditure by the Secretary for the purposes for which they are advanced, until the work is completed or abandoned. After completion or abandonment of the work, the Secretary shall determine the actual costs thereof; and said organization shall pay any additional amount required to make its total payments hereunder equal to one-half of the actual cost or shall be credited with any amount by which advances made by it exceed one-half of said actual cost, as the case may be.

(h) If in the judgment of the Secretary a classification or reclassification pursuant to the provisions of this section is a necessary preliminary to entering into a contract under section 3 or 4 of this act, he may require the same as a condition precedent to entering into such a contract.

(i) No modification of any existing obligation to pay construction charges on any project shall be made by reason of any classification or reclassification undertaken pursuant to this section without express authority therefor granted by Congress upon recommendations of the Secretary made in a report under subsection (f) of this section.

Sec. 9. (a) No expenditures for the construction of any new project, new division of a project, or new supplemental works on a project shall be made, nor shall estimates be submitted therefor, by the Secretary until after he has made an investigation thereof and has submitted to the President and to the Congress his report and findings on—

- (1) the engineering feasibility of the proposed construction;
- (2) the estimated cost of the proposed construction;
- (3) the part of the estimated cost which can properly be allocated to irrigation and probably be repaid by the water users;
- (4) the part of the estimated cost which can properly be allocated to power and probably be returned to the United States in net power revenues;

(5) the part of the estimated cost which can properly be allocated to municipal water supply or other miscellaneous purposes and probably be returned to the United States.

If the proposed construction is found by the Secretary to have engineering feasibility and if the repayable and returnable allocations to irrigation, power, and municipal water supply or other miscellaneous purposes found by the Secretary to be proper, together with any allocation to flood control or navigation made under subsection (b) of this section, equal the total estimated cost of construction as determined by the Secretary, then the new project, new division of a project, or supplemental works on a project, covered by his findings, shall be deemed authorized and may be undertaken by the Secretary. If all such allocations do not equal said total estimated cost, then said new project, new divisions, or new supplemental works may be undertaken by the Secretary only after provision therefor has been made by act of Congress enacted after the Secretary has submitted to the President and the Congress the report and findings involved.

(b) In connection with any new project, new division of a project, or supplemental works on a project there may be allocated to flood control or navigation the part of said total estimated cost which the Secretary may find to be proper. Items for any such allocations made in connection with projects which may be undertaken pursuant to subsection (a) of this section shall be included in the estimates of appropriations submitted by the Secretary for said projects, and funds for such portions of the projects shall not become available except as directly appropriated or allotted to the Department of the Interior. In connection with the making of such an allocation, the Secretary shall consult with the Chief of Engineers and the Secretary of War, and may perform any of the necessary investigations or studies under a cooperative agreement with the Secretary of War. In the event of such an allocation the Secretary of the Interior shall operate the project for purposes of flood control or navigation, to the extent justified by said allocation therefor.

(c) The Secretary is authorized to enter into contracts to furnish water for municipal water supply or miscellaneous purposes: Provided, That any such contract either (1) shall require repayment to the United States, over a period of not to exceed 40 years from the year in which water is first delivered for the use of the contracting party, with interest not exceeding the rate of 3½ percent per annum if the Secretary determines an interest charge to be proper, of an appropriate share as determined by the Secretary of that part of the construction costs allocated by him to municipal water supply or other miscellaneous purposes; or (2) shall be for such periods, not to exceed 40 years, and at such rates as in the Secretary's judgment will produce revenues at least sufficient to cover an appropriate share of the annual operation and maintenance cost and an appropriate share of such fixed charges as the Secretary deems proper, and shall require the payment of said rates each year in advance of delivery of water for said year. Any sale of electric power or lease of power privileges, made by the Secretary in connection with the operation of any project or division of a project, shall be for such periods, not to exceed 40 years, and at such rates as in his judgment will produce power revenues at least sufficient to cover an appropriate share of the annual operation and maintenance cost, interest on an appropriate share of the construction investment at not less than 3½ percent per annum, and such other fixed charges as the Secretary deems proper: Provided further, That in said sales or leases preference shall be given to municipalities and other public corporations or agencies and to cooperatives. Nothing in this subsection shall be applicable to provisions in existing contracts, made pursuant to law, for the use of power and miscellaneous revenues of a project for the benefit of users of water from such project. The provisions of this subsection respecting the terms of sales of electric power and leases of power privileges shall be in addition and alternative to any authority in existing laws relating to particular projects. No contract relating to municipal water supply or miscellaneous purposes or to electric power or power privileges shall be made unless, in the judgment of the Secretary, it will not impair the efficiency of the project for irrigation purposes.

(d) No water may be delivered for irrigation of lands in connection with any new project, new division of a project, or supplemental works on a project until an organization, satisfactory in form and powers to the Secretary, has entered into a repayment contract with the United States, in a form satisfactory to the Secretary, providing among other things—

(1) That the Secretary may fix a development period for each irrigation block, if any, of not to exceed 10 years from and including the first calendar year in which water is delivered for the lands in said block; and that during the development period water shall be delivered to the lands in the irrigation block involved at a charge per annum per acre-foot, or other charge, to be fixed by the Secretary each year and to be paid in advance of delivery of water: Provided, That where the lands included in an irrigation block are for the most part lands owned by the United States, the Secretary, prior to execution of a repayment contract, may fix a development period, but in such case execution of such a contract shall be a condition precedent to delivery of water after the close of the development period. After the close of the development period, any such charges collected and which the Secretary determines to be in excess of the cost of the operation and maintenance during the development period shall be credited to the construction cost of the project in the manner determined by the Secretary.

(2) That the part of the construction costs allocated by the Secretary to irrigation shall be included in a general repayment obligation of the organization; and that the organization may vary its distribution of construction charges in a manner that takes into account the productivity of the various classes of lands and the benefits accruing to the lands by reason of the construction: Provided, That no distribution of construction charges over the lands included in the organization shall in any manner be deemed to relieve the organization or any party or any land therein of the organization's general obligation to the United States.

(3) That the general repayment obligation of the organization shall be spread in annual installments, of the number and amounts fixed by the Secretary, over a period not exceeding 40 years, exclusive of any development period fixed under subsection (d) (1) of this section, for any project contract unit, or for any irrigation block, if the project contract unit be divided into two or more irrigation blocks.

(4) That the first annual installment for any project contract unit, or for any irrigation block, as the case may be, shall accrue, on the date fixed by the Secretary, in the year after the last year of the development period or, if there be no development period, in the calendar year after the Secretary announces that the construction contemplated in the repayment contract is substantially completed or is advanced to a point where delivery of water can be made to substantially all of the lands in said unit or block to be irrigated; and if there be no development period fixed, that prior to and including the year in which the Secretary makes said announcement water shall be delivered only on the toll charge basis hereinbefore provided for development periods.

(5) Either (A) that each year the installment of the organization's repayment obligation scheduled for such year shall be the construction charges due and payable by the organization for such year, or (B) that each year the installment for such year of the organization's repayment obligation shall be increased or decreased on the basis of the normal and percentages plan provided in section 4 of this act for modification of existing obligations to pay construction charges, and the amount of the annual installment of the organization's obligation, as thus increased or decreased, shall be the construction charges due and payable for such year. Under "(B)" of this subsection the provisions of section 4 of this act shall be applicable, as near as may be, to the repayment contract made in connection with the new project, new division of a project, or supplemental works on a project; and the organization shall make payments on the basis therein provided until its general repayment obligation has become due and payable to the United States in full.

(e) In lieu of entering into a repayment contract pursuant to the provisions of subsection (d) of this section to cover that part of the cost of the construction of works connected with water supply and allocated to irrigation, the Secretary, in his discretion, may enter into either short- or long-term contracts to furnish water for irrigation purposes. Each such contract shall be for such period, not to exceed 40 years, and at such rates as in the Secretary's judgment will produce revenues at least sufficient to cover an appropriate share of the annual operation and maintenance cost and an appropriate share of such fixed charges as the Secretary deems proper, due consideration being given to that part of the cost of construction of works connected with water supply and allocated to irrigation; and shall require payment of said rates each year in advance of delivery of water for said year. In the event such contracts are made for furnishing water for irrigation purposes, the costs of any irrigation water distribution works constructed by the United States in connection with the new project, new division of a project, or supplemental works on a project, shall be covered by a repayment contract entered into pursuant to said subsection (d).

Sec. 10. The Secretary, in his discretion, may (a) permit the removal, from lands or interests in lands withdrawn or acquired and being administered under the Federal reclamation laws in connection with the construction or operation and maintenance of any project, of sand, gravel, and other minerals and building materials with or without competitive bidding: Provided, That removals may be permitted without charge if for use by a public agency in the construction of public roads or streets within any project or in its immediate vicinity; and (b) grant leases, licenses, easements, or rights-of-way, for periods not to exceed 50 years, affecting lands or interests in lands withdrawn or acquired and being administered under the Federal reclamation laws in connection with the construction or operation and maintenance of any project. Such permits or grants shall be made only when, in the judgment of the Secretary, their exercise will not be incompatible with the purposes for which the lands or interests in lands are being administered, and shall be on such terms and conditions as in his judgment will adequately protect the interests of the United States and the project for which said lands or interests in lands are being administered.

Sec. 11. The Secretary in his discretion, in any instances where property to be sold under the act of February 2, 1911 (36 Stat. 805), or the act of May 20, 1920 (41 Stat. 605), is appraised at not to exceed $300, may sell said property at public or private sale without complying with the provisions of said acts as to notice, publication, and mode of sale.

Sec. 12. When appropriations have been made for the commencement or continuation of construction or operation and maintenance of any project, the Secretary may, in connection with such construction or operation and maintenance, enter into contracts for miscellaneous services, for materials and supplies, as well as for construction, which may cover such periods of time as the Secretary may consider necessary but in which the liability of the United States shall be contingent upon appropriations being made therefor.

Sec. 13. The purchase of supplies and equipment or the procurement of services for the Bureau of Reclamation at the seat of government and elsewhere may be made in the open market without compliance with section 3709 or section 3744 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, in the manner common among businessmen, when the aggregate payment for the purchase or the services does not exceed $300 in any instance.

Sec. 14. The Secretary is hereby authorized, in connection with the construction or operation and maintenance of any project, (a) to purchase or condemn suitable lands or interests in lands for relocation of highways, roadways, railroads, telegraph, telephone, or electric transmission lines, or any other properties whatsoever, the relocation of which in the judgment of the Secretary is necessitated by said construction or operation and maintenance, and to perform any or all work involved in said relocations on said lands or interests in lands, other lands or interests in lands owned and held by the United States in connection with the construction or operation and maintenance of said project, or properties not owned by the United States; (b) to enter into contracts with the owners of said properties whereby they undertake to acquire any or all property needed for said relocation, or to perform any or all work involved in said relocations; and (c) for the purpose of effecting completely said relocations, to convey or exchange Government properties acquired or improved under (a) above, with or without improvements, or other properties owned and held by the United States in connection with the construction or operation and maintenance of said project, or to grant perpetual easements therein or thereover. Grants or conveyances hereunder shall be by instruments executed by the Secretary without regard to provisions of law governing the patenting of public lands.

The Secretary is further authorized for the purpose of orderly and economical construction or operation and maintenance of any project, to enter into such contracts for exchange or replacement of water, water rights, or electric energy or for the adjustment of water rights, as in his judgment are necessary and in the interests of the United States and the project.

Sec. 15. The Secretary is hereby authorized to perform any and all acts and to make such rules and regulations as may be necessary and proper for the purpose of carrying the provisions of this act into full force and effect.

Sec. 16. The provisions of previous acts of Congress not inconsistent with the provisions of this act shall remain in full force and effect.

Sec. 17. (a) The authority granted in sections 3 and 4 of this act for modification of existing repayment contracts or other forms of obligations to pay construction charges shall continue for 5 years from the date of this enactment in order to provide opportunity for negotiating and consummating said modifications and opportunity for enactment by the legislature of any State in which a project contract unit is located of any legislation which may be necessary to empower water users and organizations to execute and carry out the provisions of contracts entered into pursuant to the authority of this act.

(b) The authority of the Secretary under the act entitled "An act to authorize further relief to water users on United States and on Indian reclamation projects," approved May 31, 1939 (Public, No. 97, 76th Cong., 1st sess.), is hereby extended in connection with the construction charges due and payable, under any existing obligation to pay construction charges, for each of the years 1939 to 1943, inclusive, to the extent such charges are not covered by modification of said obligation under section 3 or 4 of this act.

Sec. 18. Nothing in this act shall be construed to amend the Boulder Canyon Project Act (45 Stat. 1057), as amended.

Sec. 19. This act may be cited as the "Reclamation Project Act of 1939."

With the following committee amendments:

Page 22, in line 10, after the word "proper", strike out the balance of line 10 down to and including the word "cooperatives", in line 12.

Page 22, in line 16, after the word "project", strike out the balance of line 16, all of lines 17, 18, 19, and the word "projects", in line 20.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the committee amendments.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, I ask recognition in support of the committee amendments.

THE REPAYMENT COMMISSION BILL

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, this bill, H. R. 6984, is the fruitage of several years' work by members of the Irrigation and Reclamation Committee. It grows out of an effort to find a better method of solving temporary project problems than by ordering blanket moratoria.

In the Seventy-fourth Congress a bill was passed to authorize the creation of a repayment commission. No appropriation was made, and the net effect of the legislation was to afford another moratorium, that year 50 percent for all projects, regardless of whether all needed it or not, and regardless of the degree of need on any given project.

In the Seventy-fifth Congress another bill was passed to create a repayment commission, with authority to visit projects and recommend temporary action to the Secretary of the Interior and to supplement that with a comprehensive plan for a general program of repayment adaptable to conditions on projects from year to year. As a member of the committee in that Congress I recall how the chairman and other members went before the Rules Committee to get consideration of the bill, provided the request for funds to finance the committee were reduced to $30,000. The rule was granted, the bill was passed, and the appropriation was made.

The repayment commission was created of outstanding men, headed by Dr. Charles Lory, of Colorado. They made the recommendations for temporary action last year, and the bill now before us is the result of their recommendations for a long-term reclamation repayment policy.

This bill represents the most constructive general reclamation legislation that has come before the Congress in many years. I fully believe that it will prove beneficial to the Government and to every reclamation project. It proposes, in brief, to fit yearly repayments to income.

I am not a member of the Irrigation Committee in this Congress, but because of the history of this legislation I have followed this bill with great interest. I know that the committee has given it extended consideration. I have attended several of their numerous hearings. I am aware of the care that members of the committee have taken to get the bill on the calendar and to secure a rule for its consideration. Their interest in having it brought up today by unanimous consent is commendable. They are determined that a piece of good legislation shall not die and the efforts of the committee and the Commission running back many months be lost.

The committee amendments offered include one to strike from the bill a section which personally I regarded as controversial. It was a section that proposed to give preference to public agencies over private corporations in bidding for the power that might be sold in connection with an irrigation development. It seemed to me the present law should not be changed on that point. I am told that considerable discussion followed mention of the matter at one of the hearings and that several sessions were given to consideration of the matter. Be that as it may, the section is eliminated by the committee's action, and the bill comes before us now with the controversial section eliminated, and with the unanimous support of the members of the committee on both sides of the aisle.

As nearly as can be foreseen this is good legislation. It is the result of extended consideration of irrigation matters by the House committee through several sessions. It is the result of a special study by a commission of outstanding men not otherwise connected with the Government. It is the result of careful technical study by the Bureau of Reclamation. And finally, it is the result of extended hearings by the House Committee on Irrigation in this Congress. I want to commend them for their action and urge unanimous support of the amendments and the bill.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Mr. Speaker, for the information of the Members of the House I insert the statement made in the hearing before the Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation when the present bill was before the committee for consideration, as follows:

The CHAIRMAN. Now, gentlemen, I want to say to the members of the committee and to the people assembled here, representing the Department, that I conceive this bill to be one of the most important pieces of legislation that has come before the committee affecting irrigation and reclamation in a very long time. It is just about as important, and, perhaps, more important than the original Reclamation Act. We are dealing here with the whole problem of reclamation, and we are revising the law. This bill has been in course of preparation for 3 or 4 months. Due to conditions that have obtained in this country, as a result of drought, depressed farm prices, and other factors, this committee and the Congress have been called on from time to time to provide some relief for people in reclamation districts where they are unable to meet construction charges.

Congress has provided some means, but there were no practicable uniform means to be found, because some reclamation projects were in good financial condition, and those that were in good condition were perfectly able to pay their construction charges, while others were unable to pay. Therefore, there was no way of so fitting the legislation as to work out the whole situation. That was recognized by the committee and by the Department, with the result that legislation was introduced and a bill was passed authorizing the creation of an impartial commission. There was a good deal of doubt and discussion about how that commission would be constituted—that is, whether the Department would have a predominant representation on it, or the water users. As a result of that, a "Repayment Commission" was constituted to go into the field and make a complete investigation of the conditions with a view to trying to devise and bring in a plan whereby some equitable and practicable formula could be worked out so that the repayments could be made on a sound and feasible basis.

That commission made a very careful and detailed investigation and submitted a report to the Congress, and as a result of that report legislation has been drafted to effectuate the recommendations of that commission. That plan is now before you. It has many provisions, and it is far-reaching in its effects. It affects the whole country. It affects every State in the Union and every community in the Union, because what it produces affects every State and every community, and because it, in turn, provides a market for supplies that are manufactured and produced in other parts of the country. Therefore, as I have said, this legislation is one of the most important bills dealing with reclamation that we have ever had before the Congress or before the Department for many years.

I earnestly commend the bill to your careful consideration, and I hope that in considering the provisions of the bill we will not let any jokers get by that will work to the detriment of the people on the projects or to the Bureau of Reclamation.

We have before us the Commissioner of Reclamation, Mr. Page, and his assistants, and, also, representatives of the National Reclamation Association and other people looking out for the interests of the water users. We also have before us special representatives from special districts.

With that statement, I will submit for the record a written statement prepared by me, and then we will proceed with the hearings.

The statement referred to is as follows:

STATEMENT OF CONGRESSMAN COMPTON I. WHITE, CHAIRMAN OF THE IRRIGATION AND RECLAMATION COMMITTEE, ON THE OPENING OF HEARINGS ON H. R. 6984, JUNE 15, 1939

As chairman of the Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation, it may be well for me to review briefly the circumstances and conditions that have led up to the introduction of H. R. 6984, which, in my opinion, offers the basis for a permanent plan for adjustment of the repayment problems of Federal reclamation projects.

Coming from a Western State and from a district that is vitally concerned with the reclamation program, I would like to have it thoroughly understood that the West expects to keep faith with the Federal Government; that it desires to see the Federal investment protected and wants to see legislation enacted that will make it possible for reclamation projects as a whole and individual water users to meet their obligations when due.

This committee has an important responsibility in connection with this situation and with the development and economic utilization of the great natural resources within the western third of the Nation.

Reclamation has never been a partisan issue. It was inaugurated as a national policy by the act of June 17, 1902, under the leadership of President Theodore Roosevelt, a Republican, and Representative Francis G. Newlands, later a distinguished Democratic Senator from Nevada. That the Federal Government has continued to recognize its responsibilities in connection with the water and land resources of the West is demonstrated by adherence to the reclamation laws of 1902.

Although that statute has been amended and the sphere of reclamation enlarged, the original principles have been maintained and no one can successfully challenge the benefits to the country as a whole that have resulted from that policy. Simultaneously with the inauguration of reclamation, the Federal Government adopted a more rigid conservation policy and has sought to maintain a trusteeship whereby the natural resources of the West would be developed for the benefit of all the people.

It may be noted that in the 11 States of the Mountain and Pacific groups in which 90 percent of reclamation activities are located, the Federal Government owns and controls more than 50 percent of the land area, together with vast mineral and power resources. Until recent years the bulk of funds provided for reclamation construction have come from the sale of public lands in the West and the disposition of other resources of that section.

While uninformed folks frequently suggest that reclamation brings irrigated land into competition with dry-land farms of other sections of the country, attention may be directed to the fact that the program has far broader significance. For instance, irrigation was practiced in the West long before the Federal reclamation policy was inaugurated and a large part of current activities are devoted to providing supplemental water for vast areas that had been brought into cultivation by individual effort or by private capital.

From Senate Document No. 36 (76th Cong., 1st sess.) I learn that of the ultimate acreage to be served by Federal reclamation projects under the current program approximately one-half will receive supplemental water. Consequently, the suggestion that reclamation is devoted solely to bringing new land into cultivation is not borne out by the facts.

Further, the development of hydroelectric power, where found economically feasible, is a vital factor in the reclamation program. It has been estimated that power revenues eventually will pay more than half the construction costs involved in the reclamation program. The Bureau of Reclamation has been entrusted with the construction of the most important power projects the Government has undertaken in the West. Every reclamation dam has flood control and conservation possibilities.

A word as to the so-called competitive phases of the reclamation picture. Statistics of the Department of Agriculture reveal that the products of more than 50 percent of the acreage of irrigated land in the West are fed to livestock in the immediate areas. Of the remainder the bulk is consumed locally or in the West and can be shipped eastward only when the produce of farms near the large consuming centers is not in season. Distance and high freight rates serve as an effective tariff barrier to competition.

The relatively small volume of products of reclamation projects that finds its way eastward is more than offset by the market that has been developed and stabilized for the products of the farms of the Midwest and South and the manufacturing centers of the country. A survey of incoming shipments to the Boise project area in my State in 1937 revealed that more than 300 carloads of foodstuffs were received from non-Western States as far east as Massachusetts and New York. A check of purchases by individual farmers of the Boise project shows that 75 percent of their income is expended for the purpose of purchasing eastern-manufactured articles and products.

As the Boise project is typical of Federal reclamation developments, it is representative of the market all projects afford for non-western products. It has been estimated that reclamation-project areas alone provide a $200,000,000 annual market for the products of the Midwest, South, and East. More than half of construction expenditures on reclamation projects find their way eastward.

Reclamation projects support approximately 200,000 persons on project farms and more than three times that number in cities and towns that have sprung up in the wake of the developments. In all a million persons in the 15 States in which projects are operating are dependent on the Federal development.

The West can and does take pride in the results of Federal reclamation. It has fulfilled its mission and met the expectation of its original and subsequent proponents despite many difficulties and conditions that could not have been foreseen.

Approximately 30 percent of the costs of reclamation projects completed and in operation had been repaid on July 1, 1938, and the record of repayments compares favorably with those of other Federal activities relating to internal improvements or designed to protect the national interests.

The West has given its unstinted support to the national river and harbor and flood-control programs in which the Federal Treasury has contributed more than $2,000,000,000 without any obligation to repay. For the American Merchant Marine, the Government up to June 30, 1936, had advanced $3,763,671,216, of which the contracted repayments were only a quarter of a billion dollars and less than half of that amount had actually been returned to the Treasury of the United States.

The demand for irrigated land in the West is greater today than ever. Thousands and thousands of farm families, through no fault of their own, have been forced to migrate from the drought areas of the Midwest and are seeking security for agricultural pursuits in the West. The Department of Agriculture in 1938 estimated that more than 50,000 families in less than 4 years had moved into seven far western States from the drought sections alone, and a later figure from the same source places the number of persons who have moved into the West from that area since 1930 at 400,000.

The West did not solicit these new arrivals. They came uninvited as folks have been wont to do when seeking to better themselves since the beginning of time. Nevertheless, they are there and more are constantly arriving. If all of the land that Federal projects will bring in within the next 10 years were available now, it would be inadequate to provide a 40-acre tract for each of these migratory farm families. As a result of the immigration problem, the natural growth of population in the West, and the recognition of the security that comes from irrigation, Federal reclamation must continue.

It is, therefore, important that existing laws be modernized to meet changing conditions over which the water user has no control. Although irrigation farmers have greater security in producing crops, "irrigation agriculture with its high and inelastic overhead is more seriously affected by low prices than is rainfall agriculture," according to a report to the Secretary of the Interior in 1934 by Mr. Fred E. Schmitt, editor of the Engineering News-Record, New York, and Mr. John W. Haw, Northern Pacific Railroad. Consequently, in years of economic stress water users have appealed to the Congress for relief from payment of construction costs that had been assumed in good faith and which, under normal conditions, could have been met without difficulty.

While the Congress since 1931 has been granting relief through extension of time for repayment of construction costs, it is recognized that this method of dealing with the problem was temporary and unsatisfactory. Many of us felt that the inflexibility of the repayment system as then and now in effect was disadvantageous both to the interests of the Government and the water user. Temporary measures for relief did not get to the roots of the problem.

In 1936 I offered a bill creating a Commission to make a study of the financial condition of the various projects and report to the Congress. The funds authorized were inadequate for a thorough job and nothing was done. In 1937 I patroned the act of August 21, 1937 (50 Stat. 737), under which a Commission of three outstanding western men was appointed by the Secretary of the Interior to make an investigation of conditions on reclamation and Indian irrigation projects and report "as to the best, most feasible and practicable, comprehensive plan for such water-right payments with due consideration" for the reclamation program and the ability of the water users or associations to meet charges "regularly and fully from year to year during periods of prosperity and good prices for agricultural products as well as during periods of decline in agricultural income and unsatisfactory conditions of agriculture."

The Commission held more than 70 hearings on reclamation projects in the Western States and made an exhaustive report which the Secretary of the Interior transmitted to the Congress on May 18, 1938 (H. Doc. 673), Seventy-fifth Congress, third session. It sought to present a more equitable and flexible permanent plan for repayment of construction costs and H. R. 6773 is a direct result of the findings of that Commission.

I shall not attempt to go into details of the pending bill. The Commissioner of the Bureau of Reclamation and others who have had much to do with preparing the draft will be available for interrogation and explanation. However, briefly, the major objectives of the measure are—

1. Authority for the Secretary of the Interior to modify existing contracts under an equitable and flexible plan for sliding-scale payment of construction charges in accordance with variations in crop returns.
2. Arrangements for payments at times when crop receipts are available.
3. Classification or reclassification of lands on existing projects.

4. Special consideration for projects with unusual problems affecting their ability to repay.

5. Methods for determining feasibility of proposed new projects for allocation of costs to irrigation, electric power, flood control, or other purposes, and for their development.

It should be noted that the bill retains the principle of a 40-year repayment period in effect since the Adjustment Act of 1926, except for those projects that are now on the so-called crop-repayment plan of the Fact Finders Act of 1924. No authority is given for any write-off of construction charges or change of the amount due the Government. The Congress is to retain jurisdiction over the outstanding indebtedness.

There may be sections of the draft which the committee will find it desirable to amend, but on the whole I believe the bill offers a substantial step toward providing a permanent plan for adjustment of repayment problems without the difficulties that have heretofore been encountered. The bill makes no provision for Indian reclamation projects because existing acts are deemed to contain adequate authority for comprehensive adjustment of repayment problems on Indian projects.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the committee amendments.

The committee amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

ACQUISITION OF ADDITIONAL LANDS FOR NATIONAL MILITARY PARKS, NATIONAL HISTORICAL PARKS, NATIONAL BATTLEFIELD PARKS, AND BATTLEFIELD SITES

Mr. TARVER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to return to Calendar No. 293, the bill H. R. 4938.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman from Georgia advise us what the status of this bill is now?

Mr. TARVER. The objection made awhile ago has been withdrawn, and I will offer an amendment regarding which I have conferred with your colleagues on that side of the aisle as well as on this side, and I understand it is satisfactory to the gentlemen on both sides of the aisle.

Mr. WOLCOTT. The gentleman has talked to the gentleman who objected and he has withdrawn his objection?

Mr. TARVER. That is right.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to acquire on behalf of the United States, by purchase when purchasable at prices deemed by him reasonable, or by condemnation under the provisions of the act of August 1, 1888, such tracts of land contiguous to, or within the boundaries of, any of the national military parks, national historical parks, national battlefield parks, or battlefield sites administered by the National Park Service of the Department of the Interior as he may determine to be necessary or desirable for addition to such areas, the title and evidence of title to such lands to be satisfactory to the said Secretary. When title to any such lands shall have vested in the United States, they shall be added to and become parts of the respective national military parks, national historical parks, national battlefield parks, and battlefield sites for which they are acquired, and shall be subject to all laws and regulations applicable thereto.

SEC. 2. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated to carry out the purposes of this act such sums as the Congress may from time to time determine.

With the following committee amendment:

On page 2, after line 13, insert the following:

"SEC. 3. That the Secretary of the Interior, in his discretion, is hereby authorized to convey without consideration, but under such terms and conditions as he may deem advisable, to the New Salem School District, of Dade County, Ga., not to exceed 10 acres of land located within lot No. 114, eleventh district, fourth section of Dade County, Ga., now a part of the Chickamauga-Chatanooga National Military Park."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

Mr. TARVER. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment to the pending bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. TARVER: Strike out all of section 1 and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"That section 5 of the act approved June 26, 1935, entitled 'An act to create a national memorial military park at and in the vicinity of Kennesaw Mountain in the State of Georgia, and for other purposes', be, and the same is hereby, amended by striking the period at the end thereof and inserting a colon and the following proviso: 'Provided, That if, after the expenditure of the funds herein authorized, the Secretary of the Interior shall determine that the acquisition of additional lands is necessary in order to perfect the symmetry of the park area or to acquire locations of historic interest adjacent to the park area already acquired upon which fortifications or entrenchments are located which are likely to deteriorate or be destroyed under private ownership, he is authorized to acquire additional lands for such purposes.'"

Amend the caption by striking the language therein contained and insert in lieu thereof the following: "To amend the act approved June 26, 1935, entitled 'An act to create a national memorial military park at and in the vicinity of Kennesaw Mountain in the State of Georgia and for other purposes.'"

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PLACER MINING CLAIMS FOR DEPOSITS OF PHOSPHATE, ETC.

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to return to Calendar No. 301, H. R. 6560, relating to placer mining claims for deposits of phosphate, sodium, potassium, oil, oil shale, or gas on the public domain.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Colorado?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. HORTON. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw the objection I made.

There being no objection the Clerk read the bill as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That after the date of approval of this act no placer mining claims for deposits of phosphate, sodium, potassium, oil, oil shale, or gas on the public domain shall be opened to relocation.

SEC. 2. The holder of any mining claim described in section 1 hereof shall, within 180 days after the date of approval of this act, file in the United States land office for the district in which the deposit claimed is located, or in the General Land Office if there be no land office for the district, a statement, under oath, of the existence of such claim, which shall contain the name and address of the claimant or claimants, the time and place of the original location or relocation, and such other relevant information as shall be prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior; and upon failure to file such affidavit, such claim shall become null and void and all rights and interests thereunder shall cease and terminate.

SEC. 3. All rights and interests of claimants in and to any mining claim described in section 1 hereof in maintenance of which labor or improvements as required by section 2324 of the Revised Statutes, as amended, shall not have been performed or made during the assessment year ending July 1, 1940, or during any assessment year thereafter, shall cease and terminate.

SEC. 4. The holder of any mining claim described in section 1 hereof shall within 90 days after the expiration of the assessment year ending July 1, 1940, and within 90 days after the expiration of every subsequent assessment year, file in the United States land office for the district in which the deposit claimed is located, or in the General Land Office if there be no land office for the district, a statement, under oath, in such form as shall be prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior as to the assessment work done or improvements made during the preceding assessment year, and upon failure to file such statement such claim shall become null and void and all rights and interests thereunder shall cease and terminate.

SEC. 5. Notwithstanding the filing of any statement required by this act, the validity or existence of the claim to which such statement relates shall remain open to inquiry and determination upon such procedure as may be prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior, or in any other lawful proceeding.

SEC. 6. The failure to file any statement required by this act or to perform or make the annual assessment labor or improvements upon any claim described in section 1 hereof shall be conclusive evidence that such claim has been abandoned and that all rights and interests thereunder have ceased and terminated.

SEC. 7. If any provision of this act or the application thereof to any person or circumstances is held invalid, the remainder of the act and the application of such provision to other persons or circumstances shall not be affected thereby.

SEC. 8. The provisions of this act shall apply only in continental United States, excluding Alaska.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

REPATRIATION OF CERTAIN NATIVE-BORN UNITED STATES WOMEN

Mr. DICKSTEIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to return to Calendar No. 288, H. R. 4185, to repatriate native-born women residents of the United States who have heretofore lost their citizenship by marriage to an alien.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my objection and ask unanimous consent that the bill may go over without prejudice.

Mr. DICKSTEIN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will not the gentleman withdraw his request? This bill only alleviates discriminations against American-born women who lost their citizenship under the Cable Act. Under the present law a native-born American woman who marries a foreigner, if living abroad, can come back here and repatriate herself. There are women in this country, however, who never left the country but who married aliens. By that act these women lost their citizenship. The aliens afterward become American citizens, but the women, their wives, though born in this country and never having left the country, still are considered as aliens. This bill is designed simply to remove this unjust discrimination, and I hope the gentleman will withdraw his objection.

Mr. CRAWFORD. As I understand, there is no other objection than to permit these American-born women to recover their American citizenship?

Mr. DICKSTEIN. None at all. This bill deals entirely with American-born women who have lived here all their lives; who have never been out of the country. The moment an American woman marries an alien she automatically loses her American citizenship. Notwithstanding the fact that the husband afterward becomes an American citizen by naturalization, his wife does not thereby regain her American citizenship.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Does it apply in any case where a foreign-born person is still an alien and not a citizen of the United States?

Mr. DICKSTEIN. No; it does not. It applies only as I have indicated.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my request that the bill go over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the act entitled "An act to repatriate native-born women who have heretofore lost their citizenship by marriage to an alien, and for other purposes", approved June 25, 1936 (U. S. C., 1934 ed., Supp. IV, title 8, sec. 9a), is amended by inserting after "terminated" the following: "or who has resided continuously in the United States since the date of such marriage."

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PIPE-LINE BRIDGE ACROSS MISSOURI RIVER

Mr. HOLMES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to return to Calendar No. 318, H. R. 6578, granting the consent of Congress to Northern Natural Gas Co. of Delaware to construct, maintain, and operate a pipe-line bridge across the Missouri River.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the consent of Congress is hereby granted to Northern Natural Gas Co. of Delaware, its successors and assigns, to construct, maintain, and operate a pipe-line bridge and approaches thereto across the Missouri River from a point in Dakota County in the State of Nebraska to a point in Woodbury County in the State of Iowa, at a point suitable to the interests of navigation: Provided, That the work shall not be commenced until the plans therefor have been submitted to and approved by the Chief of Engineers, United States Army, and by the Secretary of War: Provided further, That in approving the plans for said pipe-line bridge, such conditions and stipulations may be imposed as the Chief of Engineers and the Secretary of War may deem necessary to protect the present and future interests of the United States.

SEC. 2. The right to sell, assign, transfer, and mortgage all the rights, powers, and privileges conferred by this act is hereby granted to Northern Natural Gas Co. of Delaware, its successors and assigns, and any corporation to which such rights, powers, and privileges may be sold, assigned, or transferred, or which shall acquire the same by mortgage foreclosure or otherwise, is fully authorized to exercise the same as fully as though conferred herein directly upon such corporation.

SEC. 3. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to return to Calendar No. 275.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

Mr. HOOK. Mr. Speaker, I object.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. DISNEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein an article on the neutrality bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

PRIVATE CALENDER

ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY OF SETTLEMENT OF GALLIPOLIS, OHIO

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to return to Calendar No. 289, House Joint Resolution 272, to provide for the observance and celebration of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the settlement of the city of Gallipolis, Ohio.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the title of the joint resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the joint resolution?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the joint resolution, as follows:

Whereas the settlement of the Northwest Territory which commenced at Marietta, Ohio, in 1788 started the greatest movement of pioneer settlers in the history of the world; and

Whereas in 1790 the third settlement in that great program of development was made at Gallipolis, Ohio; and

Whereas the settlement of Gallipolis was made by the famous "French five hundred", who with their families came direct from their native France; and

Whereas by reason of the inestimable services rendered the American Colonies by the French Nation and thousands of their patriotic citizens led by General Lafayette there has been established an indissoluble bond of friendship between the French Nation and the United States; and

Whereas there is no more fitting time or place to again prove this friendship than at Gallipolis, Ohio, on the occasion of its celebration of its sesquicentennial in 1940; and

Whereas the citizens of Gallipolis, a small city of 7,000 population, have planned and will carry out at great personal sacrifice of time, energy, and wealth a season of pageantry, patriotic demonstrations, and cultural entertainments that will rank with the best that can be produced anywhere, regardless of expense: Therefore be it

Resolved, etc., That there is hereby established a commission to be known as the Gallipolis Sesquicentennial Commission and composed of seven members as follows: The common pleas judge of Gallia County, the probate judge of Gallia County, the chairman of the board of county commissioners of Gallia County, the municipal judge of the city of Gallipolis, the city manager of the city of Gallipolis, the postmaster of the city of Gallipolis, and the president of the chamber of commerce.

SEC. 2. These commissioners shall serve without compensation and shall select a chairman from among their number. It shall be the duty of the commission to cooperate with all authorized agencies in charge of the sesquicentennial celebration to be held in the city of Gallipolis during the year of 1940 and to expend any appropriation made herein for the promotion of said celebration and in commemoration of heroic deeds of the noble Frenchmen and their families who settled Gallipolis under such difficult circumstances, all the better to strengthen the bonds of friendship that have existed between the French Nation and the United States of America.

SEC. 3. There is authorized to be appropriated the sum of $15,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to carry out the purpose of this resolution.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. COSTELLO: On page 3, line 8, after the word "of", strike out "$15,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$10,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

NATURALIZATION OF CERTAIN SPOUSES OF CITIZENS OF THE UNITED STATES

Mr. SPARKMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to return to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 5401) to provide for the naturalization of certain alien spouses of citizens of the United States, and to validate the naturalization of certain persons; No. 190 on the calendar.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. SPARKMAN]? There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That any alien who, prior to 12 o'clock noon, eastern standard time, May 24, 1934, and after September 21, 1922, married a citizen of the United States, or any alien who was married prior to 12 o'clock noon, eastern standard time, May 24, 1934, to a spouse who was naturalized during such period and during the existence of the marital relation may, if eligible to naturalization, be naturalized upon full and complete compliance with all requirements of the naturalization laws, with the following exceptions:

(a) No declaration of intention shall be required;

(b) In lieu of the 5-year period of residence within the United States, and the 6 months' period of residence in the county where the petitioner resided at the time of filing the petition, the petitioner shall have resided continuously in the United States, Hawaii, Alaska, or Puerto Rico for at least 1 year immediately preceding the filing of the petition.

SEC. 2. Any alien who, after 12 o'clock noon, eastern standard time, May 24, 1934, has married or shall hereafter marry a citizen of the United States, or any alien whose husband or wife was naturalized after such date and during the existence of the marital relation or shall hereafter be so naturalized may, if eligible to naturalization, be naturalized upon full and complete compliance with all requirements of the naturalization laws, with the following exceptions:

(a) No declaration of intention shall be required;

(b) In lieu of the 5-year period of residence within the United States, and the 6 months' period of residence in the county where the petitioner resided at the time of filing the petition, the petitioner shall have resided continuously in the United States, Hawaii, Alaska, or Puerto Rico for at least 3 years immediately preceding the filing of the petition.

SEC. 3. The naturalization of any woman since 12 o'clock noon, eastern standard time, May 24, 1934, by any naturalization court of competent jurisdiction, upon proof of marriage to a citizen or the naturalization of her husband and proof of 1 year's residence in the United States is hereby validated only so far as relates to the period of residence required to be proved by such person under the naturalization laws.

SEC. 4. The naturalization of any male person after 12 o'clock noon, eastern standard time, May 24, 1934, by any naturalization court of competent jurisdiction, upon proof of marriage to a citizen of the United States after September 21, 1922, and prior to 12 o'clock noon, eastern standard time, May 24, 1934, or the naturalization during such period of his wife, and upon proof of 3 years' residence in the United States, is hereby validated only so far as relates to the period of residence required to be proved by such person under the naturalization laws and the omission by such person to make a declaration of intention.

SEC. 5. The act of September 22, 1922 (42 Stat. 1021), as amended, and the act of May 24, 1934 (48 Stat. 926), are amended from and after the effective date of this act to the extent provided in this act and not otherwise.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time and passed and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

LOUISIANA-VICKSBURG BRIDGE COMMISSION

Mr. HOLMES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to return to No. 86 on the Consent Calendar.

Mr. BARDEN. Mr. Speaker, I object.

AUTHORIZING SECRETARY OF INTERIOR TO CONVEY CERTAIN PROPERTY TO WASHINGTON COUNTY, UTAH

Mr. MURDOCK of Utah. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to return to Calendar No. 206, and I also ask unanimous consent to vacate the proceedings whereby the bill (H. R. 2184) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to convey certain property to Washington County, Utah, and for other purposes, was engrossed, read the third time, and passed and that the bill be restored to the calendar.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Utah?

Mr. CHURCH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, what is the number on the calendar?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Number 206.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I may say this is a rather unusual procedure, after the bill has been passed.

Mr. MURDOCK of Utah. Mr. Speaker, it so happens I could not be here when that bill came up for consideration. I have the consent of the author in making the request I did and I shall ask that it be passed over without prejudice. It can then be taken up again.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Utah [Mr. MURDOCK]?

There was no objection.

LOUISIANA-VICKSBURG BRIDGE COMMISSION

Mr. HOLMES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to return to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 3224) creating the Louisiana-Vicksburg Bridge Commission; defining the authority, power, and duties of said Commission; and authorizing said Commission and its successors and assigns to purchase, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Mississippi River at or near Delta Point, La., and Vicksburg, Miss., No. 86 on the calendar.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. HOLMES]?

Mr. CHURCH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I understand the gentleman has four or five amendments which he is going to offer?

Mr. HOLMES. I have six clarifying amendments.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. HOLMES]?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in order to facilitate interstate commerce, improve the postal service, and provide for military and other purposes, the Louisiana-Vicksburg Bridge Commission (hereinafter created, and hereinafter referred to as the "Commission") and its successors and assigns be, and is hereby, authorized to acquire by purchase or otherwise, from its owners, and to maintain and operate a bridge and approaches thereto across the Mississippi River at or near the cities of Delta Point, La., and Vicksburg, Miss., subject to the conditions and limitations contained in this act. For like purposes said Commission and its successors and assigns are hereby authorized to acquire, maintain, and operate all or any ferries across the Mississippi River within 15 miles of said bridge, subject to the conditions and limitations contained in this act.

SEC. 2. There is hereby conferred upon the Commission and its successors and assigns the right and power to acquire, condemn, occupy, possess, and use said bridge and such real estate and other property in the State of Louisiana and the State of Mississippi as may be needed for the acquisition and maintenance of such bridge and its approaches, and, if by condemnation, upon making just compensation therefor, to be ascertained and paid according to the laws of the State in which such real estate or property is located, and the proceedings therefor shall be the same as in the condemnation of private property for public purposes in said States, respectively.

SEC. 3. The Commission and its successors and assigns are hereby authorized to fix and charge tolls for transit over such bridge and such ferry or ferries in accordance with the provisions of this act.

SEC. 4. The Commission and its successors and assigns are hereby authorized to provide for the payment of the cost of the bridge and its approaches (including any approach highways which, in the judgment of the Commission, it is necessary or advisable to construct or cause to be constructed to provide suitable and adequate connection with existing improved highways) and the ferry or ferries and the necessary land, easements, and appurtenances thereto by an issue or issues of negotiable bonds of the Commission, bearing interest at not more than 6 percent per annum, the principal and interest of which bonds and any premium to be paid for retirement thereof before maturity shall be payable solely from the sinking fund provided in accordance with this act. Such bonds may be registrable as to principal alone or both principal and interest, shall be in such form not inconsistent with this act, shall mature at such time or times not exceeding 25 years from their respective dates, shall be in such denominations, shall be executed in such manner, and shall be payable in such medium and at such place or places as the Commission may determine. The Commission may repurchase and may reserve the right to redeem all or any of said bonds before maturity in such manner and at such price or prices, not exceeding 105 and accrued interest, as may be fixed by the Commission prior to the issuance of the bonds. The Commission, when it deems it to the best interest of the Commission, may issue refunding bonds to repurchase and redeem any outstanding bonds, before the maturity thereof, which it may issue: Provided, That the refunding bonds shall mature at such time or times, not exceeding 30 years from date of approval of this act, as the Commission may determine. The Commission may enter into an agreement with any bond or trust company in the United States as trustee having the power to make such agreement, setting forth the duties of the Commission in respect of the maintenance, operation, repair, and insurance of the bridge and/or the ferry or ferries, the conservation and application of all funds, the safeguarding of money on hand or on deposit, and the rights and remedies of said trustee and the holders of the bonds, restricting the individual right of action of the bondholders as is customary in trust agreements respecting bonds of corporations. Such trust agreement may contain such provisions for protecting and enforcing the rights and remedies of the trustee and the bondholders as may be reasonable and proper and not inconsistent with the law and also provisions for approval by the original purchasers of the bonds of the employment of consulting engineers and of the security for said bonds and by any bank or trust company in which the proceeds of bonds or of bridge or ferry tolls or other moneys of the Commission shall be deposited.

The bridge acquired under the authority of this act shall be deemed to be an instrumentality for interstate commerce, the postal service, and military and other purposes authorized by the Government of the United States, and said bridge and ferry or ferries and the bonds issued in connection therewith and the income derived therefrom shall be exempt from all Federal, State, municipal, and local taxation. Said bonds shall be sold in such manner and at such time or times and at such price as the Commission may determine, but no such sale shall be made at a price so low as to require the payment of more than 6 percent interest on the money received therefor, computed with relation to the absolute maturity of the bonds in accordance with standard tables of bond values, and the face amount thereof shall be so calculated as to produce, at the price of their sale, the cost of the bridge and its approaches and the land, easements, and appurtenances used in connection therewith, and, in the event the ferry or ferries are to be acquired, also the cost of such ferry or ferries and the lands, easements, and appurtenances used in connection therewith. The cost of the bridge and approaches and approach highways, and ferry or ferries, shall be deemed to include all engineering, legal, architectural, traffic-surveying, and other expenses incident to the acquisition of the bridge or the acquisition of the ferry or ferries, and the acquisition of the necessary property, and incident to the financing thereof. If the proceeds of the bonds issued shall exceed the cost as finally determined, the excess shall be placed in the sinking fund hereinafter provided. Prior to the preparation of definitive bonds the Commission may, under like restrictions, issue temporary bonds or interim certificates, with or without coupons of any denomination whatsoever, exchangeable for definitive bonds when such bonds that have been executed are available for delivery.

Sec. 5. In fixing the rates of toll to be charged for the use of such bridge the same shall be so adjusted as to provide a fund sufficient to pay for the reasonable cost of maintaining, repairing, and operating the bridge and its approaches under economical management, and to provide a sinking fund sufficient to pay the principal and interest of such bonds as the same shall fall due and the redemption or repurchase price of all or any thereof redeemed or repurchased before maturity as herein provided. All tolls and other revenues from said bridge are hereby pledged to such uses and to the application thereof as hereinafter in this section required. After payment or provision for payment therefrom of all such cost of maintaining, repairing, and operating, and the reservation of an amount of money estimated to be sufficient for the same purpose during an ensuing period of not more than 6 months, the remainder of tolls collected shall be placed in the sinking fund, at intervals to be determined by the Commission prior to the issuance of the bonds. An accurate record of the cost of the bridge and its approaches; the expenditures for maintaining, repairing, and operating the same; and of the daily tolls collected shall be kept and shall be available for the information of all persons interested. The Commission shall classify in a reasonable way all traffic over the bridge, so that the tolls shall be so fixed and adjusted by it as to be uniform in the application thereof to all traffic falling within any such reasonable class, regardless of the status or character of any person, firm, or corporation participating in such traffic, and shall prevent all use of such bridge for traffic except upon payment of the tolls so fixed and adjusted. No tolls shall be charged officials and employees of the Commission or the Government of the United States or any State, county, or municipality in the United States while in the discharge of their duties, or municipal police or fire departments when engaged in the proper work of any such department.

Sec. 6. Nothing herein contained shall require the Commission or its successors to maintain or operate any ferry or ferries purchased hereunder, but in the discretion of the Commission or its successors any ferry or ferries so purchased, with the appurtenances and property thereto connected and belonging, may be sold or otherwise disposed of or may be abandoned and/or dismantled whenever in the judgment of the Commission or its successors it may seem expedient so to do. The Commission and its successors may fix such rates of toll for the use of such ferry or ferries as it may deem proper, subject to the same conditions as are hereinabove required as to tolls for traffic over the bridge. All tolls collected for the use of the ferry or ferries and the proceeds of any sale or disposition of any ferry or ferries shall be used, so far as may be necessary, to pay the cost of maintaining, repairing, and operating the same, and any residue thereof shall be paid into the sinking fund hereinabove provided for bonds. An accurate record of the cost of purchasing the ferry or ferries, the expenditures for maintaining, repairing, and operating the same, and of the daily tolls collected shall be kept and shall be available for the information of all persons interested.
